D.C. Gives Up Tax Solution Until 1941, Studies Yield

Commissioners Wait Income Returns; Will Submit Program To Next Congress

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Solution of the District revenue problem will be postponed at least another year, it appeared yesterday as the District Commissioners said a revised revenue program will be drafted for submission to Congress at the opening of the next session.

The question of whether the Commissioners will need to boost the tax on personal and real property above the present $1.75 rate was still unanswered, but District officials indicated that even this may not be found necessary as the anticipated fiscal deficit will be largely a bookkeeping shortage caused by a split in income tax collections.

Income Returns Awaited

The Commissioners said no decisions will be reached until after the returns on the new income tax are analyzed. These are due by April 15.

Subsequently, it may be found advisable to recommend an increase in the income tax rates, officials said, but there will not be time to formulate a revised revenue program and push it through Congress this session.

"Whether or not an increase in the real estate and tangible personal property taxes will be necessary," the Commissioners' statement said, "depends on the revenues produced by the present income tax law and the appropriations to be made by Congress.

Amendment Blamed

"It is proposed to analyze the forthcoming income tax returns and to formulate a revised tax program for submission to Congress on the first day of its next session, if such action is found to be necessary."

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan still insisted that his previous forecasts of a deficit of $1,100,000 this year and $1,800,000 next year, on the basis of Budget Bureau estimates, were correct, but he explained that they are caused entirely by the adoption by Congress of an amendment to the income tax law.

This amendment, recommended by the Commissioners, permits payment of half the income tax in April and half in October. As the fiscal year ends June 30, the tax collections are consequently scattered over two years.

May Avoid Realty Hike

Had the entire income tax payments been collected this year, the District would have ended the current fiscal year with a surplus of $500,000 instead of a $1,100,000 deficit. Were the income tax payable on the 1940 calendar year income all collectible in the next fiscal year, the District would have a small surplus instead of a $1,800,000 deficit.

As Chairman Millard Caldwell of the House subcommittee on District appropriations has indicated that the 1941 appropriations have been cut approximately $1,000,000 under Budget Bureau estimates, the Commissioners' fiscal problem becomes relatively simpler.

Revision Foreseen

The District has authority to obtain advances from the United States Treasury for the next two years in anticipation of the autumn income tax collections. Consequently, unless income tax returns fall far below the $3,200,000 estimate, officials believe that an increase in the realty tax can be avoided despite a temporarily unbalanced budget for 1941.

The Commissioners in their statement pointed out that Congress has twice rejected the combination sales-income tax program and thus "has clearly indicated a preference

Wallace Backs Jones Farm Credit Bill

Says Measure's Cut in Interest Rate Is 'Highly Desirable'

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace yesterday told the House Agriculture Committee the Jones farm credit bill would bring "definite benefits" to American agriculture. His statement came as the first official indication that the Agriculture Department is backing the controversial measure.

Wallace qualified his indorsement of the bill with a statement that the bill's prohibition of deficiency judgments against land bank borrowers "causes me some concern."

The committee "might well consider" making a borrower personally liable for any interest on a land bank mortgage which fell due while he was in possession of a farm, the Secretary suggested.

Wallace also proposed a margin of 1¼ or 1½ per cent between farm loan interest rates and the price paid by the Farm Credit Administration for money. The Jones bill fixes land bank and commissioner loan interest rates at 3 per cent and assumes that FCA can borrow at 2 per cent, leaving a 1 per cent spread

$8,700,000 Melon Split By U. S. Steel

By the Associated Press

New York, March 26.—Directors of the United States Steel Corporation took Wall Street completely by surprise today by cutting an $8,700,000 dividend melon for its common stockholders.

Not only was it the first time anything had been ordered paid to the common shareholders in more than two years, but it was the first time in 23 years that the directors of the big steel concern had announced a dividend at any time other than at a regular quarterly meeting. The dividend is $1 per share.

Bandit Seized By Unarmed Capitol Officer

A holdup suspect was chased and captured yesterday afternoon a few minutes after a liquor store near Logan Circle was held up and robbed of $53.

The man was caught snuggled in the corner of the boiler room of the Eddystone apartments, 1301 Vermont avenue northwest, by an unarmed Capitol policeman, George A. DeCottes, 27, of 1327 Vermont avenue northwest, who had just gone off duty.

Scores of onlookers swarmed outside the apartment building as the capture was made shortly after William Silverstein, clerk at the liquor store, 1345 Fourteenth street northwest, phoned police that he had been robbed.

Faced Automatic

Nearly two dozen police were on the scene within a few minutes.

"Don't shoot—you can have all the money here!" was what Silverstein said he cried when he was confronted with a "big, black, shiny automatic."

Silverstein said he and his colored assistant, James Perry, 24, of 1108 Sixth street northwest, gave the man $53.85, the entire contents of the cash register.

"Make sure you give me all the money!" the bandit threatened, according to Silverstein, who said the automatic was flashed in his face after he had sold the man a pint of liquor and was just about to give him change for the dollar.

Cab Stops for Light

Silverstein said his hands were still up in the air when a friend, Harry Lassover, of 1701 Sixteenth street northwest, entered the store.

"I've been robbed, Harry," the victim shouted.

Lassover said he then rushed out of the store to see the bandit jump into a taxicab. When the cab stopped for a red light at Logan Circle, Lassover said he leaped aboard and two passengers dashed through the opposite door.

The cab driver, Edmund Di Carlo, 27, of 1237 North Capitol street, corroborated this part of the story when questioned at the Second Precinct station. Di Carlo said the two occupants of his cab had not aroused his suspicions as he thought one had simply gone into the store to pur-

Trial Ordered, A. F. L. to Fight Trust Action

Will Seek Exemption By Supreme Court 'If Necessary'

By John Chabot Smith
Post Staff Writer

The fight for exemption of labor unions from the Sherman Anti-trust Act will be carried to the United States Supreme Court by the American Federation of Labor, "if necessary," it was learned yesterday.

This development came after Justice Peyton Gordon, of the District Court, sustained an indictment against a local A. F. L. teamster union and its officials, charged with conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Defense attorneys said the defendants would plead not guilty and stand trial, carrying the issue to the Supreme Court, if necessary. Justice Gordon gave the defendants 20 days in which to plead.

No Appeal Permitted

The indictment arose out of a jurisdictional dispute last year between two A. F. L. locals, which tied up construction on several Government and private projects here for several months. It was the first time the Sherman Act had been invoked in jurisdictional disputes, and the decision constituted an important victory for the Justice Department in its antitrust drive against the construction industry.

A demurrer to the indictment based on exemption given labor unions by the Clayton Act was overruled by Justice Gordon, and a motion to quash the accusation was denied.

No appeal is permitted from the decision, under a Federal statute of 1924 which prohibited appeals from "interlocutory" judgments. A ruling which dismisses a demurrer to an indictment is an interlocutory judgment; but had the demurrer been upheld and the indictment dismissed, the decision would have

Blast Rips Destroyer, 6 Men Hurt

Sailor Missing; Neutrality Patrol Vessel Damaged In Newport Harbor

By the Associated Press

Newport, R. I., March 26.—An explosion in an after deckhouse of the U. S. Navy's neutrality destroyer King today left one sailor missing — apparently blown overboard—and six others burned, one critically.

Capt. William S. Farber, commander of the neutrality patrol unit to which King was assigned, said the blast appeared to have been caused by some form of gas, which ignited in an undetermined manner.

The King was at a destroyer mooring in the upper harbor, a half mile off the city's south end, when the blast occurred shortly after 4 p. m. (E. S. T.) with a roar that was heard throughout downtown Newport.

Naval sources said that Richard Carl Oehlert, of Denver, Colo., fireman first class, was missing and that he probably had been thrown over the ship's side by the force of the explosion.

Farber, in discussing the probable cause of the mishap, said destroyers carry small tanks of oxygen, and that it was possible some were stored in the deckhouse, which was used as a storeroom for spare chemicals and other materials.

Naval Board Investigation

While the official cause of the blast awaited findings of a Naval board of inquiry yet to be appointed, Farber said the "terrific force" of the explosion demolished the forward bulkhead of the deckhouse.

So far as was known, none of the injured was in the house at the time of the blast. It was believed they were walking on deck nearby and that tongues of flame leaping through the crushed bulkhead burned them.

The house, although of metal construction, was not armor plated.

The King, in command of Lieut. Comdr. E. G. Berthold, carried about 100 men. After the injured had been removed, a doctor examined every other man aboard ship.

The injured, taken to the Naval Hospital at the service's training station here, were listed as:

Charles E. McCoy, machinist's mate first class, first degree powder burns to his lower body, shock and punctured eardrums, condition critical.

G. E. Hagge, fireman first class, multiple first degree burns to ears, neck and chest, and shock.

Depth Bomb Blamed

O. F. Fletcher, torpedo machinist first class, first degree burns to face, punctured eardrums.

J. H. Cole, fireman first class, slight burns and traumatic deafness.

R. E. Crow, fireman first class, slight burns and traumatic deafness.

The Navy's policy of secrecy led to reports that a depth bomb or an oxygen tank had exploded on the King. The blast was located in the after-deck house by men of the destroyer's crew, who brought the injured ashore.

Franco-Soviet Break Reported; Reynaud Pledges Total War

'Beat the Enemy' Is Cabinet's Only Goal, Premier Tells the Nation

By the Associated Press

Paris, March 26.—Premier Reynaud in a fighting speech today presented his cabinet to the nation as purely a "war government" with but one goal: "Beat the enemy."

"It is to make war and make it in every field," the 61-year-old premier said in a radio talk, his first since taking over the government from Edouard Daladier last week.

He emphasized that France today after seven months of war against Germany was "neither invaded, surprised nor uncovered."

Again and again the slight but vigorous premier reiterated that his government, which has decided to remain in power despite the one-vote majority it gained in its first parliamentary presentation, had one motive and one motive alone—"to fight the war."

Hoped for Unanimous Support

Reynaud said his inner "war cabinet" of nine members, all heads of ministries directly responsible for national defense, had been set up to push France and her British allies to victory, come what may.

He said that in forming his government he had hoped to get unanimous support from all parties. At least, he asserted, the rapid formation of the cabinet robbed Adolf Hitler of the advantage a prolonged governmental crisis might have given him.

"M. Hitler's opportunity would have come if he had seen emerge from the series of ministerial crises in France a weak government cut off from the masses of the nation and incapable of leading the country," Reynaud declared. "But that danger has been avoided."

Reynaud said he now was concentrating on "results" and that he believed these results would bring him wider support.

'Duty is Clear'

"The government's duty is clear," he declared emphatically. "It is to make war and make it in every field.

"The war is here and with it the hardest of sacrifice," he said. "It is a hard war but we will win."

Before victory comes, he asserted, France's diplomatic successes would depend on the armed might she has to back up her position. He stressed the immense tasks the country is facing in building new armaments and freeing the people for wartime duties.

This means that every man and woman must be in his or her place, he explained, adding that the government intends to see that this is accomplished.

Naming Hitler directly, Reynaud said the German Fuehrer has "put everything into motion" to menace the economic life of the Balkan states.

Reynaud's declaration of French determination to prevent a German hegemony in the Balkan countries was viewed as particularly significant. His government, it was recalled, came into power as a result of dissatisfaction over Finland's forced peace with Soviet Russia.

Canada Vote Puts Liberals Well Ahead

Landslide Upholds Mackenzie King's Conduct of War

Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, March 26.—The Liberal government of Premier Mackenzie King has been returned to office by an overwhelming majority in today's general election in Canada.

At 11 o'clock tonight all indications are that the MacKenzie King government has won the most sweeping victory ever received in Canada, surpassing even its record in 1935.

On actual returns, the Liberals are now definitely victorious in 150 constituencies, the National Government carrying 28, the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation 2, other parties 8, one election was deferred and 56 doubtful.

There are 245 seats in the Commons.

There is a possibility, of course, that some of these results may be modified by the soldier vote, which will not be known before mid-April.

Rebels Crushed In Sao Paulo, Brazil Reports

Rio de Janeiro, March 26 (AP).—The government announced tonight that discovery of a revolutionary plot against the ruling powers in Sao Paulo state had resulted in the arrest of "certain elements belonging to a party formerly in control" there.

The announcement was made in a communique which followed suspension of the Sao Paulo newspaper, O Estado de Sao Paulo. Several of the newspaper's editors were arrested.

The communique asserted investigations uncovered one cache of 45 machine guns and another containing 11 weapons.

Tactless Boast

By the Associated Press

Paris (Wednesday), March 27. Relations between Russia and France appeared early today to have reached the breaking point, with semiofficial dispatches from Moscow stating that the Soviet ambassador to France, Jakob Surits, had been "freed from his functions as Soviet ambassador in France."

The dispatches said the French government had declared his presence in Paris no longer was desirable.

French officials refused to confirm or deny immediately that the government had formally requested Moscow to recall Surits, who has been in Paris since April of 1937.

Several newspapers in Paris are urging the government to close the Soviet embassy here and the campaign to break off diplomatic relations with Russia is gaining headway.

Expected to Leave Soon

The newspapers were prompted by Premier Paul Reynaud's declaration in the Chamber of Deputies last Friday that Germany has been "aided by the treason of the Soviets."

Surits, who has stuck to his post despite the rising French feeling against Russia, is expected to leave quickly for Moscow.

Informed sources considered it unlikely that the French government would approve the nomination of any Soviet envoy as successor to the recalled ambassador.

Paul Naggiar, the French ambassador to Russia, already has left his post, having returned to Paris ostensibly on sick leave.

(Sir William Seeds, the British ambassador to Moscow, has been in London on leave for several months. Russia's envoy to London, Ivan Maisky, still is at his post.)

Surits' recall widened the gap between France and Russia that has been growing steadily since the Soviet joined forces with Germany last August in a friendship pact.

Police Watch Embassy

The French, replying to the Soviet invasions of Poland and Finland, have dissolved the Communist Party in France, raided Soviet agencies in Paris and installed close police watch over the Russian Embassy.

Forty-four Communist former deputies now are on trial before a military tribunal for action against the interests of the state. The party is banned; several leaders have been deprived of French citizenship and sentenced to prison terms in absentia.

Tass, official Soviet news agency, in the following statement on the case said:

"Jean Payart, French charge d'affaires in Moscow, informed

9 Crushed to Death as Floor Of Prune Warehouse Collapses

By the Associated Press

Santa Rosa, Calif., March 26.—At least nine itinerants, two of them women, were crushed to death beneath 200 tons of prunes today in the collapse of a warehouse floor under which they sought shelter from a driving rainstorm.

All of the victims were believed to be Indians or colored.

Authorities, struggling to clear away debris before the buckling walls of the structure gave way, said they did not know how many more might be trapped. No human sounds emanated from the wreckage.

Only three of the victims, all crushed almost beyond recognition, were identified immediately. They were Ruth Elliott, Charley Samuels and Joe Cruze. Bodies of another woman and five men were unidentified.

Rescue workers strung flood lights in preparation for continuing the hunt for more victims tonight. The walls of the building, severely jarred as the floor suddenly gave way, threatened to collapse.

Exact number of dead could not be learned until rescuers had removed the sacked, dried prunes from the building and then searched under the collapsed flooring.

"I heard a cracking sound and a roar," said Gordon Boyd, fruit company agent, who was in an undisturbed ell of the building.

"I ran out. The building had settled. There was no sound coming from anybody."

The wrecked section of the building was a wooden and corrugated iron structure about 200 feet by 60 feet. It had been used as a warehouse for 20 years.

7th Child Born. D'Alesandro Quits Youth Bill Session

Baltimore, March 26 (AP).—Over in Washington today, Representative Thomas D'Alesandro, jr., was just about to vote on consideration of the National Youth Administration appropriation. Then he got word he had a youth problem of his own—his wife was about to have her seventh child in Baltimore, 40 miles away.

D'Alesandro arranged to pair his vote, and came home.

He has six boys—including a 7-year-old named Franklin Roosevelt D'Alesandro—but his wife presented him with an 8½-pound girl today. The Congressman said she would be named Annunciata Maria.

Debunking Glamour

Pastor Who Wed Windsors Seeks 'Miss Spiritual America'

An Anglican clergyman sat down in the lobby of the Hamilton Hotel yesterday and quietly announced that he was going to "decomph the oomph girls."

The Rev. R. Anderson Jardine, who defied the Church of England to marry the Duke of Windsor and Wallis Warfield Simpson, is looking for "Miss Spiritual America."

"We have had 'it' girls, and 'glamour' girls and 'oomph' girls," he said. "Now we are going to glorify the spiritual girl—a girl who doesn't smoke or drink, who goes to church and has a good home background."

The vicar, who says he has been banned from American as well as English pulpits since his big day at the Chateau Cande, in France, is promoting a movie which will star "Miss Spiritual America."

"A group of religious people" has put up $100,000 to back the picture, he said. The film is designed to give American youth a new style of heroine and "to bring out in a delicate way the pitfalls in the way of our young people," he explained.

The Rev. Mr. Jardine said he has already selected a "Miss Spiritual Miami," "Miss Spiritual Jacksonville" and "Miss Spiritual Birmingham." He said he would interview candidates for "Miss Spiritual Washington" from 2 to 4 p. m. today and tomorrow at the Hamilton. At least a dozen finalists will compete for the title of "Miss Spiritual America" next week in New York, he predicted.

"I know just exactly the type of face I'm looking for," he reflected, "but I can't quite define it. We definitely don't want a professional actress."

"Of course the girl we choose would undoubtedly go on to become a star in Hollywood," he said. Did he think the girl would stay "spiritual" in Hollywood? "That would be up to her," he replied.

Inquirers Swoop Down

Dies Agents Fly to Pittsburgh, Raid Communist Offices

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, March 26.—Investigators for the Dies Committee swooped down today on the Pittsburgh Communist headquarters after an unheralded flight from Washington.

The investigators, led by Robert E. Lynch, chief counsel for the committee, inspected files and documents, questioned George Powers, district secretary of the Communist Party in Allegheny County, and sought unsuccessfully for Martin Young, former secretary.

The raid followed the seizure of James Hulse Dolsen, Communist leader, here last Saturday, when a membership card inscribed with the name of Franklin D. Roosevelt was taken in his room. In Washington Dolsen said he knew President Roosevelt was not a member of the party.

Lynch and three aids conferred with William Houghton, agent in charge of the United States Secret Service in Pittsburgh, and then spent 45 minutes with acting United States Attorney George Mashank. Later the committee's counsel and one aide returned to Washington.

Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, warned in Washington last night that he would seek to have every Communist leader in the United States sent to jail for contempt unless they furnished his Committee on Un-American Activities with a complete list of Communist Party members.

He said he had information that members of the party were acting as secret agents for Moscow, and sending American military and industrial secrets to Soviet authorities. To halt such activities, he held, it was necessary that the Nation know the names of the estimated 100,000 party members in this country.

"We want to ask one important Communist about the subject matter

Bennett Clark Refuses Role Of Favorite Son

Urges Uninstructed Missouri Delegation In Blow at 3d Term

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, yesterday virtually read himself out of the Democratic Presidential race but in so doing aimed a blow at the third-term movement in Missouri.

Clark disclaimed any desire for the "empty honor" of being favorite son candidate for President. He urged an uninstructed Missouri delegation to the Democratic convention, with himself at its head, and promised it would never be "traded" for office.

Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, of Missouri, is seeking a delegation pledged to President Roosevelt or his policies. Senator Clark is privately opposed to a third term, but believes that the President will not run.

Replies to Question

Clark's bid for an uninstructed delegation led by himself was expressed in a letter to George K. Williams, veteran Farmington, Mo., Democratic worker. Williams had inquired whether Clark wanted the delegation specifically instructed for him, and whether if requested he would lead it.

Anti-third term forces meanwhile gained another recruit in the Senate as Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, called on the President to propose a Constitutional amendment against a third term, and declared:

"If President Roosevelt runs again, I am afraid he may bring disaster both to himself and his party."

Urges Statement Now

Overton said he held too high a regard for Mr. Roosevelt to believe he would disregard the two-term tradition, but said "the time for the President to make a statement is now."

In California, the third-term liaison between Gov. Olson and former Senator McAdoo on a single "harmony" slate of Roosevelt delegates was broken, with the withdrawal of McAdoo himself from the slate.

McAdoo said simply he was "out of politics and am unwilling to reenter," but would support the slate. Desertions from the slate continued, as Representative Geyer (Democrat), of California, said he had withdrawn because he could not "keep up with California politics from 3,000 miles away."

The "harmony" slate was originally devised to prevent a two-slate split in California's primary vote for Roosevelt, after Secretary of Interior Ickes made a quick trip to the coast to patch up the rift.

Ickes on Way to Texas

En route to Kilgore, Tex., to speak today, at tenth anniversary ceremonies at the East Texas oil fields, Secretary Ickes meantime slated talks with Edward Clark, Austin attorney, and other Texas third-term supporters.

It was learned that Ickes declined to be introduced at the Kilgore ceremonies by Ernest Thompson, State railroad commissioner, a leading Garnerite and a candidate for Governor. Reason cited was that Ickes did not want to become involved in the Governorship contest.

Former Govs. James E. Ferguson and Dan Moody, Mayor Tom Miller of Austin, former Representative Maury Maverick and other Texas Roosevelt supporters were preparing to launch a third-term boom in Garner's home bailiwick shortly after the Ickes visit.

Clark's denial of favorite son aims and announcement for an unpledged delegation led by himself was immediately interpreted as a slap at Gov. Stark's activities for a Roosevelt delegation, although there was no reference to these in his letter.

Having withdrawn from the favored son role, it was pointed out that Clark would be in a better position to work for an uninstructed delegation without third-term commitments.

Couldn't Leave Senate

The Missouri Senator, son of the late Speaker Champ Clark, who was defeated by the old two-thirds rule for the Democratic nomination in Baltimore in 1912, said he has discouraged all efforts to back him for President "because I realized that I did not have either the organization or the financial backing necessary" and could not leave the Senate to campaign.

"I have no desire and have never had any desire for the empty honor of being placed in nomination in the convention as a 'favorite son' candidate for the Presidential nomination," Clark wrote Williams. "A 'favorite son' indorsement without binding instructions is a tinsel embellishment for an empty honor."

Donahey Stand Recalled

Williams had expressed the belief that Missouri would choose a delegation of "supporters of the Roosevelt Administration, but friendly to your interest." Observers recalled that Senator Donahey, of Ohio, recently declined to accept a favorite son "stalking horse" role for a third term on the Ohio delegate slate.

Clark said he would "never again be a party to tying the hands of Missouri Democrats with a binding instruction for myself or anyone else in what might turn out to be only a 'favorite son' candidacy."

Unlike Donahey, who declined to serve as a delegate, Clark said he would be a candidate for both delegate-at-large and chairman of the delegation.

The Gallup Poll

New Jersey Survey Finds Sharp Decline In Democratic Strength; 3d Term Opposed

This is the fourth in a series of articles on political sentiment in key States as shown by the Gallup Poll.
With reports on other States coming at regular intervals in the next few weeks, the score to date follows:

State	Electoral Votes
LEANING DEMOCRATIC
New York	47
Pennsylvania	36
California	22
Total	105
LEANING REPUBLICAN
New Jersey	16

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 26.—The announcement that Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison, son of the famous inventor, will seek the Democratic nomination for Governor of New Jersey comes at a time when the Democrats may need the strongest and most prominent candidates they can find to hold the States in line. New Jersey went Democratic by a landslide in 1936, but a special study of political sentiment here indicates that the State is leaning Republican at the present time.

GALLUP

A Top-Rank State

With 16 electoral votes New Jersey is one of the top-rank States in importance for the 1940 campaign. The significant news at the present time is the sharp defection in Democratic sentiment which the survey shows has taken place since 1936. Roosevelt carried the State with 60 per cent of the major party vote four years ago. Today, the survey shows, Democratic sentiment has dropped 13 points, one of the largest drops of any State in the country.

The study, conducted by the Institute, put the following issue to a cross-section of voters in New Jersey:

"Which party would you like to see win the Presidential election this year?"

New Jersey Voters
Want Democrats to Win 47%
Want Republicans to Win 53

New Jersey's neighbor to the north, New York State, and her neighbor to the west, Pennsylvania, were both found leaning Democratic by slight margins in recent surveys. But in those States, too, there has been a sharp drop in Democratic sentiment as compared to 1936.

Republicans Elected

In the Congressional elections two years ago, the total Republican vote in New Jersey was slightly larger than the Democratic vote, and a Republican Senator, Warren Barbour, was elected with 54 per cent, to 46 per cent for his Democratic opponent.

President Roosevelt's personal popularity in New Jersey continues strong, the survey shows, with 60 per cent approving him as President at this point in his second term. But a large proportion of these voters say they would desert him if he ran for a third term.

Third term sentiment in the survey is as follows:

"If President Roosevelt runs for a third term, will you vote for him?"

New Jersey Voters
Would Vote for Him 43%
Would Vote Against Him 57

In earlier reports the Institute has shown party strength today in other important pivotal States. Following is a summary of the findings to date:

	Want Dems. To Win	Want Reps. To Win
New York	53%	47%
Pennsylvania	51	49
California	58	42
New Jersey	47	53

How New Jersey Has Voted

1936—Roosevelt carried New Jersey with 60 per cent of the major party vote, to 40 per cent for Landon.

1937—The Democratic candidate for Governor, A. Harry Moore, was elected with 52 per cent of the vote, to 48 per cent for the Republican candidate.

1938—In the Congressional elections Republicans cast a majority of the vote—52 per cent, as against 48 per cent for the Democrats. The Republican candidate for United States Senator, Warren Barbour, won with 54 per cent, to 46 per cent for the Democratic candidate.

Today—The State is leaning Republican in national politics, according to Institute surveys, with 53 per cent wanting a Republican victory in the Presidential election and 47 per cent a Democratic victory.

Roosevelt Asks Trade Policy Left Unchanged

McCarran, O'Mahoney Argue for Senate Ratification of Pacts

President Roosevelt's "intense" interest in defeat of the Pittman amendment to require Senate ratification of reciprocal trade agreements was carried to the Senate yesterday.

It came while two Western Democratic Senators, McCarran, of Nevada, and O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, were pleading on the floor for adoption of the amendment in the interest of "democratic processes of Constitutional government."

Emerging from a White House conference, where he had laid before the Chief Executive all angles of the close fight over extension of the trade agreements authority, Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, told reporters:

"The President is, of course, intensely anxious that the Pittman amendment and all others be defeated."

Close Fight Expected

The Senator expressed the view that if the Pittman proposal prevails "it will be impossible to carry out the trade agreement program." He added:

"This will be a close fight but I believe the resolution extending the trade agreements program will be passed."

Easter week throngs that jammed the public galleries, meanwhile, heard McCarran and O'Mahoney attack the constitutionality of foreign trade agreements not ratified by the Senate.

Constitution Invoked

McCarran asserted that 19 of the 22 countries with which the United States has signed trade agreements submitted them to legislative approval before they could become effective.

In this country, he said, ratification involves a constitutional question which transcended party lines. The agreements now go into operation with the approval of the Secretary of State and the President, Pittman, McCarran and others argue that they are really formal treaties and therefore constitutionally subjected to ratification.

"I believe there is in formation a group of a political party aimed at preserving constitutional government," McCarran declared.

Hull Policy Recalled

"If no great group of American citizens comes forward to proclaim the principles of constitutional democracy, I fear the results that must flow from the actions of the past."

Referring to Secretary Hull as a "possible and, maybe, probable nominee of the Democratic Party" for the Presidency, McCarran recalled that Hull, while a Representative from Tennessee, had opposed a flexible provision in the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act as "undoubtedly unconstitutional."

McCarran said that provision was "much more constitutional" than any broad authority to negotiate trade treaties without Senate ratification.

Reading from Hull's speech in the House in 1929, McCarran said the Tennesssean then had protested giving the executive branch of the Government control over taxation and revenue. Hull then said, McCarran told the Senate, that that was "too much power for a bad man to have or a good man to want."

Points to Dictators

O'Mahoney declared:

"The paramount question in this issue is whether the democratic form of government is to be continued."

Citing efforts of Hitler, Stalin and Mussolini to dominate Europe, and Japan's drive for domination of the Orient, O'Mahoney warned against any move which might threaten to undermine the Constitution.

"These trade agreements are treaties and are subject to Senate ratification," he declared. "We can no more sidestep this obligation, and permit the Presdient to make treaties than we can permit him to name Supreme Court justices without consent of the Senate."

Mathews Quits SEC, Praises Securities Act

Suggests Only Moderate Changes; Takes Utility Job

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

George C. Mathews, who resigned yesterday as a Republican member of the Securities and Exchange Commission, declared that moderate changes in the 1933 securities act might be worthy of consideration.

"I think the act is a remarkably good job considering the background under which it was written," he declared. "But that does not mean that it should not be open to study with a view to possible improvement through changes in the amount of information required and other alterations."

The 1933 securities act requires issuers of securities to register them with the SEC, and in so doing to disclose, with regard to the financial condition of the corporation and the security issue itself, all data considered pertinent and necessary for the protection of investors.

To Work for Utility

Mathews' resignation will be effective April 15. He has arranged with Robert F. Pack, Minneapolis, president of the Northern States Power Co., to join that organization.

"Basically," he declared, "all the statutes administered by the SEC are sound laws. They are capable of improvement as conditions warrant. But if there is to be real improvement of these laws their revision should be undertaken as a scientific job. It would be unfortunate for the country if a program of revision is undertaken in the heat of political controversy."

Questioned as to changes in the 1933 Securities Act which he thought might warrant study, Mathews said a simplified procedure might be considered for corporations which have filed information with the SEC over a period of years.

Another change which he thought worthy of consideration would be exemption from the 1933 act registration, requirements of utility holding company issues already approved by the SEC under the 1935 Utility Holding Company Act.

Mathews said he regretted that his resignation should come at a time when Federal securities regulation was under attack. He referred to demands for a Congressional investigation of acts administered by the SEC and the commission's administration methods.

The system of securities regulation, he declared, "is fundamentally so sensible that it is inconceivable to me that the country would permit it to be destroyed or seriously weakened," he declared.

"No sensible person wants to weaken the prohibitions against stock manipulation," he added.

Mathews characterized as "absolutely untrue" reports that one of the causes for his resignation was dissatisfaction with SEC policies in general and the SEC-sponsored investment trust regulatory bill in particular.

Chairman Jerome N. Frank of the SEC praised Mathews' "good old American horse sense," and said he was the "soundest financial analyst I have ever met."

"The Government," he declared, "is losing one of its ablest public servants."

Radcliffe Aide Deplores Police Backing of Bruce

Annapolis, March 26 (AP).—William H. Labrot, county campaign manager for United States Senator George L. Radcliffe, today charged "good government and proper law enforcement in Anne Arundel County are endangered by police officers working openly for Howard Bruce."

Labrot pointed out that Sheriff Russell Turner is county manager for Bruce, and that Thomas Wilmer, inspector for the County Board of Liquor License Commissioners, is also an avowed Bruce partisan.

Three county police officers are also working for Bruce, Labrot said.

Roosevelt Lauds Airlines Safety Record

Commercial Services Complete Year Without Fatality

President Roosevelt and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh yesterday joined Government aeronautical leaders and airline executives in extolling the no deaths, no serious injuries record achieved in the past 366-day year by United States commercial air services.

In a letter to Chairman Robert H. Hinckley, of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"The news that our domestic air lines will on March 26 complete an entire year of flying without a single fatal accident is indeed gratifying.

"Will you please extend my heartiest congratulations to every last employe of the air lines—be he a field boy, pilot or president—and to your own personnel in the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

"I am deeply impressed by reports submitted to me showing that during the year now closing our domestic air lines have flown 87,325,145 revenue plane miles; carried 2,030,000 passengers, flown 814,906,250 passenger miles, a truly remarkable aggregate.

"Looking behind this record, in which we all can take such pardonable pride, we find it has been achieved through cooperation and team work between the personnel of the air transport lines and workers in the Federal Government. I trust that this cooperation may continue with like satisfactory results through the years ahead."

Col. Lindbergh wrote Hinckley he regarded the all-time safety record "as ne of the most significant advances ever made in commercial aviation."

Lindbergh added "it is no longer necessary to speak of what air transportation may accomplish. Our hopes have become facts with amazing rapidity and in many instances the facts have already outdistanced our vision.

Hinckley, who read the President's letter during a Nationwide radio address from Salt Lake City over the Columbia Broadcasting System, was cosigner with Administrator Clinton Hester, of the CAA, and Chairman Tom Hardin, of the CAA's Air Safety Board, of a "heartiest congratulations" telegram to employes of the airlines, Weather Bureau and the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

"Completion of an entire year of airline safety," said the message, carried on the 30,000-mile CAA teletypewriter circuit, ". . . is one of the outstanding achievements in the history of transportation."

The telegram, sent at 3:50 a. m. yesterday, was radioed to 208 planes in flight and passengers were given souvenir copies.

Liberals Ahead In Canada Voting

but this is a slender possibility and the modification, if any, will not effect the general outcome.

That the outcome is far beyond the predictions of the most sanguine Liberal leaders, in fact, some regret is being expressed already that the opposition in Parliament will be numerically so weak.

Even Dr. R. J. Manion, the Conservative leader, has been defeated in Fort William, Ont., where he had held the seat continuously from 1917.

Among the other opposition casualties was W. D Herridge, former Minister to the United States and leader of the New Democracy Party allied with the Conservatives.

"You have made history and safeguarded liberty," Mackenzie King told the electors over the radio late tonight. "Your verdict means a vigorous and united war effort by a united country."

"The people have spoken," said Dr. Manion, "and therefore I have very little to say. After all, we live in a democracy, thank God. Once the vote has been taken, being law-abiding citizens, we accept it."

The Ontario returns can be accepted by the Liberals as a clear rebuff to the personal attack initiated by dissident Liberal Premier Mitchell Hepburn on Mackenzie King in the legislature's vote of lack of confidence in the government's war effort.

Instead of the predicted loss of 20 seats out of his 115 majority in the last Parliament, he may have gained 20 more. His ministers, including Defense Minister Norman Rogers, on whom the Conservatives concentrated their fire and whose defeat they confidently predicted, are safely elected, and there is now envisaged even a further triumph.

It has become by no means improbable that in his next tneure of office, Mackenzie King may command a majority of the Senate as well as the House of Commons, a situation he has never yet been able to attain in all of his four periods of power.

Closing of the polls at 6 o'clock revealed a heavy urban vote throughout the Dominion, but much lighter balloting in the rural districts of eastern Canada. In Ontario and Quebec, farmers fought snow-blocked roads with sleighs, skis and snow shoes to reach the polling places.

Barlow Bombs . . .

2. AMERICAN BOMB FRONT—Photographers took places behind sand bags to record the explosion which, it is claimed, is capable of wiping out every living thing within a radius of 1,000 feet

Barlow Shows His Explosive Resists Bullets

Compound Blows Up A Telephone Pole, Withstands Shot

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, March 26.—Lester Barlow's liquid oxygen-carbon explosive, so powerful an 8-ounce charge sent a 40-foot telephone pole flying skyward, withstood a public trial of shock and fire today and the inventor announced tonight he was ready for Government tests.

He said he would send his proposals for official trials to the Senate Military Affairs Committee tomorrow and predicted the first would be held within three weeks. They were ordered after a meeting last week of Congressional War and Naval committees.

Before nearly 75 newsmen and photographers, Barlow conducted a series of tests to prove the stability of this explosive he claims is the deadliest ever devised by man—a crushing power that can wipe out all life within a 1,000-foot radius.

The "detonating waves" which he says are the killing forces that will result from a 1,000-pound charge were not evidenced today. A five-pound charge, the largest demonstrated, was set off in a dugout rimmed with sandbags. With a tremendous roar the bags flew into the air and the force was clearly felt 1,000 feet away.

But Barlow emphasized that today's tests were only to refute some critics' assertions that liquid oxygen bombs were too delicate for military use.

He sent a telephone pole 50 feet into the air with the 8-ounce charge and the pole split asunder, sending smaller chunks 150 feet high.

To show its immunity to fire he set another 8-ounce charge ablaze with an excelsior torch. It flared, but did not explode.

He fired a high-powered rifle through a pound and a half bag of the explosive, known as Glmite, and it didn't detonate.

Then, while the spectators huddled behind a sandbag barricade on the banks of the wind-whipped Middle River, Barlow fired a steel jacket filled with the explosive from a makeshift mortar against a steel plate to prove it could not be exploded by impact.

To climax the performance he fired a 5-pound charge 1,500 feet into the air, recovered it after it crashed harmlessly to earth, then exploded it with the electric detonator, similar to that used in other explosives. The wall of a nearby shack was ripped away by the blast.

Glmite, a black, powdery substance, was placed in cotton bags and soaked in liquid oxygen. The latter looks like water, but sends up blue smoke when it hits the earth. Barlow says the bigger bombs will retain their power 30 hours.

Buckner Surrenders to Serve 2-Year Term for Mail Fraud

William P. Buckner, jr. (left), surrendered with a smile yesterday in New York. He chatted with his attorney, Irving Spieler (right), about the two-year sentence he will have to serve for mail fraud conspiracy

Playboy Promoter Convicted in Philippine Railway Bond Swindle Is Nonchalant, Observes Imprisonment 'Won't Kill Me'

New York, March 26.—William P. Buckner, jr., playboy promoter who tried his hand at Washington lobbying with champagne and chorus girls, surrendered to Federal authorities today to begin serving a two-year sentence for mail fraud and conspiracy in the Philippine Railway bond swindle.

Dapper and handsome in a gray suit, the 32-year-old Buckner, who a year ago was making long distance calls to Loretta Young in Hollywood, observed smilingly that imprisonment "won't kill me."

"I haven't been to a Broadway night club in two years," he said, when asked about his recent nocturnal activities.

"How about the side streets?"

"Oh, that's another matter," Buckner grinned.

(Virtually all the "Broadway" night clubs are on side streets.)

Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard, rejecting yesterday a plea for delayed surrender, remarked:

"It seems to me that this man might be better off in prison than leading the life he had been reported to lead."

Buckner wasn't there to hear that, but he appeared today as nonchalant as he was in the days when he was interesting Hollywood people, or trying to interest them, in Philippine railway bonds, and trying in Washington to get legislation to redeem the defaulted securities.

Convicted with him last summer were William J. Gillespie, Brooklyn lawyer, and Felipe Buencamino, a member of the Philippine Legislature. Both of whom face 18 months in Federal prison.

The Government charged that, as officers of a bondholders protective committee, they wasted in drinking parties the money advanced by fellow bondholders to pay for the expenses of a campaign to redeem the securities.

Buckner, who will serve his sentence in the Northeastern Penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., probably will remain here a week or two in the Federal House of Detention until the Government has gathered enough prisoners to make a regular train shipment to Lewisburg.

Buencamino and Gillespie surrendered a short time later in Federal court after making a vain attempt to postpone surrender pending the outcome of their petitions for a Presidential pardon.

Neilson Olcott, trial counsel, said Buencamino had been convicted only of conspiracy, and for long had been a promoter of good will between the Philippines and the United States.

Olcott told Judge Samuel Mandelbaum the application for a pardon had not been acted upon yet solely because the President has had a cold. He read extracts from a letter to the President written by former Senator Hawes, of Missouri, urging "your favorable consideration" of a pardon for Buencamino, and said Supreme Court Justice Murphy, a former high commissioner to the Philippines, had recommended, prior to his retirement as Attorney General, favorable consideration of the pardon application.

Northumberland Seeks Larger School Fund

Heathsville, Va., March 26 (AP).—A request for increased school appropriations was before the Northumberland County board of supervisors today.

School Board Chairman Herbert Booker told the supervisors his board wished to build a home economics cottage at the Callao High School and a manual training shop at the Reedville High School. He requested the supervisors either to appropriate an additional $5,000 for the construction of the two buildings or to authorize the school board to borrow the money.

Optical Firm Answers Charge

By the Associated Press

New York, March 26.—The Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., accused by the Government of splitting the world market for military optical instruments with a German manufacturer, declared today it "deemed it for the best interests of all concerned" to produce such instruments for the "sole use of the United States Government."

This was the Rochester, N. Y., company's answer to an indictment returned here earlier in the day by a Federal grand jury alleging violations of the anti-trust laws on the part of Bausch & Lomb, three of its officers, the Carl Zeiss Co. of Germany, and the latter's New York subsidiary.

Bausch & Lomb and the Zeiss concerns, said a special assistant United States attorney, had a trade-restraining agreement under which Bausch refused to sell to foreign governments—and Zeiss refused to sell to the United States—unless the other consented and then only when both agreed to the price.

Instruments involved include periscopes, rangefinders, gun sights, bomb sights and similar devices essential to the fire control mechinism of warships.

In a statement issued in Rochester, M. Herbert Eisenhart, president of Bausch & Lomb and one of the individuals indicted, declared that since 1921 he had held exclusive license for the use of all Zeiss patents issued in the United States "covering the manufacture and sale of optical fire control instruments for military uses in this country."

The contract, he added, also entitled Bausch & Lomb to receive information on the latest developments by Zeiss in the design and manufacture of such instruments—a provision now inoperative because of "conditions abroad."

"So far as this company is presently informed," continued the statement, "the chief complaint appears to arise from the fact that except during the last World War and in two subsequent instances, Bausch & Lomb has never supplied optical fire control instruments for foreign governments. Aside from the fact that its patent license from Zeiss is restricted to the United States, the company has deemed it for the best interests of all concerned to confine its production of military instruments to the sole use of the United States Government.

of radiograms he sent to Moscow recently."

Dies talked to reporters while Secret Service men were searching for a Communist who used the name "Franklin D. Roosevelt" on his Communist Party membership booklet.

James H. Dolsen, who said he was a Pittsburgh Communist, testified Monday that he had written the President's name in the booklet at the request of another Communist who wanted to be "protected" by a false name.

After the witness declined to answer questions about party affairs and some of his own activities, the Dies Committee decided to start contempt proceedings against him.

Dies said he was considering further action against Dolsen on a charge of being an accessory to the misuse of the President's name. Stephen Early, White House secretary who called the Secret Service into the case, described the use of the President's name as too preposterous to discuss.

"It's a mighty strange thing that this Government can't get the information on people within its own boundaries when a foreign government already has it," Dies said last night.

"We're going to try to get all the Communist leaders to come before our committee, and they will be asked to supply the names. If they don't we will institute contempt proceedings against them. The law will permit the Government to keep them in jail if they don't talk."

The Texan said that he proposed to follow the same course with reference to Nazi and Fascist groups.

Dies cited these three reasons why the membership of the foreign organizations should be known:

Communist leaders had testified before the committee that in a United States-Russian war, they would support Russia and "do everything to cripple us."

"There is no reason why a foreign government should have our secrets" and thereby take away the "advantage of the progress this country has made."

Government agencies and industrial plants would be able to "spot the foreigners and get rid of them."

The Dies Committee decided yesterday to subpena ten El Paso, Tex., men in an investigation of the relations between the Communist parties of Mexico and the United States. The ten were described as Communist organizers.

for the present form of tax structure."

"It is believed necessary to revise the present tax laws in order to raise sufficient revenue to meet the requirements," the statement added.

"The income tax may have to be revised as to definitions and possibly as to rates."

Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent, disclosed that $682,000 already has been paid on the income tax, and of this amount $473,000 has come from the personal income levy, which is estimated to yield only $1,000,000. Corporations have paid $209,000 to date of an anticipated $2,200,000.

Some District officials believe that the estimates are optimistic in view of the existing confusion over domicile and that the personal income tax collections may fall short of $1,000,000.

Harry W. Wakenight To Be Buried Today

The funeral of Harry W. Wakenight, 55, lifelong resident of Washington, who died Sunday, will be today at Nalley's funeral home, 522 Eighth street southeast. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Wakenight was for 20 years an employe of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving. He lived at 809 Fourteenth street northwest.

chase liquor. Di Carlo was dismissed after giving his story.

According to Lassover one man dashed into a tenement house at 1342 Vermont avenue northwest and escaped through a rear alley. Mrs. Lucille Harvel, who lives on the first floor of the building, said she saw the man run through the corridor.

At this point Carl L. Powell, of 1321 K street northwest, said he saw the two men dash suspiciously out of the cab and chased the second man to the Eddystone. Both Powell and Lassover said they hailed Capitol Policeman DeCotte, who made the capture.

Capt. Jeremiah Sullivan and Policeman Robert Steward, of the Second precinct, took the suspect to the station for questioning. Late last night they were holding the man for the line-up and were trying to link him with at least half a dozen other District robberies. The second man was still being sought.

Last night the Market Drug Co., Fifth street and Florida avenue northeast, reported that its delivery boy, David Thompson, colored, of 1532 Columbia road northwest, was robbed while making a delivery. A holdup man took a bottle of whisky from the boy and $9.30 which he carried in bills and change.

Three colored men escaped with $30 from the Federal Oil Station, 1560 Eckington place northeast. The gunmen searched an attendant and forced him into a wash room.

Police early today ordered a lookout for a colored man believed to have been wounded when he attempted to hold up a bus driver on Landover road in Hyattsville, Md. The driver told police he fired through the window at the man when the latter brandished a revolver.

Miss Nettie Eisman, 28-year-old Government stenographer, early today was beaten over the head with a revolver by a colored man apparently attempting to rob her in her home, 2313 Fifteenth street northwest.

Miss Eisman, told police she woke up to see the man standing beside her bed. When she screamed he struck her with the gun and fled. She was treated at Garfield Hospital for scalp lacerations.

Trial Ordered, A. F. L. to Fight Trust Action

Will Seek Exemption By Supreme Court 'If Necessary'

been "final," and an appeal would have been allowed.

Named as defendants in the indictment were the Drivers, Chauffeurs and Helpers Local Union No. 639 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America, an A. F. L. affiliate, and these officials: Thomas O'Brien, representative of the International Brotherhood; Stuart M. Keyser, recording secretary and business representative, Local 639; Charles J. Bell, president and business representative, Local 639; and Aubrey W. Stream, business representative, Local 639.

Engineers Had Contract

The dispute arose last May, when Local 639 tried to get jurisdiction over the operation of concrete mixer trucks used on several building projects here, including the new Social Security and Census buildings.

The companies owning the trucks had contracts with the International Brotherhood of Operating Engineers, Local No. 77, and 75 per cent of their drivers were from that union.

The Government charged that the defendants tried to induce the companies to employ only members of the drivers' union on the mixer trucks; coerced the companies to break contracts with the engineers' local; coerced drivers and operators of the trucks to resign from the engineers' union and join the drivers' union; called and assisted to call strikes by members of the drivers' union on various projects to stop construction work on those projects; and prevented by force and the threat of force the delivery of concrete in trucks operated by nonmembers of the drivers' union.

The defendants were represented by Joseph A. Padway, A. F. L. general counsel.

Blanket Exemption Denied

He held that the jursdictional dispute was not a "legitimate object" because it was not directed toward obtaining higher wages, shorter hours, or better conditions of labor, "nor is it in furtherance of 'unionization' as that term is generally understood."

He held that the alleged conspiracy was contrary to the spirit of the National Labor Relations Act, as the engineers union was the majority of the employes affected.

Justice Gordon also said the use of force and threats of force in the dispute as charged in the indictment was "clearly unlawful."

Representing the Government were two special assistants to the Attorney General, Gordon Dean and Walter R. Hutchison.

Unions Exempt, Pressman Says

Lee Pressman, general counsel of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, yesterday declared that "unions are not subject to the antitrust laws unless they become part of a combination of employers which commits acts in violation of the antitrust law."

His statement accompanied a brief prepared for the Supreme Court in the Apex Hosiery Co. case. The brief will be submitted as that of "a friend of the court" as soon as consent from counsel of both sides is obtained.

The Apex Hosiery Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., has asked the Supreme Court to review a judgment of a Federal Circuit Court of Appeals reversing a $711,932 judgment awarded them by a district court against the C. I. O. American Federation of Hosiery Workers as the result of a sit-down strike in 1937.

The Appellate Court ruled that the union could not be penalized under the antitrust act because the evidence showed no intent to restrain interstate commerce.

Molotoff (Russian premier-foreign commissar) that the French government considers a telegram signed by Jakob Surits, Soviet Ambassador to Paris, and sent to Stalin on the occasion of the Soviet-Finnish peace treaty, as an intrusion by Surits into internal French politics.

"At the same time, Payart stated that the French government considered certain expressions used by the ambassador in the telegram as incorrect toward the French government, especially the passage, 'Thanks to the wisdom of the Soviet government and the valiant Red army the plans of the British and French war mongers who were engaged in kindling war in northeast Europe suffered a new setback.'

"Although the French banned the dispatch of the telegram the French government declared that Surits will no longer be regarded by it as persona grata and expressed the desire that Surits should be recalled by the Soviet government."

The telegram by Surits aggravated the situation which had led France and Britain to offer Finland an expenditionary corps before Finland abandoned her fight against Russia on March 13. The Russo-Finnish peace treaty was a factor in the resignation, last week, of the Daladier government in France.

Wallace Backs Jones Farm Credit Bill

Defending the bulk of the bill, Wallace called the reduction of interest rates "a highly desirable objective." Interest on land bank loans is now 3½ per cent, while commissioner loans draw 4 per cent.

He estimated operation of the farm credit system would cost $365,000,000 in the next seven years, under the Jones measure, while he put the cost under the present FCA steup at $350,000,000.

The section of the Jones bill providing for refinancing of mortgages in cases where the borrower can prove his indebtedness is in excess of the productive value of the farm would serve the farmers and conform to "the most conservative standards of banking practice," the Secretary said. He suggested, however, that "probable future productive value" be substituted for "productive value."

Pressed by Representative Andresen (Republican), of Minnesota, to predict the future trend of farm prices, Wallace said:

"I don't want to be indicted as one of those crystal-gazers who appeared before another House committee yesterday."

When Andresen attempted to date the most serious decline of farm prices from 1931, the secretary insisted that the agricultural depression began in 1921.

Farm income from 1933 to the present, in terms of purchasing power, compares very favorably with the level of the 1920's, Wallace said. "I'd be glad if Republicans wanted to broadcast those figures," he added.

"I don't want to inject any politics into this," the Minnesota Republican replied.

"I'm glad to hear you say that," Wallace continued, "but about 80 per cent of the members of your party consistently vote against any measure designed to help the farmer."

Andresen said there would be an opportunity "between now and November" to compare farm prices under recent Republican and Democratic Administrations.

Wallace denied that the Agriculture Department would be influenced in its administration of the FCA by the extent to which farmer-borrowers compiled with the AAA or other phases of the department's program.

The Secretary said he had not asked for the responsibility of administering the FCA, which lost its status as an independent agency under President Roosevelt's reorganization order of June 30, 1939.

It was at the same time that "a decision of the Comptroller General made it clear the responsibility was mine," Wallace said, that he realized on a field trip through the Middle West that he "had to step into the farm credit picture. Specific instances of "unjust" judgments against land bank borrowers were placed before him, he said.

"There is a question in my mind," he said, "whether some of these farm loan associations are trying to serve all the farmers, or are thinking in terms of one class of farmers. Some associations tend to become clubs of the more well-to-do farmers, out of touch with the problems of their neighbors. They begin to look on themselves as a sort of farmer-aristocracy."

Wallace referred but once to the resignation within the last three monts of the governor, general counsel and land bank commissioner of the FCA.

"As we have moved to strengthen the farm credit system within the framework of present legislation," he said, "the existence of somewhat different points of view has resulted in several changes of personnel" in the FCA.

January 1, 1940, more than 22 per cent of the Federal Land Bank loan mortgages were delinquent or had their installments extended, while 29.7 per cent of the commissioner loans were delinquent, he stated.

The Federal Government has made "gigantic efforts" to prevent foreclosure, he asserted, but "it is impossible to have a genuinely successful program where the Farm Credit Administration has one approach toward the farm problem and the Department of Agriculture an entirely different one."

Lower interest rates and provisions for reamortization, embodied in the Jones bill, will end a situation which now impoverishes many borrowers and "tends to impair the security of the lending institution," he said.

"It is neither sound banking policy nor sound public policy," Wallace maintained, "to require the borrower to repay the principal of his loan within so short a period as to require the mining of his property, the neglect of farm buildings and the loss by the borrower of the very operating capital which he must have in order successfully to carry on farming operations."

Provisions in the Jones bill for abolishing joint stock liability "embody a desirable policy," Wallace said. Borrowers are now obliged to take 5 per cent of their loans in land bank stock. "It seems to me that the risk of loss on long-term loans should properly be spread over a much larger unit than the national farm loan association," Wallace told the committee.

The Secretary will resume testimony before the committee at 10 a. m. today.

Rogge to Ask More Sleuths For Georgia

Prosecutor Favors Addition of Agents FFor Graft Inquiry

O. John Rogge, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Justice Department criminal division, revealed yesterday that he would recommend the assignment of more Federal investigators to run down charges of political corruption in Georgia.

This will be done, he said, at the request of Lawrence Camp, United States district attorney in Atlanta and unsuccessful Administration candidate for the Democratic Senatorial nomination in the "purge" campaign against Senator George in 1938.

"Wherever a local district attorney is on his toes," Rogge declared, "and feels that he is confronted with a situation which requires a housecleaning, the policy of the Justice Department is to help him with the job."

Favors More Agents

Rogge said he would ask that the investigative staffs in Atlanta of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Postoffice Department and the Bureau of Internal Revenue intelligence unit be enlarged.

The object in sending Bureau of Internal Revenue investigators would be to run down evidence of income tax violations. Postoffice inspectors would concern themselves with possible illegal use of the mails, while FBI agents would investigate complaints of a miscellaneous character.

Likened to Louisiana

Camp, it is understood, believes there is evidence of political corruption in Georgia on a scale comparable to that unearthed in Louisiana. Rogge conducted the investigation in the latter State.

The Georgia inquiry has resulted in the indictment of Representative B. Frank Whelchel, of the Ninth Georgia District on a charge of selling postmasterships.

Rogge assisted Camp in presenting evidence to the Federal grand jury that indicted Whelchel and H. Grady Jones, commissioner of Pickens County.

Camp Urged as Judge

Representatives Ramspeck and A. Sidney Camp (Democrats), of Georgia, recently called at the White House and urged President Roosevelt to appoint Camp to a judgeship in the District of Columbia or on the United States Customs Court in New York.

The investigation in Georgia may involve the Ku Klux Klan. W. L. Miller, ousted by Gov. E. D. Rivers as State highway chairman, has said he incurred disfavor with an "inner circle" because he "broke up an asphalt monopoly controlled by Dr. Hiram E. Evans," former Ku Klux Klan imperial wizard.

Rogge, while in Georgia, received a great many complaints, it is understood. He studied evidence given to the State Economy Committee and grand juries.

Flogging Reports Studied

Gov. Rivers, who has been arrested on a Federal court contempt charge in a controversy over his refusal to reinstate Miller, recently called at the White House and conferred with the Presdient.

Aside from complaints involving political corruption, Federal investigators are looking into charges that civil liberties statutes have violated as a result of a series of floggings in Atlanta suburbs.

Rogge, in an all-day conference with colored leaders Monday, it was learned, agreed to investigate evidence of Ku Klux Klan terrorism in South Carolina.

St. Charles Alumni To Give Benefit

The annual dance and jamboree of the St. Charles College Lay Alumni for the benefit of men desiring to enter the priesthood will be held April 2 at the Willard Hotel, according to plans formed at an alumni meeting last night.

Money raised at the annual parties covers tuition and expenses at the Caytonsville, Md., institution for deserving students. The identity of those receiving the scholarships is kept secret by alumni and college officials.

Andrew I. Hickey, 1903, president of the lay alumni, spoke after committee reports were given.

Bullet Wound Fatal To World War Soldier

Henry L. Grant, jr., 48, a World War soldier recently released from the veterans' hospital at Perryville, Md., died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital from the effects of a bullet wound of the abdomen.

According to police, Grant shot himself at the home of friends in Cheltenham, Md. Coroner A. Magruder McDonald said he would issue a certificate of suicide.

Murder, Inc., Linked to Gang At Waterfront

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MAX (THE JERK) GOLOB, has been identified by Florence Nestfield in New York as one of the killers of her sweetheart, John (Spider) Murtha, according to District Attorney William O'Dwyer, of Brooklyn. Golob was added yesterday to his list of informers in the investigation of "Murder, Inc."

By the Associated Press

New York, March 26.—District Attorney William O'Dwyer said today Abe (Kid Twist) Reles, 34, alleged "vice president" of Murder, Inc., the Brooklyn crime syndicate already linked with 30-odd gang slayings, had divulged new facts interlocking the murder ring with a powerful waterfront gang headed by Joe Adonis.

O'Dwyer said Adonis, an almost mythical underworld figure who purportedly inherited the shopworn toga successively handed down by Johnnie Torrio and Frankie Yale, had been named by Reles as sometimes calling in the triggermen of Murder, Inc., to "take care of" certain cases.

The Brooklyn prosecutor said Reles had given him an "important lead" regarding Peter Panto, 28, a Brooklyn waterfront labor leader who disappeared last July 14 after kissing his sweetheart, Alice Maffia, 20, and telling her:

"I'm going to meet a couple of guys I don't trust."

Murder Charge

Meanwhile, two other figures in the drama of cleaning up Brooklyn's gang-ruled Augean Stables appeared briefly in Coney Island Court to have technical charges of vagrancy dismissed before returning to more serious business.

Albert Tannenbaum, 34, indicted in upstate Sullivan County for first-degree murder in the slaying of Irving Ashkenas, a Brooklyn cab driver, in 1936, had been held in $25,000 bail on the vagrancy count. He was returned to the Raymond Street Jail in Brooklyn on the murder charge.

His alleged companion, Charles (The Bug) Workman, 30, also won a dismissal on the vagrancy charge but was picked up again almost immediately and held in $100,000 bail as a material witness.

Called Contact Man

Assistant District Attorney Burton Turkus told the court:

"This man is the contact man between the Lepke (Louis Buchalter) mob and the Brooklyn combination. He is one of the most important figures in our investigation."

Turkus said Workman knew the slayer or slayers of Joseph Rosen, a Brooklyn candy store proprietor, who was killed in a blast of .28 sawed-off shotgun slugs on September 13, 1936.

"Workman also knows the motive for that murder, which, like many others, was a 'contract killing,'" Turkus said.

Hungary, Italy Agree to Keep Balkan Peace

Budapest's Claims Against Rumania At Least Postponed

By Camille M. Cianferra.
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 26.—Hungary and Italy, in a two-hour conference today between Hungarian Premier Count Teleki and Premier Mussolini, decided "firmly" to cooperate in keeping the Balkans out of the Western war—a decision generally interpreted as meaning Hungary has agreed at least to postpone her territorial claims on Rumania.

A communique said "during the cordial conversation it had been decided to intensify the collaboration of the two countries in every field on the basis of the pact of friendship which is now 13 years old and has been tested by events."

Friendship Stressed

The communique further stressed that "this friendship coincides perfectly with the relations existing between Italy and Germany and between Germany and Hungary, as well as with those existing between Italy and Yugoslavia.

"The two governments are firmly determined, especially in the present circumstances, to coordinate their action in order to maintain peace in the Danubian and Balkan basins."

Teleki was acquainted with the decisions reached by Mussolini and Fuehrer Hitler at their Brenner Pass meeting last week and given a frank explanation of the aims of Italian policy at the present stage of the European conflict, it was learned.

Hungarian Claims Deferred

These aims, according to Italian quarters, do not include the settlement of the Hungarian claims until the end of the conflict. The reason for this, it was explained, is that Italy's policy today is directed toward maintaining the status quo in the Balkans, so as to prevent the possible spreading of the war.

This policy was all the more necessary today, it was stated, since Hitler's views on peace, as related by Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German foreign minister, and those of the Allies as explained by Undersecretary of State Welles during their recent visits to Mussolini, presented so wide a gap that Italy could see no way of bridging it.

In the Brenner meeting, Premier Mussolini and Chancellor Hitler agreed on this point, it was stated, and discussed the means whereby peace could be achieved later. A plan was believed to have been adopted by the two dictators to confine the war to the Western Front.

Cooperation by Russia

To do this, it was said, Russia's cooperation was held to be necessary, and therefore an improvement in Italo-Russian relations was deemed advisable. With Moscow's cooperation assured, it was pointed out, the menace of a Russian invasion of the Balkans would disappear and with it the possible intervention of other powers such as Turkey who would have felt threatened by Moscow.

Teleki was presumably told that by confining the war to the Western Front, Italy and Germany hoped to reach a stalemate. If this plan succeeded, Hungary, it was said, would be certain of Italy's support at the peace conference.

In an interview granted to Italian newspapers, Teleki stated that nothing sensational would come out of his visit to Rome, which will amount only to an exchange of views. "There is a great deal to learn in Rome where one is in close and quick contact with the great events which are developing or ripening on our continent," he said.

"Country Is Patient"

Speaking of the situation in the Balkan and Danubian sectors, Teleki said that "as you may see, peace has not been disturbed, but this does not mean that there will be no problem to solve. It means that Hungary, fully aware of the difficult moment, has adopted an attitude which harmonizes with superior European necessities. My country is patient."

Hungarians Disquieted

Copyright by New York Times

Budapest, March 26.—The visit of Premier Teleki to Rome has given rise to fantastic conjectures here today. Some claim that Fuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini agreed to divide southeastern Europe into spheres of interest, allotting Hungary to the German sphere. This, of course, has been the cause of great unrest in Hungary, so that Premier Teleki is supposed to have found it necessary to ask Italy for support.

Another version suggests that the proposed German - Italian - Russian pact prompted the visit.

Graf Spee Crew Mutinied Before Scuttling, British Say

By James MacDonald
Copyright by New York Times

London, March 26.—The British admiralty declared tonight the Nazi pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee was scuttled off Montevideo because its crew refused eight times to take the ship out and finish the fight with the British man-of-war waiting outside the Uruguayan port.

As against the admiralty's official statement, it was argued in other quarters that the crew might have balked at orders for scuttling the pride of the German navy, it being pointed out that Capt. Langsdorff was reportedly reluctant to obey a command to that effect from Berlin.

The admiralty statement said when it was decided irrevocably to sink the Graf Spee in the outer harbor of Montevideo only 60 men out of a crew of more than 900 volunteered to disobey the scuttling order and go to sea to renew the engagement.

(A German official spokesman promptly labeled the statement "complete nonsense," and scoffed at the British for taking more than three months "to invent such a story.")

"Between 3 p. m. and 7:30 p. m.," on December 16, the British statement alleged, "the crew of the Spee were mustered on deck at least eight times; were harangued by one officer after another, the final appeal to the men being made by Capt. Langsdorff himself, but still the men refused to return to duty.

"During these musters the crew of the Spee broke ranks, shouted and behaved in a disorderly manner, verging on mutinuous."

Capt. Langsdorff, the British say, then went ashore to consult the German minister, and cabled Hitler. "The reply ordering the scuttling of the ship was received about midnight."

"The previous afternoon large loads of provisons had been embarked by the Spee, also a lot of lifebelts and other gear from the German merchantman, Tacoma.

"Sunday morning this process was reversed. The lifebelts and gear were all returned to the Tacoma; provisions were transferred to that ship. From noon to 5:30 Sunday, about 900 of the Spee's officers and men were also transferred to the Tacoma.

"The officers who had previously protested against the order to scuttle the ship called for volunteers from the crew to go out and fight. Only about 60 men of the crew stepped forward.

"The German colony in Buenos Aires who made much of the crew for the first two days after they had been landed there, boycotted them when the news of their refusal to meet their duty got around.

"Reports of insubordination on the part of the crew of the Spee and their refusal to obey orders have been confirmed by observers aboard . . . other vessels, both naval and mercantile, which were moored close to the Spee in Montevideo Harbor. . . ."

(In Montevideo and Buenos Aires, most officials who saw the four-day sea drama were inclined to discount this premise. The same reports were heard last December, but received no confirmation. Three neutral naval attaches expressed the belief that no merchantman was close enough to the Graf Spee to hear or observe accurately what transpired on her decks.)

Ark Royal, Reported Sunk, Visits Home After 5 Months

By James B. Reston.
Copyright by New York Times

London, March 26.—The admiralty announced tonight that the aircraft carrier Ark Royal, which the Nazis said they bombed and sank last October, had returned to her home port two weeks ago after a five-month adventure at sea and sailed again on a new assignment.

The object of the voyage home from the South Atlantic was to replenish stores and give the crew of 1,600 sailors and airmen a rest.

During her first war-time trip the Ark Royal ranged from the Arctic Ocean to the Roaring Forties, came within 15 feet of being hit by a 1,000-pound bomb; dodged two German torpedoes; intercepted three German merchantmen, and reconnoitered with her aircraft 5,000,000 square miles of ocean, mostly searching for the Admiral Graf Spee.

Capt. A. J. Power said it was true one bomb came close to the ship. Capt. Power said three German Dornier flying boats first sighted them. Pursuit planes were sent up from the carrier, he said, and shot down one of the German planes before the other two managed to call up three Heinkel bombers.

Capt. Power said all three Heinkels attacked the Ark Royal, and one tried a power-dive.

"He started from about 4,000 feet," Capt. Power said, "and pulled out at perhaps 1,000 feet. I saw the bomb leave him. It was the biggest one I have seen. From the bridge my impression was that it was not going to hit us. It landed in the sea about 15 feet from the ship's side but had it hit us it would not have sunk us."

The concussion lifted the bow slightly and the ship's helm turned, Capt. Power said. He insisted there was no damage except that a few dishes were broken.

4 Agencies Ask $8,000,000 For WPA Jobs

By John B. Oakes.
Post Staff Writer

Rumblings of a fight over 1941 WPA funds were heard in House corridors yesterday as an appropriations subcommittee began preliminary work on the relief bill.

Opening executive hearings on the measure, the subcommittee heard representatives of four Federal agencies ask for allocations of more than $8,000,000 to take care of "emergency" work necessitated by the WPA. These expenditures will come out of the relief bill instead of the regular appropriations for the respective agencies.

The General Accounting Office asked $4,600,000 to meet the "emergency" expense of supervising WPA accounts, while the Employes Compensation Commission requested $3,100,000 for claims arising from the WPA.

To pay for such services as inspection of sanitary outhouses constructed by the WPA, the Public Health Service asked $200,000; and the Civil Aeronautics Authority wanted $175,000 for its expenditures in inspecting and supervising WPA airports.

The G. A. O. request, $625,000 below the 1940 appropriation, will involve "considerable" reduction in staff, an official declared last night. On the other hand, the decrease in anticipated WPA claims from this year's figure of $5,250,000 to $3,100,000 is expected to reduce the Employes Compensation Commission staff by only about 30 individuals.

Martin Urges End of 'Waste' To Aid Defense

Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, House Republican leader, last night called for cuts in Government spending and "a sound and honest Federal budget" as a first step toward national defense.

Martin told an Upper Darby, Pa., audience that immediate needs in national defense expansion can be supplied by cutting "wasteful" expenditures, eliminating overlapping questionnaires and snooping."

At Chapel Hill, N. C., Senator Bridges, of New Hampshire, Republican candidate for the G. O. P. Presidential nomination, called the New Deal "the most irresponsible Government we have ever known."

Meanwhile, New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, entraining from New York for his fourth stump tour of the Middle West, declared Government integrity has "sunk to a new low under the New Deal." Dewey will speak tonight in St. Louis, Thursday in Chicago and beginning Friday will make a quick swing thrugh Wisconsin in advance of the April 2 primaries.

Do You Hate Being So FAT?

YES, OF COURSE YOU DO! Then Investigate the Cheno Plan. The 5-Factor Reducing Method.

Hundreds of letters from women reported a reduction in weight when other methods had failed. Some women have reduced 7 to over 11 pounds in 30 days.

Where your excess, ugly fat is due to NUTRITIONAL deficiency, lack of exercise or too high caloric diet—the Cheno Plan will help reduce your body measurements, take excess pounds off your weight, giving you a more slender, graceful figure. Victims of Nutritional obesity reduced through the waistline and hips first. They showed a marked improvement in skin and muscular tone.

Here is the Cheno Plan: Proper exercise, a low caloric diet and Cheno Combination Tablets. Cheno Combination Tablets have been on the market many years. The continued sale is due to the large number of women who have successfully reduced by this plan. The Cheno Combination Tablets are composed of Vegetable Concentrates. These organic minerals aid in oxydizing stored-up fat. Come in and see our special representative. Price: Cheno Combination Tablets $1.00, 6 boxes, $5.50.

Why lug the Drum when you can twirl the Baton?

Above is the Buick SPECIAL 4-door touring sedan $996

YOU never yet saw a band come down the street without someone out in front setting the tempo, while someone back in the crowd obediently thumped in time.

So you'll get what we mean when we ask, right out, why drive a car that's along just for the march—when you can pilot a Buick and show the others the way?

Maybe someday the others will have engines like velvet because they're electrically balanced after assembly; but Buick has them now.

Maybe tomorrow they will have coil springs all around that never need greasing, and Knee-Action in front that "gives" to the bumps—but Buick has them today.

Maybe sometime you'll get the front-hinged doors, five-foot front seat room and Foamtex cushions of the SUPER—maybe you'll get direction signals with automatic cut-off as standard equipment instead of extras—but you can get those things and a lot besides on the Buick you buy this year.

Maybe someday you'll get a car as long as Buick for the money, or with a frame as heavy without paying more; maybe sometime there'll be another eight as big and roomy and powerful that's priced like a six.

But why take a chance on those maybes when this honey's here, ready for you to take over — and when it's a Buick with all that means in staunch, precision-made goodness?

Fact is, when you step into this Buick you take over a car others will be trying to equal for years to come.

So drop in on your Buick dealer. Drop in to talk facts and figures, or drop in to see what next year's cars will try to look like.

But drop in! Soon!

Plane Builders To Meet Today On Export Plan

New Policy Expected To Open Way for Flood Of Orders From Allies

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Aircraft manufacturers from all parts of the country will meet here today with Government officials to put into action a new military plane export policy expected to open the way for a billion dollar flood of war orders.

Secretary Morgenthau's aviation coordinating committee summoned the leading plane and engine builders following an agreement by the War and Navy Departments to permit the Allies to buy our latest experimental craft and take priority on some of the planes now building for the Army and Navy.

Negotiations between the manufacturers and the British-French purchasing mission have been at a standstill because of the latter's demands for early deliveries of our latest planes and the prior reluctance of Army chiefs to release them.

To Explain Policy

At the same time, Secretary Woodring, Assistant Secretary Johnson, Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, and Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Chief of Air Corps, will appear before the House Military Affairs Committee to explain the new policy.

They are expected to testify that the armed services will benefit materially from the revised policy liberalizing foreign plane sales, stressing the benefits of mass production resulting from foreign orders, and the fact that improved models will result from the Army taking later deliveries.

A divided committee will sit in judgment of the new plan, decided on Monday after weeks of dispute in military circles. Democratic leaders of the Congressional group are ready to back the new policy, having sat in during the final deliberations downtown. Several Republican members, however, declare they will take some convincing.

Meanwhile, Secretary Edison left yesterday to witness secret war games of the Fleet in the midpacific. He will board the flagship Pennsylvania at San Diego and spend ten days observing maneuvers which are supposed to test problems raised by the European war.

Campaign Manager to Go Along

Accompanying the Navy chief are Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, who will make special observations for the Navy general board; two naval aides and Arthur Walsh, Edison's campaign manager in his candidacy for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in New Jersey.

In another defense development, President Roosevelt ordered a strict ban on unauthorized photographs which might reveal Army or Navy secrets.

He signed an executive order requiring advance permission and censorship of all photographs, sketches or maps of "vital military and naval installation and equipment."

British Fleet Units Converge in Skagerrak, Hope to Lure Nazi Warships Into Battle

By the Associated Press

London, March 26.—Britain's North Sea destroyer and submarine squadrons converged in the rock-bound Skagerrak south of Norway today apparently with the dual purpose of closing the blockade around Germany and luring the German fleet into a naval battle.

Outward aim of the naval concentrations was to halt Swedish iron ore shipments through the bottleneck between Denmark and the Scandinavian coast, but neutral naval observers believed it might serve a second purpose.

Germany might be spurred into sending her cruiser squadrons out attempting to sweep smaller British warships from the rim of the Danish peninsula and this in turn probably would bring the British fleet steaming from a northern rendezvous for the first major engagement between the two fleets.

Newspapers have clamored for a more vigorous war policy and similar urgings have been heard in Parliament.

Channel Vital in Winter

The Skagerrak arm of the North Sea, which connects with the Kattegat and the Baltic, is especially vital to Germany in winter since Swedish ore shipments must come down the Norwegian west coast from Marvik and pass through the Skagerrak to reach Germany.

Later, when the Gulf of Bothnia is ice-free, ore can be transported direct from Sweden through the Baltic, where the British fleet has not yet penetrated.

In a drive to choke off ore supplies, Britain has sunk two German cargo ships in the last week, and Oslo reports said Germany had called all outward bound boats home.

A week without Allied merchant shipping losses was announced proudly by the British admiralty today. The week ended Sunday midnight was the first without Allied merchant ship losses since the war started, though eight neutrals, including six of Danish registry, were sunk.

None of the ships sunk was in convoy, it was said.

The week's record for Britain was not completely clear, for loss of the naval trawler Loch Assater by mining was reported by the admiralty Sunday night, and in the week two merchant ships had been reported overdue and were presumed to be lost.

Oslo to Protest Anew

Oslo, March 26 (AP).—Eight or nine British destroyers hove into sight in Norwegian waters on at least two occasions on Good Friday when German ships were passing the coast, a Norwegian admiralty communique said tonight.

The Norwegian Minister in London has been instructed to lodge another strong protest with Britain against violation of Norwegian waters. A protest over two other British attempts to intercept German merchantmen in Norwegian waters was made Sunday.

The only comment on the incidents published in Norwegian papers today was in the Sjofartstidende (Shipping Gazette) which said: "Grave as the British infringements are, they are of small significance compared with the German sinkings of Norwegian ships and the killing of Norwegian sailors. It is an unnatural situation that Norwegian warships and men under these circumstances should protect German ships carrying war materials to Germany."

Baldwin to Give Piano Recital Tomorrow

Richard Baldwin, young American pianist, who was soloist with the Washington Civic Orchestra last night, will give a recital tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in Barney Neighborhood House, 470 N street southwest. The recital was arranged by Mrs. Adelbert Althouse, a member of the board of trustees. The following program is announced:

Prelude and Fugue in F major (Bach), Sonata in A flat major, Op. 110 (Beethoven), Variations and Fugue on a Theme by Handel (Brahms), Barcarolle (Chopin), Ballade in G minor (Chopin), "Reflets dans l'eau" (Debussy), Etude for the Left Hand (Blumefeld), "Mephisto Waltz" (Liszt).

Rebels Foiled, Bolivia Decrees State of Siege

Suspected Leader Of Revolt, Soldiers With Tanks at Large

La Paz, Bolivia, March 26 (AP).—Bolivia lay tonight under a state of siege proclaimed by Provisional President Carlos and an undetermined number of dissident soldiers with tanks reported at large, after two machine-guns and the army chief of staff had blocked an early morning march on the government palace.

Gen. Antenor Ichazo, the chief of staff, quelled the palace march of a rebellious regiment of fusileers and some cavalry units. Approached before dawn with an offer to take over the rebellion himself, Ichazo rapped out a flat "No!" He gathered together a handful of loyal soldiers and confronted the rebels as they converged on the palace.

Most of them were shepherded back into barracks, under arrest, while thousands of government supporters, summoned by radio, milled in the central plaza of La Paz, shouting "vivas" for the presidency.

Revolt Leader Flees

This afternoon the fusileers were drilling with their tanks under the watchful eyes of loyal officers.

Lieut. Gilberto Campero, second in command of the Fusileer Regiment and named by government authorities as one of the leaders of the conspiracy, fled to the National Military Academy, commanded by his brother, Col. Antonio Campero.

"Let them come and get me if they have enough men!" he announced.

Ichazo, despite his action in quelling the revolt, was expected in some quarters to resign.

A tight censorship was established on La Paz dispatches.

In announcing a state of siege, tantamount in most respects to martial law, Quintanilla said that upon hearing of the revolt he had adopted immediate measures which led to "peaceful submission" of the rebels.

There was nothing but tranquillity in the interior, the provisional president added.

The revolt was regarded as an expression of dissatisfaction with the election March 10, of the government candidate for president, Gen. Enrique Penaranda, former head of the army. Gen. Penaranda is to take over from Quintanilla on April 16.

Finnish Regime Ready to Resign

Helsinki, March 26 (AP).—The Finnish government was reported by informed sources tonight to be planning to resign tomorrow for the purpose of reorganization.

Premier Risto Ryti, who heads the present government, formed upon the outbreak of the Russo-Finnish war December 1, is expected to take the same post in the new regime. Foreign Minister Vaino Tanner also is slated to remain, either in his present post or as finance minister.

Torpedo Boat Does 46 M. P. H.

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, March 26.—The PT-6, Uncle Sam's newest type torpedo boat for offshore defense work, thundered along at 46 miles an hour today in its first speed test, and then was prepared for grueling trials at sea.

Naval experts watched the heavily powered 81-foot craft slash across Lake Pontchartrain, termed its performance "satisfactory" and hinted the boat might be superior to anything used by foreign powers.

It was explained the new motors were not broken in and no attempt was made to reach theoretical maximum speed of 60 miles.

The PT-6 was the first boat launched under the $5,000,000 building program authorized by Congress last year to perfect a speedy craft capable of challenging an invading fleet by the use of torpedoes launched at high speed.

Capt. A. Loring Swayse, Lieut. Comdr. W. D. Leggett, and Commander Robert P. Carney headed naval design experts who rode the pounding craft across the choppy waters.

In France and Great Britain similar craft have been dubbed "suicide boats" because of their dangerous task. American seamen who man them will receive time and a half in pay "because of the rough treatment and hard living," Carney said.

The boat carries a crew of ten, has a cruising range of 2,000 miles, is powered by three 1,250-horsepower motors, is armed with torpedo tubes, depth charges and machine guns, and costs approximately $218,000.

Official Glee Hails Ruling On Oil Tract

High Court Clears U. S. Title to 'World's Richest Square Mile'

By Edward Ryan

Interior officials yesterday were gleefully adding up their score on a Supreme Court ruling which clears the Government's title to the "most valuable square mile of land in the world," and more than $6,000,000.

The land is in California, section 36 near Fresno, but the battle for possession of its oil flow has rolled up thousands of man hours of work in Washington, while the record runs back near the turn of the century.

The Supreme Court declined for the second time to review action of a California court approving moves by Secretary Ickes to establish Government title to the land, which has been held by the Standard Oil Co. of California. Under the ruling, the plan now is to make the contested land and other areas in California, a part of the naval oil reserve.

Originally for Schools

Under the law which took California into the Union, the section in question was classified as school land, a type which could be sold by the State unless it contained minerals. Sixty years later, in 1903, section 36 had come under control of the Standard Oil Co., although oil did not start flowing until the World War.

Albert R. Fall, as Secretary of Interior, ruled that the company's title was good. The late Senator Thomas Walsh followed up with a Congressional resolution for a review of Fall's ruling, and after that the fight over possession went into the courts, where in the final rounds, Secretary Ickes was matched against his former law partner, Donald Richberg, one of the attorneys for the company.

Officials said that along with the land, some $6,100,000 in payment for oil and gas pumped from the section, will come to the Government. The money has been held in escrow pending outcome of the court contest. Officials said that nearly 5,000,000 barrels of oil and 60,000,000 cubic feet of dry gas have come from the section, while remaining deposits are thought enough to still justify description as "the most valuable square mile."

The fish, neatly packaged, appeared in the "incoming" basket one morning, as tasty a collection of white perch as you could find. He took them home, heads, tails, bones, and all, and got ready for dinner. There were several hitches. His wife had no experience in transforming whole fish into filets, neither did he. They tried every method of cutting them to pieces, finally gave up and went out for a hamburger.

Jobs: The Civil Service Commission has scheduled open examinations for the following jobs: Associate coal price analyst, $3,200; assistant analyst, $2,600, in the Bituminous Coal Division. Animal geneticist, $3,800; senior geneticist, $4,600; associate, $3,200, and assistant, $2,600, in the Bureau of Animal Industry. Aviation sheetmetal worker, $2,000, and aviation metalsmith, $7.96 to $8.92 a day, for positions at the Quantico marine base, the Norfolk Naval Air Station, and Langley Field.

Calendar. "Managing the Government's Man Power" will be the topic of an address by Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, at a dinner meeting of the Society for Personnel Administration at 6:30 p. m. Friday in the Gingham Club, 1423 Pennsylvania avenue northwest . . . Playhouse dancers will present a program of Viennese waltzes, rhumbas and the Conga, in the Departmental Auditorium tonight . . . The Social Security local of United Federal Workers in Baltimore will meet Saturday to protest economy measures hitting salaries of Government workers. The union is urging that yearly $60 increases in salaries below the $3,200 level should be in order for all workers whose services have been satisfactory.

7 Flee as Fire Razes Warren Parish Home

Front Royal, Va., March 26 (AP).—Seven inmates of the Warren County Parish Home escaped from a blaze that destroyed the big two-story frame structure last night.

The flames originated in the kitchen, and, fanned by a wintry wind, leveled the building in a short time. Gladstone Bailey was awakened by the odor of smoke and roused the others. Andy Vaught, superintendent, who occupied a separate house with his family, assisted in the exodus and took the shivering inmates to his house for the rest of the night.

Major Higbie Will Be Buried In Arlington

Funeral services for Maj. Merton Eugene Higbie, 48, War Department engineer and World War veteran, who died Monday, will be at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

A native of Rawson, Ohio, Maj. Higbie was graduated from the college of engineering of Ohio Northern University in 1913.

Following his graduation he saw action as a sergeant in the Ohio National Guard in the Mexican border campaign.

He served as a first lieutenant in the Army in the World War and was gassed and wounded in action in the Battle of the Argonne. He remained with the Army of Occupation after the close of the war. He was made a major in the National Guard on his return to this country.

Maj. Higbie had been a civil engineer in the War Department for several years. He lived at 1303 Maple View place southeast.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Bertha Higbie; his parents, the Rev. Frank E. Higbie and Mrs. Higbie, of Bowling Green, Ohio; a son, Grant Higbie, and a daughter, Miss Meredith Higbie, both of this city; a brother, Merirtt Higbie, of Toledo, Ohio; and two sisters, Miss Dorothy Higbie, of Wellesley Hills, Mass., and Mrs. Percy Thomas, of Perrysburg, Ohio.

Allies Fear Nazis Are Manning Base To Raid Pacific

Copyright by New York Times

Shanghai, March 26.—British and French naval authorities in the Far East are understood to be quite concerned over possible German submarine activity in the China seas or the Western Pacific generally starting about the middle of June.

The fear is based on reports that the Soviet Union has given Germany exclusive right to the use of Whale Bay.

According to information reaching British and French quarters here, submarines manufactured in Germany have been transported by rail to Whale Bay. It is said German technicians have been assembling such undersea craft since late November.

German police, naval and army units are said to control all of Whale Bay territory, patrolling it within a radius of 15 miles. Even Russians, it is pointed out, are not permitted to enter.

Naval experts said tonight they had received no reports on any German plan to establish a submarine base at Whale Bay. The opinion was expressed, however, that such a base, under present conditions, would not menace the United States. Reports have been received by naval officials of the visit of a few German officers to Whale Bay.

H. G. Grant Nominated Minister to Siam

President Roosevelt nominated Hugh Gladney Grant, of Alabama, yesterday to be Minister to Thailand (Siam).

Grant, secretary to Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black during Black's service in the Senate, was Minister to Albania before that country's absorption by Italy.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

PINOCCHIO IN LOTUS. That famous little fellow, "Pinocchio," is dancing in the Lotus this week with Anton Martin's puppets. A great treat for all the little folks who'll be coming downtown to see "Pinocchio" in the movies this week and have lunch or dinner with grown-ups. Other Martin puppets include doubles for Charles Laughton, Bill Robinson and Mae West. The Milray Dancers are doing a luscious Easter promenade, Felicia Shaw acrosteps prettily, Marro and Gallo do cyclone dances.

P. S. Lotus' Bill Strickland waved a baton at the opening of the new Greyhound Terminal on Monday Afternoon.

NIGHT CLUB NEWSPAPER. Eddy Mayehoff is publishing and distributing his own newspaper in the Cafe Caprice. The headlines are paralyzing!

LIE DETECTOR BLOWS UP! Shoreham diners told such terrific fibs to Count Willard Christay in the Blue Room last night that his lie detector blew up. Christy says that his lie detector is geared for little white lies, B, C and D (dam) lies, but it can't take the Ananias masterpieces wished on him by Shorehamites. Beautiful Ethel Barrymore Colt both looks and acts like her famed mother. Her thrilling contralto is at its charming best in the playful "Mr. Paginini."

GOWING GOINGS-ON. Gene Gowing, who has just concluded his gay square dance sessions in the Pall Mall Room, will present his group in a stirring sword dance in the Folk Festival, later journey all over the country to make a technicolor movie of oldtime dances.

LAST NIGHT'S OPENINGS Metronome. Gray Gordon plus orchestra and the pixie-like Rita Ray, got away to a flying start last evening in a room crowded with holiday-ing collegiates who simply ate up those tickling "Tic Toc" rhythms. The Metronome Room has been redecorated for spring in warm wine tones.

CASINO ROYAL. Betwixt Parisian swing and "yodeling jive" the new "Easter Parade" at Casino Royal is an entertainment Easter basket. Huey Liang does a handsome job of emceeing a revue that includes the Wally Wanger Girls, whirlwind dancer Billy Julian and ballroom steppers Roger and Pryor.

NEPTUNE TRIPPERS. Manager Dot O'Connell of the Neptune Room is back from Nassau with that tanned rosiness that indicates a cruise vacation, says she feels so fine she "could pull a house up by its roots" . . . Bill Levy, boss o' the Neptune drinkables department, has just hopped a Miami-bound plane.

TOP FLIGHT MELODIES. Lounge Riviera. "Every Sunday Afternoon," contagious tune from "Higher and Higher," being sung in the romance style by Ray Donahue.

Troika. "I Haven't Got Faith in

ETHEL BARRYMORE COLT, now singing at the Shoreham

Myself," with Lee Kerry giving the vocals just proper quota of playfulness.

Salle Versailles. The special version of "I Concentrate On You," being played by Burrus Williams' orchestra. They surely make a yard of music out of it.

Mayfair. The Rhythm Boys' legend about "Natasha," the lass who started with Nijinsky, wound up with Minsky.

Robin Hood. Lynne Allison's caroling of "Kerry Dancers," an Irish song that came from Ireland and not from Tin Pan Alley.

Hi Hat. The haunting blend of "Two Guitars," "Brown Eyes" and "A Gypsy Makes His Violin Cry" being played by the Diplomats.

Madrillon. Carr and Don's 1940 trimming up of "Little Brown Jug." Sounds ten times jollier than it did in grandfather's day.

ALOHA! That's what we'll soon be saying to Shar-Zad's Bill McCune, one of the most popular band leaders who's ever come to town. Bill leaves Washington the last of next week for New York's Essex House. His band will be succeeded by another M. A. C. orchestra.

SPRING COSTUME ITEMS. Eileen George, of the Anchor Room, is wearing a Naval Academy anchor sent her by a beau in Honolulu . . . Vicente de la Garza, of the King Cole Room, is togged out in an authentic Mexican suit that must have cost many pesos . . . The chic waitresses down at the Gay 90's are wearing Vivian Leigh costumes . . . The Nightingale bandstand is dressed up with a new piano that affords special inspiration to pianist-arranger Rod Raffell.

TASTY SNACKS. Lent may be over, but those egg-and-anchovy sandwiches in the Harrington Tavern continue to be a zestful tid-bit . . . The tamales you get in Dick's Grill are imported from Mexico City. Manager Dick Ashby says they're much better than any you can get in this country.

COME ONE, COME ALL! Put on your new spring bonnet and head down River Bend way this eve. For it's Piggy Party night again and you can eat enough in one evening to last you for the rest of the week. Dance to George Stein's music during intervals between eating.

Padlock Suit Filed On 4 G St. Houses

Steps to padlock four houses in the 400 block of G street northwest were taken in District Court yesterday. A complaint against the premises was filed by Assistant United States Attorney Allen J. Krouse.

Krouse described the buildings as "houses of prostitution" and named five women as defendants. A show cause rule is returnable April 5, he said.

U.S. Companies Lose Mexican Chicle Land

Whole Investment In 1,500,000 Acres May Be Lost

By Arnaldo Cortesi.
Copyright by New York Times

Mexico City, March 26.—Three American corporations whose stock is widely held throughout the Eastern States have been deprived by presidential decree of 1,500,000 acres of land in the state of Chiapas.

The corporations face the prospect of losing their whole investment because the Mexican government claims they never had valid titles to their lands and are therefore debarred from compensation.

Those concerned are the Laguna Corporation, the Mexican Gulf Land & Lumber Co. and the Pennsylvania Campeche Land & Lumber Co. They are among the largest producers of chicle, used in the manufacture of chewing gum.

If their lands had been expropriated under the Mexican agrarian law, the procedure followed in almost all land seizures so far, the corporations would be able to claim compensation in accordance with the agreement reached between the United States nad Mexican governments by an exchange of notes November 9 and 12, 1938, setting up an agrarian claims commission.

This time, however, the Mexican government varied its method of attack. It claimed to have found a flaw in the original land grant made in the last century by the late President Porfirio Diaz. It therefore maintains that the corporations never were legal owners of the lands, although they have been in undisputed possession for periods of 35 to 40 years.

Eagleton Becomes Engineer of Art Gallery Today

Sterling P. Eagleton will become chief engineer of the National Gallery of Art today, the Public Buildings Administration announced yesterday.

A farewell luncheon was given yesterday in honor of Eagleton, since 1937 superintendent of the Interior group of public buildings, by associates in the PBA and National Park Service. Until last July, when the PBA was created, public building maintenance was under the park service.

A graduate of Lehigh University, Eagleton formerly was construction inspector for the Architect of the Capitol and, before entering Government service, an employe of the Carrier Engineering Corporation.

Board of Trade members pictured at yesterday's luncheon meeting in the Willard Hotel

The Washington Board of Trade membership committee yesterday paid its annual tribute to "old timers" of the organization at a luncheon in the Willard Hotel.

C. Hayward Marshall, present chairman of the committee, relinquished his duties as presiding officer to George Plitt, sr., who was president of the Board of Trade in 1911 and chairman of membership in 1923.

It was a jovial "get together" with no formal speeches. There was entertainment and stories and each "old timer" came in for his share of tribute from officers of the present regime.

Present to receive plaudits were: Past presidents of the Board of Trade: 1899, Theodore W. Noyes; 1912, Arthur C. Moses; 1913, Edward H. Droop; 1923, Edward F. Colladay; 1925, Samuel J. Prescott; 1926, J. Harry Cunningham; 1927, Edwin C. Graham; 1928, W. W. Everett; 1929, Edward J. Murphy; 1930, George Plitt, sr.; 1931, George W. Offutt; 1933, Claude W. Owen; 1934, Robert V. Fleming; 1935, John Saul; 1936, Edgar Morris; 1937, Edward F. Colladay; 1938, Francis G. Addison, jr., and 1939, Lawrence E. Williams.

Past membership chairmen: 1912, C. J. Gockeler; 1913-14, H. Clifford Bangs; 1915, Edward F. Colladay; 1916, Charles F. Crane; 1923, George Plitt, sr.; 1925, George Miller, 1927, John Saul; 1929, William R. Ellis; 1930, Jerome F. Barnard; 1931, Milton F. Schwab; 1932, Elmore T. Burdette; 1933, Fred A. Smith; 1935, Wallace B. Robinson; 1936, Granville Gude; 1937, Karl E. Jarrell; 1938, W. Crosdale Witts, and 1939, C. Hayward Marshall.

Song Writers Debate Penalty for Suggestive Lyrics

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, March 26.—Leading craftsmen of Tin Pan Alley, that section of Broadway and adjacent side streets devoted to the production of the Nation's popular songs, debated for nearly two hours today at the annual meeting of the Songwriters' Protective Association, on what to do about the writers of suggestive, double-entendre lyrics.

After a heated discussion, punctuated by frequent and vigorous pounding with the gavel by Irving Caesar, president of the S. P. A. and author of "Tea for Two" and "Is It True What They Say About Dixie?" a committee retired to an ante room and brought back a resolution providing for the appointment of an ethics committee, with power to discipline any member found guilty of "deliberately writing an obscene, lewd or lascivious song."

Obscenity for Taverns

The resolution will be submitted to the council of the S. P. A. and a subsequent meeting of the general membership in April.

There weren't many writers of obviously filthy songs, Caesar said, but recently he had observed a tendency to create questionable material for phonograph machines operated in taverns.

"I consider song writing a very noble art," Caesar said. "I love it. It's my life. I don't intend to work for copyright or contractual protection for anyone who writes dirty songs for a cafe audience of two people or a radio audience of two million."

Urges Expulsion

He urged expulsion from the association as the penalty.

The audience stired restlessly, and half a dozen members were on their feet before Caesar had finished.

Andy Razoff, colored author of "Ain't Misbehavin" was the most outspoken of the group opposed to Caesar's views. He admitted he had written some songs that might come under the ban, and probably would write more. The double entendre lyric came along before the association was organized, Razoff said, and would be sung down the halls of time after the S. P. A. had ended its career.

Fair Trade, Race Bill Reports Due In Committee

The Tydings fair trade practices bill and possibly the Reynolds race track measure will be reported to the Senate District Committee today when it meets at 10:30 a. m. in the committee room of the Capitol.

Chairman William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, is prepared to fight both bills, but indications are that Senator Millard Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, has sufficient support to obtain a favorable report on the fair trade practice bill.

Public hearings have been held on both the Tydings and Reynolds bills by subcommittees.

Assault On Home Rule

Members of the Senate apparently intend to indulge in another unprincipled scramble for the Negro vote. As usual, this contest will be labeled a fight against lynching. But actually the so-called anti-lynching bill is only a snare designed to bring its sponsors unearned political support at the polls.

If the bill were merely ordinary bait for voters it would be of little importance. Many such measures are passed by Congress on the eve of major political campaigns. In this instance, however, Negro votes would be purchased at a terrific cost to the American system of government.

The bill should be designated: "A measure to promote totalitarianism in the United States." Its effects would not be to prevent lynching. That barbarous practice has been virtually stamped out already. This bill could serve only to break down our dual system of government, which gives the people of the States the right of managing their own affairs, and hasten the concentration of all power in the Federal Government.

Enactment of this measure would subject State and county law-enforcement officers to Federal penalties for any failure to do their duty in lynching cases. It would penalize counties, too, for such failure of their law-enforcement officers, in flagrant disregard of the fact that counties are creatures of the States and not the Federal Government. If Congress can take over these local functions, Senator Connally points out, it can "destroy the counties within the States and the States themselves."

It is doubtful whether any legitimate excuse for such an assault upon the American system of government could be found. Certainly the lynching record of recent years offers none. Senator Wagner attempts to justify this new drive for Negro votes by a claim that 73 lynchings have occurred in the last six years. That statement is grossly misleading.

The Tuskegee Institute reports 25 lynchings during the last four years. But the really significant fact is that violent slayings of this type were reduced to three in 1939. Two victims were colored and one white. These lynchings were confined to two States. Yet the sponsors of this bill are willing to set a precedent that would jeopardize the rights of all the States to direct their own internal affairs.

Heinous as it is, lynching is no longer a serious menace. The States have now clearly demonstrated their ability to cope with it. The real question confronting the Senate in connection with this bill is whether a dangerous step toward centralized power should be sanctioned to appease a group of voters who have been much aggrieved in the past. To inject that issue into the politics-charged atmosphere of the present session is a shameful abuse of legislative responsibility.

Back In Service

The mystery of the sudden departure from New York last week of the Queen Mary and the Mauretania, two of the newest and finest of Britain's fleet of luxury liners, is now by way of being cleared up. The fact that the latter vessel has now passed through the Panama Canal confirms the inference that both vessels will be used to transport troops from Australasia to Europe.

A little while ago it looked as though these ships, together with the unfinished Queen Elizabeth which sought haven in New York recently, would be kept at their piers in the metropolis for the duration of the war. Such enforced idleness is costly. But it also insures preservation of a costly capital investment.

Apparently the British authorities changed their minds on this matter. Great as the risk of having these huge floating targets on the high seas, Britain's need of bottoms is such that the London government has finally deemed it advisable to put the ships back in service. The Mauretania and especially the Queen Mary, one of the largest vessels afloat, can replace a number of smaller ships which the Allies need as freight carriers. And the passage from Australasia to Suez, under convoy against raiders, does not involve unusual risks.

In sending the Mauretania and the Queen Mary back to sea the British are tacitly admitting that their merchant fleet is suffering heavily from German punishment. At the same time, this action suggests that the Allies are now sufficiently convinced of the effectiveness of their convoy system to navigate two extremely costly vessels in waters where their command is scarcely subject to challenge.

Uprooting Monopoly

Two lusty blows against monopoly and restraint of trade have been struck by the courts during the last two days. First came the decision of the Supreme Court in the Ethyl Gasoline case, striking down the license system through which gasoline prices have been controlled and competition suppressed. And yesterday Judge Peyton Gordon of the District Court held that labor unions are subject to the restraints of the Sherman Act.

Monopoly fostered by control of patents has long been a subject of grave concern among students of our economic system. Protection of inventors' rights through patents is not under attack. An industrial society must encourage invention to maintain its own virility. But there is a vast difference between protecting the rights of inventors and permitting use of those rights to establish far-flung monopolies only remotely related to the original patent.

Some better means of controlling the use of patents may be worked out by the Temporary National Economic Committee. In the meantime, however, the Supreme Court has stripped the owners of patents of the assumed right to regulate prices and suppress competition among the purchasers of patented articles. It found that owners of the ethyl fluid patent have been requiring licenses of the country's leading oil refiners as well as jobbers who handle gasoline processed by this method. To obtain licenses jobbers had to accept a "code of ethics" requiring them to follow the price policies of powerful oil companies.

Such restraints upon competition obviously do not operate in the public interest. General application of the rule which the court has laid down at the request of the Department of Justice should have a salutary effect upon the prices of some patented articles and upon that part of our economic system where free enterprise still prevails.

Judge Gordon's decision that officials of the Drivers, Chauffeurs and Helpers Union must answer charges of conspiring to restrain trade occasions no surprise. In view of the Court of Appeals' recent opinion that restraints upon the lawful practice of medicine are forbidden by the Sherman Act, the lower court could not have reasonably maintained that labor groups are free to impose such restraints upon trade.

The court found that three companies operating concrete-mixing trucks had binding contracts with the Operating Engineers Union. The Drivers and Chauffeurs are accused of conspiring to upset that arrangement and substitute drivers from its own ranks on the "mixer" trucks. Judge Gordon concludes that this object is an illegitimate effort to restrain trade and interferes with the collective bargaining rights of the engineers' union.

If sabotage of this kind can be effectively restrained under the antitrust laws, the building industry will be freed from one of its most serious handicaps. Thurman Arnold's courageous attack upon monopoly on many fronts is yielding good returns. With the sympathetic cooperation of the courts, he is making notable progress in uprooting monopoly.

Planes For The Allies

In agreeing to permit the Allies to obtain the latest type of American warplanes, including some 600 now under construction for the military services, the War and Navy Departments are following a wholly reasonable course.

The war has hastened technical advances in airplane construction. Planes which today are the last word in speed, maneuverability and fighting capacity are certain to be outdated by the time the war ends. And should the war end in an Allied victory the danger of an attack on this hemisphere by any foreign power would be nonexistent.

In the meantime, however, the expansion of airplane production due to Allied war orders will ultimately enable the United States to build up its air defenses rapidly and efficiently, should the results of the European struggle increase rather than diminish the dangers to American security.

By its action, therefore, the Administration is killing two birds with one stone. In the first place, it is developing our air defense at its weakest points—plant and production capacity and the lack of adequate numbers of skilled workers. A large airplane industry, as the French have discovered, cannot be improvised at the moment of urgency. In our case, however, a good deal of the experimentation and the expansion is indirectly being paid for by the Allies.

In the second place, by helping the Allies to build up their own air forces and thus make their position stronger vis-a-vis Germany, the United States is also improving its first line of defense against potential aggression in the New World.

When the air force expansion program was voted by Congress, Europe was still at peace. The authorization was for a rapid expansion of air defense to meet an emergency the outlines of which were as forbidding as they were vague.

Since then, Europe has plunged into war. The outcome of that war remains in doubt. For the time being, however, this country and this hemisphere are wholly safe from attack. The present emphasis on expansion of plant, rather than the immediate wholesale expansion of an air force which may be made obsolete by wartime experience, is thus a rational procedure.

Bigger, Better Bombs

Various reflections are engendered by the report of experiments conducted yesterday with the new Barlow bomb, a destructive device which is apparently foolproof so far as accidental explosion is concerned, but terribly deadly when set off intentionally.

It is, of course, stimulating to realize that American inventive ingenuity can outstrip that of other nations in developing what seems to be the bomb of dreams. And it is comforting, from certain viewpoints, to know that the War and Navy departments are giving the inventor "every cooperation."

Yet the feeling lingers that the national genius might conceivably be more happily occupied than in the production of lethal weapons paradoxically described as both "safe and destructive." And Mr. Barlow evidently had this thought in mind when he told the reporters that his bomb is a "defensive" weapon, not intended "to kill a lot of women and children."

The decision on that, unfortunately, will not rest with Mr. Barlow. Indeed it never rests with an inventor to determine the uses, for good or evil, to which the product of his skill and ingenuity will be put. Nor is the inventor to be blamed if the exploitation of his device takes channels very different from his anticipation, or his desire.

An attribute of Mr. Barlow's bomb, it seems, is that it will destroy life more completely and more efficiently than the most streamlined product now available on the shelves of Mars. This, however, is not yet demonstrated to complete satisfaction, if the phrase is permissible.

To prove its truly superlative qualities the Barlow bomb will soon have to be dropped in a rabbit warren, a sheep pen or some other animal concentration roughly paralleling the gregarious characteristics of the human race, for which all bombs are really designed.

That will not be nice for our four-footed friends. And yet their martyrdom will not be without a certain sardonic consolation. Could the antivivisectionists, for instance, properly oppose such an experiment, designed solely to test the destructive qualities of the instrument for human life?

Safety In The Air

None is better qualified to comment on the impressive record achieved by this country's air transport lines last year than Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, whose spectacular flight 13 years ago created a previous milestone in aviation history. "Our hopes have become facts with amazing rapidity," he wrote to Chairman Robert H. Hinckley of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, "and in many instances the facts have already outdistanced our vision."

A few impressive figures tell the story. They are the more significant when it is considered that air travel was substantially increased in the same year that elapsed without serious injury to either passenger or crew. Transport lines flew more than 87,000,000 miles, or an increase of 16,000,000 miles over any preceding year, and carried more than 2,000,000 passengers, an increase of 46 per cent.

The distance covered is equal to flying ten times around the world at the equator every day of the year. These miles were covered in every kind of weather under every conceivable circumstance, almost as many of them by night as by day.

Into such an achievement went all the hopes, efforts and sacrifices of pioneers in the industry as well as the hard work of the personnel in the airlines of today. In addition, a large factor was the cooperation of the lines with each other and with the CAA in introducing new safety features and eliminating risky competition in bad weather.

Impressive as this record is, it happily represents much more than a single year's effort. In it lies the gradually increasing confidence of the public in air travel. And on it also there can be built standards for an ever broadening future.

Gratitude

From The Christian Science Monitor.

Doubtless the hearts of thousands warmed at the story of how 800 WPA workers in Rhode Island made Easter an occasion for gifts and expressions of gratitude for one young girl. All year she had waved to them every day as they went rolling by her home in their trucks.

Why do people smile at the simple recounting of a tale of loving and disinterested reciprocity? Is it not because they are always glad to have their faith in the intrinsic goodness of humanity renewed by some glowing instance of it?

A wonderful world will be built when the acts of nations toward each other extend a brotherly hand along the way. Gratitude is like the snowdrop and the crocus, which spring up in unexpected places, though we know that they were planted there long ago by a thoughtful gardener.

Another Necking Party

The Gibbon Case

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I want to express my appreciation to you for the excellent editorial entitled "Smoke Without Fire," which appeared in The Post of March 24.

As a member of the faculty of George Washington University, I am convinced that the charges against the university are quite unfounded. It surely is not true that we are living in an atmosphere "of almost unbelievable sense of insecurity, distrust, and fear." That is just an emotional charge without basis.

There always is a small group of malcontents among the student body and alumni who seem to get personal delight in attacking anything that comes along. This excuse gives them the opportunity to test their strength and to glory in their publicity—at the expense of an outstanding educational institution.

We are working hard to help President Marvin create even a greater institution here, and we profoundly resent the type of destructive attacks that have been made against President Marvin and ourselves.

It is a real pleasure, therefore, to read an editorial that shows keen insight and good understanding.

IRA B. HANSEN,
Washington, March 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In the editorial, "Smoke Without Fire," which appeared in Sunday's Post, the editor appeared to be more concerned about the position of the undoubtedly "progressive" Dr. Marvin than in presenting a fair picture of the factors involved.

To students familiar with the run-of-the-mill ("turn on the record when the class begins, and turn it off when the bell rings") professors, including a number of "technically" perfect Ph. D.'s, the loss of a professor like Miss Gibbon, who has the ability to inspire interest and thought among her students, is a major calamity.

We should like to point out that the rigid adherence to the "technicalities," of which The Post so obviously approves, is in this case defeating the very purpose of education, in the view of every one who has had anything to say on the subject—with the possible exceptions of the "progressive" Dr. Marvin and The Post.

To suggest, as The Post does, that the qualities necessary to get a Ph. D., or to "accomplish the published fruit of research" are necessarily the qualities that make a top-flight teacher, is a non-sequitur of the first water, and this would still be true though every university in the country required it.

Contrary to what seems to be The Post's opinion, it is our view that teachers are born and not made, and that having found one, it is the height of folly to let her slip away merely for the unwillingness to compromise a technicality.

We are losing one of our best professors through what appears to us to be the administrative muddleheadedness of Dr. Marvin. We believe The Post is either uninformed, misinformed, or deliberately perverting the picture of what is happening in our school. We realize that no one ever won a battle with an editor in the editor's newspaper, but we want to state as emphatically as possible that we disagree completely with The Post's position.

WILLIAM M. THOMPSON.
MARVIN W. BINGHAM.
Washington, March 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I write to thank you for the editorial which appeared in The Sunday Post about the Gibbon case at the George Washington University. I think you made a fair presentation of the situation as it really is.

PAUL W. BOWMAN,
Associate Professor of Biology.
Washington, March 25.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your editorial shows that you either do not know the facts in the case of Miss Gibbon at George Washington University or that you ignore them purposely. Dr. Marvin is a very charming person, but as you must know, wherever there is one-man power there is apt to be abuse of it.

Did you ever work under a one-man dictatorship and have your whole future depend upon his whim? That is not a healthy condition for university professors. It makes cowards and favor curriers out of them. It makes small men who have to compromise with their own sense of what is right and decent in order not to "get in bad." Do you want our university leaders to be men of that type?

George Washington University looks very big and grand with all that impressive attendance of students. Why doesn't it attract "big" men to its faculty? I don't mean big in the sense of men who have a big name. I mean big as the opposite to petty. When you speak of Dr. Marvin's vigorous and progressive leadership I believe you are really putting the emphasis on material aspects. You don't need pretty brick walls to make a great university. All you need is a few great or near-great teachers.

Talk to university professors in confidence. All the bad, unhealthy conditions are not in the mills and factories of this country. It is hard enough for truth of this kind to come out. Don't try to smother it when it does.

A GRADUATE OF GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY.
Chevy Chase, Md., March 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

"Smoke Without Fire" is literally and figuratively impossible. We believe that The Post has, unfortunately, failed to detect the very real fire which is causing the smoke in the case of Assistant Prof. Martha Gibbon.

Miss Gibbon's published statement to the American Association of University Professors is in sharp contrast to certain statements in your editorial, and is widely at odds with the implications of your comment.

Firstly, Miss Gibbon submitted her resignation when her immediate superior, Prof. George Winchester Stone, so advised; it is immensely significant that Prof. Stone had come almost directly from an interview with President Marvin to see Miss Gibbon. Such advice would, in most cases, be accepted as compelling a resignation.

Secondly, nowhere in the "Faculty Code" is the attainment of the Ph.D. or the publication of the fruits of research made iron-clad criteria for promotion to the associate professorship. In the instant case, Miss Gibbon has stated that President Marvin advised her against seeking the Ph.D. and told her that lack of that degree would not stand in the way of her progress.

As to the broader aspects of the situation at George Washington, may we suggest that Dr. Marvin is not being subjected to criticism for this one case; it is the constant recurrence of this type of case, which strangely enough finds as inevitable victims those who have been liberal or who have refused to be "yes men," which indicates that academic freedom is the real issue both in the Gibbon case and in the request by the alumni committee for a full investigation of President's Marvin's regime at the George Washington University.

CHARLES L. COLTMAN.
Washington, March 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

One would think that after a series of letters had drawn the Martha Gibbon case to your attention, you would make a serious effort to present a true picture of this matter and not offer the lame apology for Dr. Marvin that appeared in your Sunday editorial entitled "Smoke Without Fire."

When a teacher with the recognized talents of Miss Gibbon, who has earned the respect and devotion of the students, alumni and faculty of George Washington University, is compelled to tender her resignation from a lifetime career, I believe that this is a serious matter and one with which the public rightfully should be concerned.

It seems to me that your paper would be serving the public interest if a sincere effort were made to make known the conditions that impelled Miss Gibbon's resignation. It is curious that you should attempt to whitewash Dr. Marvin and discourage an investigation by the American Association of University Professors when you admit that "any administration, public or private, is the better for general interest and fair criticisms of its policies."

The healthy, spontaneous reaction of the students and alumni is a glowing tribute to Miss Gibbon and to the cause of academic freedom. It is unfortunate that you mistake this feeling for "promoted publicity." MARY SCHLESINGER.
Washington, March 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your paper has, during the last week, given considerable space to letters from admirers and supporters of Miss Martha Gibbon, who recently resigned from George Washington University's faculty, charging that after 11 years of service there a grave injustice had been done her.

As a former student of Miss Gibbon I have no flaws to pick in Miss Gibbon's factual presentation of material in her classes but I and a number of my friends do object to her social views. During the Spanish war Miss Gibbon had the audacity to put on the required reading list in her classes the radical magazines, the Nation and the New Republic. She also took the liberty of stressing her sympathy for the Red government of Madrid. A number of us, finding her views too objectionable after a time, lodged a protest with Dr. Marvin.

From the university's point of view, I think many people will agree that the university has the right to dispense with the services of any teacher, regardless of the time the teacher has been employed. If the university desires to hire a more conservative teacher, I feel sure that prerogative is within its powers. LEE C. PATTON.

Alexandria's Election

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The residents of the fast-growing City of Alexandria are much disturbed, and rightly so, about the way business is conducted by our city council. That there could be improvement which would redound to the benefit of the taxpayers goes without saying.

On Tuesday, April 2, the voters will have a chance to correct many faults by going to the polls and voting. Conditions will be improved, no matter who is selected from the new candidates offering themselves. Let me remind you—don't scratch any name. Place an X in front of your choice. You can vote for one man from your ward, and three at large—no more.

If you forget everything else on April 2, don't forget to come to the help of those who want to see a better-ruled city, and vote.

School Spirit

When you work the day shift on a morning newspaper, when you haven't yet been assigned a beat which mercifully keeps you away from the office, and when, moreover, you are female and thus traditionally allergic to the blood and thunder sometimes encountered on police stories—well, your day is apt to consist of interviewing bores and madmen, in about equal proportions.

It was a fine spring morning when Miss Prim came into the city room with her bulging brief case. I murmured mentally, "Spinster schoolmarm, probably from one of the more elite young ladies' seminaries, out for a little free publicity for Alma Mater. Boring, but not mad."

Following the boss' pointed pencil, she bore down on me, trim felt sailor, gray tweed suit and all. "Miss Vera Prim, representing the Barbara Frietchie Seminary," she articulated with precision. I pulled up a chair and wondered what to do with my chewing gum. After settling her in the chair and the gum in a vacant molar cavity, I leaned back and prepared to be bored for a period of at least an hour.

"As you may know," she went on, "the Barbara Frietchie Seminary this June celebrates the fiftieth anniversary of its founding and the twenty-fifth year of the presidency of Miss Belle Southern. I wish your help in preparing an article which will bring something of the school's history before the public notice."

I intimated I would do my best to write a story about the school if Miss Prim could furnish some material——

The briefcase popped open and delivered itself of a neatly typed historical outline, fully labeled photographs of the school grounds and personnel and a detailed program of the anniversary events. "I believe this material will answer your requirements," she said unnecessarily. "Of course I realize you cannot be sure in advance as to the date on which the article will appear, but if you could give me some idea—the girls will want to order extra copies——"

"Miss Prim," I replied with conviction, "you may look for the story this Sunday."

She apologized for taking up so much of my time (three minutes by the city room clock) and walked briskly away. "Well?" the boss' eyebrows inquired when she had left. "Smartest school teacher I ever met," I replied, and tackled the history of the Barbara Frietchie Seminary enthusiastically.

Monday's mail brought an appreciative note from Miss Prim. "The girls have been talking of nothing but your fine article," it read. "We all agree that you have caught the spirit of our school."

I modestly showed the letter to everyone in the office and turned to other things. But not for long. Wednesday Miss Prim and briefcase returned. With a suspicion of moisture in her eyes, she heaped more praise on the article and the good it had done for her school.

"Now, in this week's article," she continued in a more businesslike tone, "I thought you might like to mention the appreciation fund to which alumnae are contributing in honor of Miss Southern. The chairman of the fund committee is Mrs. Aloysius Bigfellow, wife of the Ambassador to Rootabaga . . ."

"Miss Prim," I said when she had finished, "you ought to be a New York press agent. I don't think the desk will want another story this week, but I'll see that it changes its mind."

She blushed and fiddled with her pince-nez. Next week she came in with a complete advance story on the anniversary pageant, all the stars of which seemed to be local girls. She also had with her aproximately 50 photographs of the school's more photogenic pretties, dolled up in period costumes. "Rotogravure, do you think?" she suggested humbly.

Rotogravure it was. By the date of the anniversary that school had received as much publicity as a Community Chest campaign.

On the day of the final banquet Miss Prim paid her last call. This time her briefcase contained only a carbon copy of a letter she had just mailed to the publisher, expressing her gratitude on behalf of the school and commenting on the high caliber of his young lady reporter. "But what I really had in mind, my dear, was to invite you to the banquet tonight as my guest."

The boss gave me the evening off. "You might as well get a free meal out of Lavender and Old Lace," he added in a tone which irritated me.

Miss Prim, wearing lavender lace, met me at the entrance to the banquet hall. "I just thought I would point out the nearest telephone, in case you should want to dictate a sentence or two about the party to your office," she said casually. I cast a rueful glance at the telephone and accompanied her into the hall.

Although I was seated at her right, I saw little of Miss Prim during the dinner. She was busy guiding news photographers in the direction of Miss Southern and blandly telling them she had seen nothing of Mrs. Aloysius Bigfellow, who had picked that week to sue the Ambassador for divorce.

She returned to the table when the toasts began. As the girls raised their punch glasses to the speaker of the evening and to various prominent alumnae, she extracted a card from her petit-point evening bag. Nudging me unceremoniously, she whispered, "You've been a big help, pal. If you ever hit the big town, come up and see me."

The name on the card was not Miss Vera Prim. The address read, "Brown, Brown, Brown & Holstein, Public Relations Consultants, 75 Broadway."

I turned to ask her a few dozen questions, but decided against it. She made such a quaint picture, in her lavender lace, as she raised her glass and said with emotion, "To Alma Mater!"

The Case For Labor

By William Green

A. F. of L. And Unions

WESTBROOK PEGLER'S charge that the American Federation of Labor condones and protects dishonest unionism is a deliberate falsehood.

The American Federation of Labor denounces the miserable few who manage to worm their way into the labor movement for dishonest purposes and personal advancement. We call upon our affiliated unions to root out and expel any individual found guilty of a betrayal of trust. In addition, we call upon the constituted public authorities of our cities, States and nation to enforce the law that applies to all our citizens without fear or favor.

The American Federation of Labor is a union of trade unions. It is composed of the following groups of organizations:

One hundred and six national and international unions, which have 33,744 local unions.

Forty-nine State federations of labor (including Puerto Rico).

Eight hundred and six city central bodies.

One thousand five hundred and sixty-eight directly affiliated local trade and Federal labor unions.

Four departments, which have 942 local councils.

THE NATIONAL and international unions, many of which antedate the American Federation of Labor itself, hold charters of affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, which gives them full autonomy and full authority to govern their own internal affairs. Their relation to the American Federation of Labor is like that of the States to the Federal Government. Their elected officers are responsible to the members of the union, not to the American Federation of Labor. The officers of the American Federation of Labor have no legal or constitutional authority to supersede the officers of a national or international union or to give them orders. The American Federation of Labor has no power of compulsion over these unions. Their association with the American Federation of Labor is an entirely voluntary one.

That is as it should be. The underlying principle of the American Federation of Labor is voluntarism. These unions are represented in the annual conventions of the American Federation of Labor on the basis of their membership. They can, if they wish, vote to change the constitution of the American Federation of Labor so as to give the central authority police powers over them. They have not done so and they probably will not do so because they are jealous of their independence. They fear dictatorship. They reason that in a democratic organization supreme power should be vested in the membership rather than a small group of officers at the top.

Under these circumstances, if control of a national or international union passes into bad hands the American Federation of Labor must rely on the public authorities and the membership of the individual union to correct the situation. True, the other organizations in the American Federation of Labor can vote to expel a union from the federation, but that would punish the members of the union rather than the real culprits. That is not a cure, but amputation.

Experience has demonstrated that cases of this kind are extremely rare and that they are quickly remedied. Crooks cannot get away with it indefinitely in unions any more than in public life. The members of organized labor feel they are capable of governing their own unions. They do not consider it wise to sacrifice self-government to dictatorship for the sake of protection from the possible danger of racketeers.

THE AMERICAN Federation of Labor does have power to regulate to some extent the affairs of directly affiliated Federal labor unions, State federations of labor and city central bodies. This power is effectively exerted whenever the necessity arises. I challenge Mr. Pegler or anyone else to point out a single case where the American Federation of Labor failed to act against wrongdoing in any of these organizations over which it possesses regulatory powers.

Mr. Pegler further charges that the American Federation of Labor demands public prosecution of union offenders in one breath and then, in the next, opposes the current antitrust campaign against unions conducted by Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold.

The American Federation of Labor does oppose this campaign. It will never agree that organized labor comes within the scope of the Sherman Antitrust Act which was adopted to break up corporate and financial trusts. When this law was applied against unions, the American Federation of Labor secured the enactment of the Clayton Act which specifically exempted labor unions from the provisions of the Sherman Act.

The American Federation of Labor and its affiliated unions condemn collusion, price-rigging and monopolistic combines between local unions and employers. We insist, however, that such manifestly illegal practices, if they exist, should be prosecuted under the properly applicable laws, not the antitrust laws. We fear, with good reason, that the antitrust laws can be used as an instrument to destroy organized labor and place it under the thumb of the Federal Government. No legal prestidigitation can ever convince us that working men and women associated in a union for their self-protection against the entrenched power of industry and capital constitute a trust inimical to the welfare of the Nation.

President Roosevelt recently declared that most newspaper columnists are wrong 80 per cent of the time. I would raise that estimate to 100 per cent with respect to Mr. Pegler's baseless attacks on the American Federation of Labor.

THURMAN ARNOLD

Is he justified in his prosecution of labor unions under the antitrust laws? See today's article by President Green of the A. F. of L., in reply to the recent strictures by Westbrook Pegler concerning that body

Television Opera

TELEVISION IS making headway. More and more homes are now getting their radio noises illustrated.

It is possible not only for the family to argue over the radio words, but over the radio characters.

Grand opera got its first television broadcast the other night. It proved that it is entirely possible to throw a fat tenor's voice into your living room, and the tenor with it.

If you have never had grand opera stars around the house, it was quite a treat. They made the trip by television easily. A few minutes after the overture the old bungalow was full of 'em.

All of which shows it is no longer possible to take your opera or leave it alone. They're delivering it now the same as milk.

You just turn a switch and—presto!—you're as good as in the diamond horseshoe.

Elmer Twitchell is so sensitive to the conventions and such a slave to form that he dresses for television opera.

"It is a nuisance to dress for a radio program," said Elmer today, "but I never can get used to opera in any form unless I am all dolled up for it. I climbed into my dress clothes as soon as I found that Pagliacci was coming over the radio. I just couldn't help it."

But what made Elmer sore was the way Mrs. Twitchell reacted to opera by television. She went out and bought a new ermine wrap for it.

"Believe it or not," declared Elmer today, "that woman has me run ragged. Do you know what she proposed when it was announced that the Metropolitan Opera Company would broadcast an opera by television, right into our living room?"

"She put on all her jewelry, had a facial, spent four hours having her hair done and then insisted that we go over to the corner garage, hire a sedan with chauffeur and be driven right up to our radio set in style!"

Still, Mr. Twitchell thinks that listening to the opera by television will never be a complete success unless a way can be found to take flashlight pictures by television, too. "Who wants any part of grand opera without the sensation that photographers are present?" he demanded.

Elmer Twitchell says that if the Finns hadn't surrendered they might have gotten into trouble.

Strangling The NLRA

By Ernest K. Lindley

Congress And Board

MANY PROPOSALS for amending the National Labor Relations Act are before Congress. Some are complex. Some, in the proper mixture, would amount to repeal of the law. But nobody is openly advocating its repeal.

Without waiting for the orderly consideration of proposed amendments, the House Appropriations Subcommittee has apparently decided that the law is not worthy of effective enforcement. It has set out to dispose of it by a combination of strangulation and amputation. It has cut about $330,000, or 10 per cent, from the appropriation requested for an agency which for several years has been overworked as few agencies have been overworked since Hugh Johnson was managing the Blue Eagle. In spite of long hours at high pressure, the NLRB has not yet been able to catch up with the demands on it.

One slash of $57,000 would require dropping about one-fourth of the NLRB's trial examiners. At present they number 39, and each of them takes testimony in about 30 cases a year. It is inconceivable that the number of cases heard by each examiner can be increased. If the cut stands, fewer cases will be heard. Although the number of cases brought to the board shows signs of slacking off, many of the new cases are more complicated, or, to borrow Chairman Madden's word, more "subtle," than those sometimes heard in the earlier days.

MANY EMPLOYERS started off on the assumption that the NLRB was unconstitutional. So they were advised in 1936 by some 58 of the highest-paid lawyers in the country, who obliged the American Liberty League by going on the record on this point. About a year later, the Supreme Court—the old court, before a single Roosevelt appointee sat on it — emphatically decided that these lawyers and their clients, actual or prospective, were wrong. In those early days, employers and their lawyers openly challenged the law. They did not resort to the more refined evasions, the detection and determination of which naturally requires the taking of elaborate testimony, and therefore uses up the time of trial examiners.

While, on the whole, the House subcommittee rested on slow strangulation, through reduced appropriations, it resorted in one case to outright amputation. In effect, it decided to abolish the use of the NLRB of the Brandeis brief. The Brandeis brief is one packed with facts, usually economic data. Louis D. Brandeis, retired Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, developed it 30 years or so ago.

The Brandeis brief recognizes that intelligent interpretations of law cannot be made by logic operating in a vacuum. The courts must know not only the bare facts of a case, but the economic setting. In many types of cases involving finance, industry, and labor the Brandeis brief has come close to being the standard.

In its profound wisdom, however, a House subcommittee has decided, in effect, to repeal this great legal advance insofar as the NLRB is concerned by abolishing its economics division. It has cut out $45,900 for the 15 economists employed by this division. Apparently it overlooked $23,700 for the clerks and stenographers who now work for these economists, so that the net effect of this bit of discriminating economy would be to pay the salaries of 14 clerks and stenographers who would have no work to do.

Whether the NLRB needs 15 economists, or 10, or 5, or 20, I haven't the slightest idea. Chairman Madden of the NLRB told the subcommittee he did not and could not know exactly how many it needs. He relies on the head of that division, David Saposs, to tell him. He did say that every economist employed was employed only after Mr. Saposs had made a strong case to the board members.

WHAT IS CERTAIN is that the NLRB cannot operate intelligently without the aid of economists. If it does not employ economists it must employ lawyers who are familiar with economics, or it must rely on another agency for its economic information. Some members of the subcommittee apparently thought it should rely on the Bureau of Labor Statistics in the Labor Department. Dr. Lubin, chief of that bureau; Chairman Madden, of the NLRB, and other persons assert that the work of the economics division of the NLRB does not duplicate that of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Economic facts probably were decisive in the test cases in which the Supreme Court upheld the NLRA in 1937. What part of an industry's raw materials was imported across State lines, and what part of its finished products was exported across State lines? These were basic facts in determining whether the industry was engaged in interstate commerce and, therefore, subject to Federal law. They were economic facts.

In the University of Chicago Law Review of last June, David Ziskind, a senior attorney in the Department of Labor, analyzed the results of the use of economic briefs in labor cases. He found that in 19 cases before Federal Circuit Courts of Appeal, where one side used economic data and the other did not, the side which used them won 16 times and the side which did not won only 3 times. He found also that when the NLRB used them it usually won, and that when, for one reason or another, it had neglected the economic side, it had lost.

The effect of the proposed cut would be to deprive the NLRB of economic assistance and leave this powerful weapon to the exclusive use of violators of the law. This is a slash too significant to be explained under the heading of "economy."

Waiting It Out

The Time Factor Examined

WITH THE WAR approaching the end of its seventh month a profound psychological reversal begins to be noticeable in the attitude of the opposing sides in the struggle.

At the beginning of the war and even as recently as last January, Franco-British strategy appeared to be based on the concept that the war could be won by purely defensive military measures plus unrelenting economic pressure on the Reich.

Reliance, perhaps undue reliance, was placed on Allied superiority over Germany in financial resources, economic strength and sea power. A secondary but by no means negligible factor in Allied calculations was that when pressure upon her became severe, Germany would try to break through by means of a large-scale offensive and, Allied defenses on land and sea being what they are, would be smashed in the attempt.

THE GERMAN approach to this strategic problem was in many particulars just the reverse. So far as Poland was concerned reliance was placed on blitzkrieg tactics which, as it happened, were carried out with amazing success.

The conquest of Poland was followed by Germany's acceptance of the stalemate on the Western Front. From this it would appear that Germany, too, had decided that victory could be achieved by defensive measures alone.

But Germany's Military inaction and her avoidance of air offensive against Allied cities do not tell the whole story. In the first place, Hitler assumed that the Polish collapse would before long force the Allies to abandon the war. His peace offensive thus became the psychological substitute for the military offensive which the Allies had anticipated.

But at least twice during the first five months of the war there were indications that the idea of a large-scale military thrust with the purpose of bringing the Allies to their knees had not been ruled out by the Nazi regime. First in November and again in the middle of January there were innumerable and unmistakable indications that Germany was on the verge of invading the Netherlands.

Had that occurred, its only military justification would have been to bring German air and sea power closer to Great Britain and thus make possible a large-scale offensive against that country.

Why Germany abandoned the plan to invade the Netherlands is not clear. But it is important that she even contemplated such action. It showed that at least some of the directing elements in the Reich were convinced that a purely defensive position did not suit Germany's purposes.

DURING RECENT weeks there have been increasing indications that, on the one hand, the peoples of Allied lands, are becoming discontented with the largely defensive measures their governments have employed to prosecute the war and, on the other hand, that the Germans are beginning to feel they can outwait the Allies.

The Allies began to abandon their earlier attitude shortly before Russia's successful offensive on Finland was begun early in February. It is now clear that the February 5 meeting of the Allied War Council saw both Great Britain and France prepared to send large-scale assistance to the Finns, even though—and perhaps because—it meant broadening the war.

The Finnish collapse, with its disastrous blow to Allied prestige, has only intensified the feeling in both countries that the war be prosecuted more vigorously. It is now believed, for instance, that only if war is conducted on a larger scale than it has been heretofore will Allied economic superiority tell effectively in the scales by forcing Germany to use up its reserves at a rate in excess of her capacity to replenish them.

On the other hand, there are indications that, for the moment, Germany's principal desire is to keep the war from spreading. She succeeded in doing that in the Baltic area by intimidating Sweden and Norway. She is now seeking to achieve a similar end in the Balkans by putting pressure on Rumania and through a possible deal with Italy or with Italy and Russia.

In the meantime a revealing straw in the wind is the British submarine offensive in and around Baltic waters. Belated though this action is, for within a few weeks it will be possible to ship Swedish ore by way of the safer inner Baltic Sea route, it shows the British as determined to plug up every possible loophole in the blockade. At the same time France's new premier, Paul Reynaud, told his countrymen that France's one great duty now was "to make war."

Given time, and Germany might make herself at least partially blockade-proof by forcing the neutrals along her borders into her economic orbit and by helping to expand Russian production. The Allies are no longer so sure that time necessarily fights on their side. Their new mood reflects that state of mind. They now appear determined to prevent Germany from getting the time she needs. We are now on the verge of what appears to be a new and fateful stage in the war.

The Bertrand Russell Controversy

Dorothy Thompson Warmly Defends Appointment

By Dorothy Thompson

THE THINGS that people get worked up about in this world of international war, class war, party war, mass murder, confusion and chaos are always interesting. A heated conflict has been going on around the person of an eminent scholar, Bertrand Russell, the opposition being led by an eminent churchman, Bishop Manning, of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Lord Russell has been appointed to teach mathematics and philosophy at the City College of New York. Bishop Manning thinks he should not be allowed to hold this position because he is "immoral." Lord Russell's immorality consists of holding a theory of marriage and sexual relations which is different from that of the established churches. Lord Russell, it is feared, will corrupt the youth of the college. He emerges as a twentieth century New York Socrates, with the bishop brandishing the cup of hemlock in his face.

NO EVIDENCE is presented that Lord Russell has ever corrupted anyone; no evidence is presented that his views on marriage and morals have had the slightest effect on the tendencies of the times; no evidence is presented that he has ever wrecked anybody's life by his own practices. He has been divorced, twice I believe, but so no doubt have some members of Bishop Manning's diocese and probably of his congregation, and I doubt whether the bishop has thrown them out of the fold or publicly excoriated them.

Apparently the important thing is not what people do, but what they say. For if the Church—in the good old tradition of "The Scarlet Letter"—were to excommunicate all who do not strictly follow its teachings regarding sexual morality, it would become a diminished society, and could hardly support either the plant or the priesthood that it does.

NOW, THIS IS NOT an argument against Bishop Manning's views. It is an argument against the attempt to destroy the professional life of a distinguished scholar because he voices opinions which are, in fact, the actual practices of a part of our most respected population. Lord Russell is not immoral. Any one who knows him is aware that he is a man of the most exquisite intellectual and personal integrity.

He is, in the first line, a mathematician, accustomed to studying facts and drawing deductions from facts. He has come to the conclusion that monogamy is not natural to man; that it is not the usual practice of men and women; that marriage is not a sacred but a social institution; that human sexuality is by no means uniform; that unsatisfactory sex relations are the reason for many unhappy marriages and for innumerable psychic aberrations; that the importance attached to virginity is a species of taboo; that in all matters relating to sex the welfare of the children is the prime responsibility and the only matter of public and social importance.

He has advocated that men and women find out whether they are sexually compatible before they tie up their destinies and before they have children, and he has insisted on the greatest possible responsibility in the matter of bringing children into the world.

THERE IS no venality, concupiscence, frivolity, hyprocrisy, lechery or any of the other vices associated with the degradation of sex in a single one of Bertrand Russell's writings on this subject. And the quotations from his works are taken out of their context and used to inflame against him persons who have never read one of his books.

He is an honest and courageous man with a singular sense of personal and social responsibility. His moral courage was proved in the last war. He was opposed to it on social and intellectual grounds, and he went to prison for his opposition. He has suffered ostracism from the class to which he was born because of his unconventional ideas not only about sex but about the structure of that society most advantageous to his own class; he has spent his personal fortune, such as it was, for the education of children. He has alienated the radicals, who once upheld him, because of his inability to swallow their Marxian myths. He has defended and criticized the Soviet Union. He may have been wise or unwise in any of these views, but he was not vicious or immoral.

And his views on marriage and sexual morals are the least important of his contributions to science and political philosophy. His last book, "Power," ranks with the most provocative, honest and disinterested popular studies of this decade in the field of political philosophy. Scientists tell me that his "Principles of Mathematics" and his "Introduction to Mathematical Philosophy" are among the top of the list in this field, and he is not being employed to give instruction in moral philosophy.

A CRITICISM of Lord Russell's views on marriage and morals can certainly be made, on strictly rational grounds. One might, for instance, argue—and I think one could argue convincingly — that his demands are too high for the average human being; that his theories of marrige and morals presuppose a loftier degree of personal and social responsibility and general disinterestedness than most human beings are capable of.

Men and women in love are jealous, possessive, passionate and erratic. It is a question whether they ever can achieve in their love lives that degree of scientific reasonableness that Lord Russell expects of them. These are esthetic considerations attached to the erotic life of civilized persons which Lord Russell underrates. The building of a happy marriage is more a work of art than of science. Bertrand Russell has praised the freedom allowed to sexual relationships in the Soviet Union. But the Soviet Union, after 15 years of experience, began changing its mind on the subject. It didn't seem to work.

BUT IT WOULD be better for those who disagree with Lord Russell's theories to discuss them on rational grounds. For we are far past the stage of regarding "morality" as encompassed by the catechism of any church, or as primarily related to the sexual behavior of healthy people. Even the various churches do not agree on the matter. And our youth will not suffer from exposure to any honest mind in the person of a man of integrity. They will learn about sexual frivolity, immorality, tastelessness, indecency and irresponsibility from tabloids and salacious literature, not from Bertrand Russell.

We had far better worry over the fact that, according to Dr. Emil Altman, chief medical examiner of the New York Board of Education, there are teachers in our schools who cannot multiply five times three and who think Asia is somewhere in Africa. He reported that our schools have hundreds of teachers who are mentally and physically incompetent to teach anyone. This is a matter for real social indignation —that little children should be put under the tutelage of the feebleminded!

This column was written by Miss Thompson before she sailed for Europe.

'Pied Piper Army' Wars on Rodents

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

When young people gather in a church basement it's usually for a taffy pull, a game party or a play rehearsal. That is why yesterday's assembly of 40 boys and girls at Temple Baptist Church was so novel.

It was a poison-mixing bee, a posse of vigilantes organized to rid the neighborhood of rats.

Temple Baptist Church is situated at Tenth and N streets northwest. For months housewives in the community have been in despair over an epidemic of rats—ugly brown rats that not only invade pantries and turn larders into shambles, but chew up clothing and imperil sleeping children.

The Mothers Health Club of Temple Center became desperate. Its members appealed to the District Health Department, only to be told that agency has no rodent eradication division. They advised, however, on what might be done to eliminate, or at least control, the plague.

Yesterday's unique assassination party was the result.

Down from Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, which acts as a sort of affluent godparent to the funds-shy downtown congregation, came an army of 40 teen-age boys and girls to convert Temple Center into a hamburger (loaded) kitchen.

A few neighborhood youngsters joined in breaking down 16 pounds of hamburger into nickel-sized pellets and spiking them with red squill. But for the most part the job was done by the visitors, who came from comfortable, roomy homes which have no rodent problem.

When all the meat had been dosed and the pellets of death packaged, six to an envelope, the boys and girls set out in teams and began ringing doorbells. Every dwelling in the area bounded by M, O, Ninth and Twelfth streets was covered, housewives accepting the free "pills" with gratitude and relief.

4. STRATEGIC PLACEMENT—The "Pied Piper" army left no stone unturned. In Mrs. Williams' home, 1322 Eleventh street northwest, Nancy Lee Walls supervised the placement of the poisoned pellets in a spot on the kitchen floor near the stove. Now for the results

Man-About-Town Advises Career Girl to Consult Her Dictionary for True Meaning of "Attraction"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: As one of the many Washington men who daily read your column for its intimate revelation of human character, and who appreciate the common sense way in which you handle the problems presented to you, I wish to supplement your advice of March 25 to "S. A. M.," the Government "career girl" who gives a flattering account of her abilities, attainments, personality, appearance, etc., and then asks how to enlist distinguished admirers.

In addition to the deserved spanking you gave her, you should have referred that conceited young lady to a good dictionary, by way of polishing off the job. She reports that she is a "very attractive girl . . . with unusually good taste, a pleasing personality, etc." But she will find in the New Standard Dictionary (Funk & Wagnall's) that the word "attractive," as an adjective, applies to those "having the power or quality of attraction; drawing sympathy, affection or interest," from others. She will read that its synonyms include "agreeable, alluring, captivating, charming, engaging, fascinating, enticing, interesting, inviting, tempting, winning."

Therefore, since she lacks the ability to enlist the "sympathy, affection or interest" of others—either men or women—we must conclude that she is NOT attractive. Yet she says that she IS attractive; and VERY attractive. She submits that she is "pleasing" and has "unusually good taste." I think we are entitled to doubt this last representation; and to infer, on the contrary, that she lacks even average good taste; since if she had good taste, she could not thus refer to herself.

Small wonder she finds her young, single, successful "boss" a man of strange and baffling reserve. More power to him for keeping in the clear! If this young lady had more intelligence (and yet she declares she has "unusual intelligence!") she might not find him so wary and unreadable.

In conclusion, let me say—as a man who knows his Washington—that I seriously doubt her statement that she "started at the top (in Government service) through merit alone." Merit she may have, but if she "started at the top," she also got the benefit of some "lucky breaks" or else she was placed through "pull." (And now, with apologies for my presumption in improving your advice, and with a word of praise for your consistently fine work, Miss Haworth, I bow myself out of the commentator's role). Sincerely, MAN ABOUT TOWN.

Experienced Counsel For "Disappointed Bride"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The lament signed, "Disappointed Bride," which was published in your column of March 23, was so familiar to me as to seem like a ghost rising from my past to confront me again. She reports that she is utterly dismayed by her bridegroom's habits of (1) "playing sick" to get out of going to work and to church; (2) lying about money matters, and (3) backing out of joint social engagements they have made.

Speaking from experience that is almost identical with hers, I wish to indorse your advice completely. But I also want to say that in demanding reasonable cooperation from him, she should set a "deadline" for his reform. She should tell him plainly that if he hasn't turned over a new leaf by a certain date, she is "pulling up stakes" for good and all.

I made the mistake of "pulling up stakes," and then returning. I was induced to come back by "honeyed" promises. The first time I left, I had only myself to consider. When I left the second time, I had children to care for. I judge, from reading this woman's letter, that her husband fundamentally is much like mine was; and their character weaknesses are such that they grow worse in time.

There is but one (sorry) consolation in remaining, so I learned. I found that as hope dies, love dies also. When I left my husband the first time, I was still deeply in love with him, and I suffered considerably from an aching heart. But the second time I left, there wasn't a shred of love in my heart for him, so the parting was without pain. My only emotion was an abiding determination to safeguard my children against so demoralizing an influence.

From that day to this, all my efforts have been directed to the development of fine character in my children, so that they may never be handicapped by the many ignoble traits their father displayed. And may I add that today I am married again, and a truly happy wife and mother. Sincerely yours, MARIANNE.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Quick Aging Due to Worry, Says Ruth Chatterton, Actress

Credits Mental Attitude for Her Own Youthfulness; Also Advises Outdoor Exercise and Plenty of Milk and Fruits

By Ida Jean Kain

YOU can't just walk up to a beauty and ask how on earth she manages to stay so young looking—although it's a safe guess that every woman who has seen Ruth Chatterton since her recent return to the stage has been dying to! You put the question this way: How do you think the average woman can keep from aging so rapidly?

Ruth Chatterton.

And here's the answer—"It's the mental attitude, more than anything else," says Miss Chatterton, who does not look a minute over 28. "If a woman does not think too much about growing old, but is not agfraid of it, she doesn't seem to age quite so fast." In other words, if you want to stay young, don't worry about growing old!

Theories Corroborated

Several years ago she had her theories corroborated. At a social function in France her escort pointed out a woman who had just entered the room as "the most attractive woman I have seen in France!" It was Gabrielle Dorziat, the famous French actress and beauty, who was then in her sixties!

A few years later, Miss Chatterton and Miss Dorziat met again, this time at a luncheon where none of the other women was over 40. Miss Dorziat didn't look any older than she had on the other occasion, and she looked as young as any woman there! Having her proper share of feminine curiosity, Miss Chatterton drew the French actress aside and asked a few tactful questions of her own about how a woman can stay young!

Here is what Gabrielle Dorziat said: Latin men do not find a woman interesting until she is at least 35. Consequently, the Latin woman does not worry about aging and does not feel compelled to fight it. She even likes getting along! She pays particular attention to grooming, dresses simply but with chic, and faces the years with security and serenity. They never worry about growing old.

Worry Harmful to Health

There is no question but that worry adds years to a woman's appearance. And doctors tell us that worry and strain greatly affect the health—which is another important factor in looks. It's a vicious circle! The more we worry the worse we look and the more we worry!

Ruth Chatterton's mode of living has enabled her to work out her theory successfully. She likes outdoor activity. She enjoys riding horseback—a two or three-hour jaunt is usually her speed. But more than anything else she likes flying. For five years she has held a pilot's license, and when she isn't up in the air, she is on the flying field talking with the mechanics and getting sun, fresh air and relaxation all at the same time.

She doesn't "diet" because her weight never variesand her weight never varies because she eats the right foods! Sometimes she drinks 3 quarts of milk a day. She eats fruits and vegetables from preference. She doesn't touch sweets.

Activity and the right foods give her a perfect figure: Weight, 117 pounds for her height of 5 feet, 4 inches; bust, 35 inches; waist, 25 inches; hips, 36 inches.

Sickroom Precautions

If there is illness in the home, put on a long-sleeved cover-all apron before entering the sick room and remove it when leaving. This helps protect the rest of the family from the germs. Always wash and scald the sick-room dishes separately from the other dishes.

The Gentler Sex

Millinery Utopia

"No madame, that postillion model won't do at all. It makes you look exactly like a police woman in a comic strip . . . Yes, I know THEY are wearing them this spring, but of course that is no reason why you should make a laughing stock of yourself.

"Now try this model—wait now, am I dipping it too much over your eye? . . . Yes, I agree those extreme dips do look very silly . . . Now is this better? . . .

"We—ll now that hat isn't so bad. Still it isn't YOUR hat . . . Let's try this sailor . . . good heavens! Take it off quick! It's terrible! . . . Yes those perfectly straight sailors with those little doll crowns are impossible . . . Get used to them? . . . No, I never tell a customer she will get used to a hat. For I know that even if she does, her friends won't.

"Now let's try this halo . . . All right, you put it on. After all, no one else can ever put your hat on for you . . . Now let's see—Oh my, that is awful! Simply awful! . . . No, the halos are definitely not for you, madame. They give too much of a bald eagle effect.

Here's another sailor—it should be better . . . No, that's even worse. You look as if you were ready to lead a reform movement . . . What? . . . Oh yes I agree with you . . . The hats are definitely hard to wear this season. They don't seem to belong to anyone's personality.

"Now here's a little flower turban . . . Yes that is sweet—in fact too sweet . . . It's cloying! And it wouldn't be at all practical.

Let's try a Breton . . . No, that's too heavy for you . . . Now here's a beret . . . Yes, it is a stunning HAT all right, but after all, madame, I realize you are not buying a hat just to look at . . . And frankly I can't say that this beret is your type.

"No, no, now don't get discouraged madame, and take anything! We'll find you a hat—sooner or later . . . Oh yes indeed, there's a hat somewhere for you in the world! . . . Yes, there's the right hat somewhere for every woman. I firmly believe that!

"Let's try this sailor of rough straw . . . Now that's better . . . The price? . . . That is only $4.95 Madame and it really isn't bad on you . . . What? . . . Well, if you don't feel completely satisfied I wouldn't want you to take it.

"Now here's something a little more dashing—this little turban effect . . . Yes, you adjust it to suit yourself . . . Now let's see . . . Well that's not bad . . . The price? . . . $14.50.

"What? . . . Well, no, I can't say honestly that I like it any better than the $3.95 sailor . . . What? . . . Well, if you're not satisfied with either, we'll try something else.

"Let's try this—Heavens no! All you would need with that, Madame, would be a lorgnette and a cane. It's much too old for you . . . No, I don't believe I have any more sailors . . . that is, that you could wear. To tell you the truth, Madame, no hat that you've tried on has really done much for you . . . Yes, I know, a woman wants to look pretty as well as smart.

"All right Madame, you look around some and if you don't find anything you come back next week. I'll have some new models. And don't, whatever you do, Madame, get panicky and buy something you don't want. In fact Madame, it would be much better for you to wear your old winter hat all summer than to take something that would make a scarecrow out of you."

Animal Wallpaper

A new and charmingly fantastic wallpaper for children takes its design from the illustrations in Gertrude Stein's book "The World Is Round." Animals and children's figures, whimsically conceived, are splashed around on pastel backgrounds in the irrelevant way that the younger generation—and Miss Stein—prefer.

Dried Beef

Often a Life-saver

A LIFE-SAVER in the kitchen at times is a package of sliced dried beef, flavorful, moist and rosy red. When friends drop in and appetizers are to be concocted the dried beef is an excellent starting point. Use dried beef as the wrapper for such fillings as a pimiento stuffed olive, a stick of sharp cheese or cream cheese blended with chopped chives or pickle relish.

Creamed Dried Beef is another dish that can be used on many an occasion. For a breakfast dish, a luncheon dish or a night-time snack it has much merit. Cut dried beef into 1-inch pieces. Heat ¾ cup top milk. Blend ½ tablespoon flour with ¼ cup cream and add to milk. Stir. Add dried beef and cook slowly for 15 minutes. A double boiler may be used. Add 1 tablespoon Worchestershire sauce and a dash of paprika. Just before serving stir in 1 beaten egg. Serve on buttered toast squares or on hot baking powder biscuits. Serves 4.

Baked Potatoes are a grand companion for dried beef, too. Cut a slice lengthwise from 4 baked potatoes. Scoop out potato, mash and season. Add ¼ to ½ cup hot milk and beat. Fill potato shells leaving potato edge around rim and a hollow in the center. Brown in oven 15 minutes. Fill with creamed dried beef.

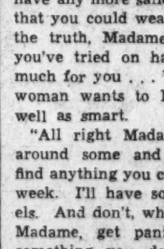
Thousands of Boys And Girls Try Out For the Aquacade

New York, March 26.

WILLIAM ROSE specialist in outdoor entertainments for the millions, advertised for swimmers, dancers and mere parading pippins, both ladies and gents, the other day. Knowing well his scallions, he set the meeting place as Madison Square Garden, and a nippy hunch it was, for thousands of young people turned up, or about as many as fill the place on a professional hockey night.



ALICE HUGHES

Rose, the mammoth mite of show business, wanted to hire numbers of these youths to perform in his 1940 edition of the Aquacade, famed water show at our World's Fair. He was aided in his painful labors, this year, by his new wife, professionally known as Miss Eleanor Holm, who will double as star of the show when it opens in May. She, also, scanned sharply the pretty faces, the shapely legs and the handsome ensembles of both sexes. Eleanor is both a looker and a picker, it now appears.

The boys and girls not only had to look right, but they had to fill out questionnaires as though the census man were in the parlor. Most gave, as the reason for applying, "I need a job," proving again that there is nothing fundamentally wacky about American youth. Moreover, the girls were asked, "If you had a chance, with whom would you like to change places?" I am informed that 40 per cent of the girls wrote "Eleanor Holm." Of course, this was not because the lovely Holm was the boss' wife. Oh, dear me—let's not be sordid about this.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The other day I lunched with Dr. Casimir Funk, who discovered the vitamin business back in 1912 when working on the treatment of deficiency diseases. In the party, too, was Dr. Harry Dubin, who joined Dr. Funk in his vitamin researches in 1918. Accepted today by the scientific world, this discovery has developed into a $75,000,000 a year business, largely centered in this country. Dr. Funk is a small, healthy looking man. He suggested that I needed some vitamins, no doubt from my wan look. I asked him if he took them, and he said "No. I can't swallow pills." Which is, in itself, a considerable chuckle. But he admits to taking some in syrup. He tells me that old age can be battled by building up the body on vitamins.

Fifth avenue was brightened at noon yesterday by the sight of Dorothy Kilgallen, the prettiest Broadway columnist in history, who was sauntering with her equally pretty sister, Eleanor. Then this morning came the ornate bid to Dorothy's wedding, scheduled for April 6, at a very high noon. She's marrying Dick Kollmar, the handsome lad who sings the lead in the current musical hit, "Too Many Girls." What a couple!

250 of Topflight Society Attend British Embassy War Relief Party

Five Artists Donate Time for Concert; Diplomatic Corps Well Represented; 30 Remain Afterward for Supper

By Hope Ridings Miller

THE HIGHEST-PRICED benefit in Capital history came off with flying colors and a sizable sum of cash last night when a $10-a-seat concert at the British Embassy drew topflight society in droves.

With five British-born artists donating their time and talents, and Washington notables plus a scattering of out-of-towners making up the audience, the function went on the boards to raise funds for the British war relief. Coffers of the latter are better off today by a good $2,000 as a result. Perhaps more than that; for Anglophiles rallied around the cause almost 250 strong and in most cases were more than happy to contribute to the cause. Following the concert, a hand-picked group of 30, including the artists and several members of the British Embassy staff stayed on for a small, informal supper.

THE MAMMOTH and magnificently furnished ballroom of the embassy was the scene of the concert, which got under way at 9 o'clock and lasted almost two hours. Successful from start to finish was the program, which featured Orrea Pernel, noted violinist; John Brownlee, barytone of the Metropolitan Opera; Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson, famous duo pianists, and Ivor Newton at the piano. Miss Pernel opened the program with a rendition of Handel's "Sonata in A." One of the high points of the evening, however, was a Bach choral number, "Sheep May Safely Graze," arranged by Mary Howe (Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, of Washington) and presented by Bartlett and Robertson.

A variety of numbers, playing no favorites with composers of any one country, made up the program, which was nicely accented with encores. Miss Pernel's group of Spanish folk songs precipitated a thunder of applause, as did Mr. Brownlee's selections which closed the program. All artists presented last evening have appeared in Washington before and already are favorite with music lovers around these parts.

Several dinners preceded the concert, hostesses bringing their parties on directly to the British Embassy. Mrs. Truxtun Beale entertained in honor of Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson. Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt gathered in a few friends for dinner and then took them on to the concert, as did Mrs. Charles M. Lea and Mr. and Mrs. George Rublee, who had among their guests Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling.

Diplomatic society was well represented at the event, where representatives of more than half theembassies and legations were among those present. To mention but a few from the diplomatic contingent—there were the Ambassador of Peru, Don Manuel Freye y Santander; the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas, the Portuguese Ambassador and Mme. Bianchi, the Yugoslav Minister and Mme. Fotitch, the Finnish Minister, Hjalmar Procope; the Egyptian Minister and Mme. Hassan, the Minister of Denmark and Mme. de Kauffmann, and the Australian Minister and Mrs. Richard Casey.

Black tie attire was the order of the evening for most of the male guests, but the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian, was trimly turned out in full dress. Greeting his guests at the end of the ballroom, he was assisted in informally receiving by members of the embassy staff. Mrs. Neville Butler, who had charge of tickets for the event, was busily engaged showing friends to seats for well over half an hour before the program began. Other staff members were also very much in the greeting picture.

Accompanying Senator and Mrs. Barbour was the latter's sister, Mrs. Sidney Lee. Mr. and Mrs. Norman Davis were there; also Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Princess Bomcompagni, Mrs. Tracy Dows, Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Mrs. Frederick Atherton, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Acheson, Clarence Hewes, Mrs. Emerson Howe, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Senator Theodore F. Green, Admiral and Mrs. Emory Land, Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. Sterling B. Lacy, Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Laughlin, Miss Carolyn Nash, Mrs. Mahlon Pitney.

HIGH-RANKING officialdom was well represented in the audience. Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone were there; also Justice and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter; Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf Berle, Senator James J. Davis, Senator and Mrs. Warren Barbour, the latter wearing one of the prettiest outfits there—a mustard chiffon frock, set off with a matching velvet jacket trimmed in sable.

Mrs. Owen Roberts, arriving without Justice Roberts, was seen in the crowd, as were Mrs. Sherman Miles, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Mrs. Randolph H. Miner, Carlos del Mar, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pell, Mrs. Bissett Norment, Miss Carolyn Nash, and several dozen others.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

BARON JAMES BAEYENS asked some friends in for cocktails on Monday to meet Olympe Bradna, the French film star, who is appearing this week at the Capitol Theater. She is a small, friendly little person, whose piquant face is framed by soft, dark hair worn in a long bob. Enormous black eyes and a flashing smile are other items on her charm score and she speaks English with hardly a trace of accent. A compliment on the latter accomplishment pleased her very much, for, she says, she loves the English language and works hard to improve her knowledge of it.

MISS BRADNA wore a simple frock and a bright red beret. She said that she uses what spare time she has for sightseeing and trying to keep war ir this Washington spring. As she left the party to return to the theater, one of the gallants present asked to take her to dinner and was accepted, to the envy of other admirers. Another quickly offered to give her a lift back to work and returned to the party a few minutes later to score heavily over his rival with the announcement that Miss Bradna had agreed to go dancing with him immediately after dinner.

SOME OF US, who felt quite chic in our new spring hats, wondered audibly and a trifle sourly if OUR time would be clamored for in shifts if WE were on the stage.

Pretty, blonde Adelaide Whitehouse came in squired by THREE gentlemen, showing that Red Cross work, her job, holds as much glamour for the stronger sex as stage work.

Mme. Benech sported a big, white pique butterfly on the front of her black straw hat and said cheerfully that a certain bachelor had completely ruined her Easter by comparing the butterfly to the little pleated napkins which perch in wine glasses on cafe tables in Paris.

AN ATTRACTIVE COUPLE new to Washington was Baron and Baronne de Nieuwenhove. He is one of the assistants to the French Naval Attache.

Other guests at this informal gathering were Mr. and Mrs. Oliver O'Donnell, Count and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, the latter tremendously smart in a navy coat with brass buttons and a little yellow suede turban with a bow in front; Mrs. Anthony Coleby, who stopped in for a minute on her way home from the hospital where Commander Coleby is laid up from a knee operation; M. and Mme. Charles Lucet, M. and Mme. Dal Piaz, Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell, Commander William D. Thomas, Sherry McAdam, jr.; Christopher Bramwell, and Ogden Hammond, jr.

ARRIVING for luncheon at the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Denis Conan-Doyle, I was amused to see a sleek dachshund and tortoise disporting themselves about the drawing room. The tortoise was not one of those minute creatures you buy for your sick child at the five and ten, but a real tortoise-shell tortoise brought all the way from Morocco. Mrs. Conan-Doyle, who is the most sympathetic and charming person, said that she adores animals and is an admirer of the Washington Zoo which she has explored thoroughly in her short stay here.

IN FACT the Conan-Doyles both have fallen in love with Washington and would like to settle down here for as much time as traveling and lecturing will permit. "Perhaps," said Mr. Conan-Doyle innocently, "we could spend the summer here. That would be a real pleasure."

With tears of regret in her eyes one of the guests said that it was her duty to inform him that it wouldn't be a pleasure at all, not unless he liked tropical heat.

Among those lunching with the Conan-Doyles were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Trent—he is so very interesting and knows ALL about the mining of silver and gold and what happens to them after they get to Wall Street, Col. Stewart-Roddie, well-known British lecturer, and Winthrop Crane.

Clarence Hewes To Honor 2 Debs

Clarence Hewes has cards out for a cocktail party on Friday, April 5, in honor of the Misses Isabelle and Marjorie Meuser, who will be debutantes this spring.

The Misses Meuser are cousins of Arthur Bradley Campbell, and with him will arrive next week from Palm Beach. The trio will be at the Hay-Adams.

Lieut. James D. Taylor, Helen Tower, to Be Wed

Several members of Capital society have received invitations from Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Curtis Tower, of Boston, to the wedding of their daughter, Helen, to Lieut. James Davis Taylor on April 16 at the Church of Jerusalem in Boston. A reception will follow at the Country Club in Brookline.

Lieut. Taylor is the son of the late Gen. James Taylor of Washington and of Mrs. Franklin Ellis of this city.

Costa Rican President-Elect and Wife Entertained at Luncheon, Party Here

Dr. and Senora de Calderon Guardia Honored First by Hull and Then by Minister of Own Country in Round of Fetes

By Carolyn Bell.

Whisked madly about the city—as is the custom with official guests—the President-elect of Costa Rica and Senora de Calderon Guardia arrived at the Mayflower yesterday afternoon on time, if a bit breathless, for the party given in their honor by the Minister of Costa Rica and Senora de Castro Beeche.

Earlier in the day the handsome chief executive-to-be and his equally attractive wife lunched with the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull. Mrs. Hull was an absentee hostess as she is still sunning in the South and is not expected here until the end of the week. The luncheon, which was given at the Carlton, included a cross-section of officials and their wives.

Tonight Dr. and Senora de Calderon Guardia will be guests of honor at a dinner party to be given by the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de De Bayle. At this party, which also will be held at the Carlton, the Guardias will meet representatives from virtually every Latin-American country. This afternoon Senora de Castro-Beech will entertain at a ladies' luncheon in honor of Senora da Guardia at the Shoreham. Meanwhile Dr. Guardia will be lunching at the Pan-American Union as the guest of Dr. Leo B. Rowe—this is to be a strictly male gathering.

Orchids Flown From Costa Rica

Baby orchids—masses of them, flown from Costa Rica—adorned many a feminine guest and peeped from several masculine lapels at yesterday's party. Guests started arriving promptly at 5 o'clock in the Chinese room and stayed well after 7:30 o'clock for the delightful reception.

Virtually the entire Diplomatic Corps went down the "line" to greet the next Costa Rican President as well as his traveling companions. Senora de Castro Beeche wore a full-length dark blue frock trimmed in touches of white and a cluster of the famous Costa Rican orchids. A gray gown was chosen by Senora de Calderon Guardia and she wore a matching hat trimmed in white flowers. Gray lace mitts and a cluster of violets and yellow roses completed the ensemble. Also in line were Senor and Senora Tinoco, she in deep blue with a wide-brimmed hat, and Senor and Senora Volio, she wearing a bright pink gown.

Toasts were offered in champagne as well as in all manner of whisky and soda. The buffet table, which was centered by a bouquet of Easter lilies and delphinium, was flanked on either side by red, white and blue candles. Whole hams, turkeys, plates of potato salad and crab cake augmented the table, filled with the usual tea-time sandwiches.

Arriving together were Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, and Mme. Bruggmann, wife of the Minister of Switzerland. Mme. Espil, who was accompanying her sun-tanned husband, the Argentine Ambassador, wore a deep green cocktail suit with a brilliant clip pinned to her lapel. Sporting an enormous cluster of Costa Rican orchids was Mrs. Adolph Berle, who completed her costume with a poke-bonnet of black straw.

Mexican Envoy Attends Party

The Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najera, was among the guests. His daughter, Senorita Erma Castillo Najera, chatted gayly with Senorita Maria Elena Davila and Mrs. Rogelio Alfaro. The Ecuadorian Ambassador and Senora de Alfaro were there, as were the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Munilla, the Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora Martins, whose black hat was spiked with a pink ostrich plume; the Minister of Venezuela and Senora de Escalante, the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Cabero, the Commercial Counselor of Chile and Senora de Campbell and the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de De Bayle.

Wearing identical spring print frocks, the Boyd triplets—Edith, Elena and Mildred—put in appearances at yesterday's party. They are the daughters of the Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Boyd. Still others there were Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wearing a pink and black costume; Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Lowrey, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Dr. and Mrs. P. S. Constantinople, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom; Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mme. Ricardo Alfaro and her debutante daughter, Yolando; the Secretary of the Venezuelan Embassy, Don Arturo Lares; the Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Gacitua, the Counselor of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Fuentes, Miss Mary Senate Howes, Mrs. W. W. Howes, the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de LPastoriza, Mme. Bilmanis, wife Pastoriza, Mme. Bilmanis, wife Hurban, wife of the Czech Minister and Mme. Fotisch, wife of the Yugoslav Minister.

Secretary Hull Luncheon Host

Guests at Secretary Hull's luncheon included members of the entourage accompanying Dr. and Senora de Calderon Guardia. They are Jorge Hine, Don Alfredo Volio, Senor and Senora de Tinoco and Victor Manuel Yglesias. Other guests were the Costa Rican Minister and Senor de Castro Beeche, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator and Mrs. Walter F. George, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and Mrs. Marriner S. Eccles, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Breckinridge Long and the Surgeon General and Mrs. Thomas Parran.

Still others attending were the Chief of Protocol, George T. Summerlin, the Director General of the Pan-American Union Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Miss Mabel T. Boardman, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Duggan, Stanley Woodward, Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, Mrs. Fredrie Beggs and Mr. and Mrs. Leo Sack.

Mrs. Blair Heads League

Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., was elected yesterday as president of the Washington Junior League, succeeding Miss Cecil Lester Jones in a two-year term. Mrs. Blair has previously served as first vice president, chairman of the league horse show, and in other capacities.

Elected first and second vice presidents for one-year terms were Mrs. Robert Whitelaw Wilson and Miss Marion Shouse. Both have captained league Community Chest teams and held other offices.

Miss Virginia Flannery, who has been chairman of the Children's Hospital volunteers, was chosen secretary of the league at yesterday's meeting.

Miss Jean Benton Plights Troth

The engagement of Miss Jean Elizabeth Benton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Benton, of Chevy Chase, to H. Lewis Orland, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Orland, of Moscow, Idaho, has been announced here by her parents.

Miss Benton is a graduate of the National Cathedral School and is in her senior year at Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley, Mass.

Mr. Orland was graduated from the University of Idaho in 1937 and will complete his course at Harvard law school in June. He is a member of Phi Delta Theta and Phi Beta Kappa fraternities.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

Women to See Gridiron Club Stunts Repeated At April 14 Reception; 'Drones' to Be Hosts

A PERSONAGE no less overwhelmingly august than a European ambassador once said that he learned more about American politics from watching the stunts at Gridiron Club dinners than from plowing through endless newspapers and magazines.

Certainly the ladies all agree that the best parties of the year are the receptions given the afternoon following the twice-yearly dinners for the President. At these affairs the talented club members repeat their satirical stunts of the night before and the women, who are rigorously excluded from the strictly masculine dinners, get a chance to see what is probably the best amateur show in the country.

HOSTS AT THE RECEPTION this year will be the "Gridiron Drones," who have cards out for Sunday afternoon, April 14, in honor of Gridiron President and Mrs. Mark Foote. The Drones are former active members of the club, now associate members, who used to be Washington correspondents and are now exalted to heads of bureaus, columnists, or executives on papers back home. Drones include Mark Sullivan, Arthur Krock and Robert Lincoln O'Brien, of Washington; Roy Roberts, of Kansas City, who was one of Alf Landon's chief backers; Robert Choate, of Boston; Harris M. Crist, of New York; Arthur J. Sinott, of Newark; Robert Barry, of New York; John C. O'Laughlin and R. H. Patchin.

A COLORFUL CHARACTER who keeps 12 Siamese cats in her New York penthouse and designs odd coiffures for herself blew into town the other day. She is Peggy LeBouteiller, wife of Tony Williams, the New York tailor who is equally original, as any one who has seen his pastel colored suits for men will testify.

Mrs. Williams, whose father is president of Best's, handles diamond and other accounts for a well-known advertising agency and writes articles for smart magagines. She was the first to introduce little plaster hands as a decorative motif, which are now rampant in so many famous homes. Her New York penthouse has a view over the East River and the wall paper she bought from a mail order house at 12 cents a roll.

YESTERDAY Mrs. Williams wore a tweed suit and a pale green straw bonnet, tied under the chin and with a red veil floating behind at the cocktail party given in her honor by George Abell. Incidentally, Mrs. Williams is a great friend of Virginia Cowles, the American foreign correspondent for the London Times, and an occasional visitor to Washington.

SEEN HERE AND THERE at the party: Lively Senator Theodore Green, of Rhode Island . . . the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry Grady, the latter wearing a pale pink jacket over her black dress . . . Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Arnold . . . Mrs. Randall Hagner in conversation with John Caswell . . . Sherry McAdam talking to Mrs. William Lacy . . . Maxine Davis with a stunning new topaz bracelet and clip to match . . . James Penfield, of the State Department, who says he has just leased a house in Georgetown . . . Miss Elizabeth Howry, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Ralph Hill, Reporter Mary Johnson, in a green tweed suit, and matching Robin Hood hat; Mrs. Sam Conner, Allen Hayden, Mrs. Crosby Miller, Representative and Mrs. John Dempsey, and J. L. Houghteling, who had spent all day in Police Court, where he identified the burglar who held up him and Mrs. Houghteling several weeks ago in front of their house on Wyoming avenue.

Miss Huntington Gives Luncheon For '41 Debutantes

Miss Edith Huntington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the home of her parents on Twenty-third street. Miss Huntington will make her debut next winter and included among her guests were several of next season's debutantes.

Also present was her older sister, Miss Joanna Huntington, and a Smith College classmate of the latter, Miss Jessie Miller, of Portland, Oreg.

Other guests were the Misses Peggy Burke, Jessie Kauffmann, Eugenia Merrill, Muriel Maddux, Bella Hagner, Zeva Fish, Barbara Beale, Louise Stillwell, Peggy Tuckerman, Peggy Lansdowne, Katherine Hill, Ruth Hurley, Julia Cuniberti, Sarah Everett, Lucy Marbury, Kathleen Bell, Katherine Compton, Glenna Tilton, Lorna Morley, Cynthia Borden, Anna Arcaya, Betty Wright and Anne Bryan.

40 of Girls' Nation Make Tour of G. P. O.

Junior Group of American Legion Auxiliary And Their Senior Sponsors Visit Plant and Have Luncheon There

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

More than 40 members of the Girls' Nation, a junior group of the American Legion Auxiliary, and their senior sponsors yesterday visited the Government Printing Office and had their annual Easter luncheon there.

The tour through the building, beginning with the library, where the girls examined records and historical material, and going through all departments, was their third annual trip through a Government building they have as a feature of their Easter vacation period.

The group was organized three years ago by Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, within the junior membership of the American Legion Auxiliary for the study of the Government. Mrs. Ruthe Turner is chairman of the board of governors this season and Mary Catherine Ware, the junior president. Last year the girls visited the Supreme Court and the previous season made a trip through the Capitol. As a continuation of their Easter program this time, they will attend a meeting of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee April 13.

Mrs. Mary B. McMillin, department president of the auxiliary, who was the guest speaker at the luncheon, reminded the girls of their unique privilege as a Washington group in having opportunity to study their Federal Government first hand. She also announced plans for the junior conference to be held during the department convention next August, when a mass initiation into senior membership will be conducted for all of those who have reached the age of 18 within the year. The Eight and Forty, whose chapeau, Mrs. Edith Landvoigt, was among the guests on the tour, will conduct the initiation.

Girls Can Study Government First-Hand

A. E. Giegengack, the Public Printer, was on his vacation and in his absence, Mrs. Maybelle Fickel, liaison officer for the Government Printing Office, welcomed the visitors. The luncheon, at which Mary Catherine Ware presided, was arranged in Harding Hall on the eighth floor, where special tables had been set up. The decorations carried out the auxiliary colors, yellow and blue, and favors were little blue caps, decorated with daffodils and filled with candy Easter eggs. There was organ music during the meal.

Mrs. Harper Arranged Luncheon

Mrs. Harper, who continues her interest in the group as its founder, was responsible for the luncheon arrangements. Junior officers who attended in addition to Mary Catherine, were Dorothy Snow, vice president; Alliebelle Wright chaplain; Helen Zaruba, treasurer, and Mary Anne Thornton, color bearer.

Among senior officers there, besides Mrs. Turner, were the other members of the board, Mrs. McMillin, Mrs. Betty Bush, who heads the American Legion Auxiliary juniors; Mrs. Dorothy Johnson, vice chairman of juniors, and Mrs. Blanche Crory.

There were also the junior chairmen from the various units, Mrs. Kathleen Abreo, of Sergt. Jasper Unit; Mrs. Wright, Government Printing Office Unit; Mrs. Lois Wilson, Police and Fire; Mrs. Helen Zaruba, Cooley-McCullough and Mrs. Frances Snow, representing the Second Division unit. Also present were Mrs. Myrtle Spudis, a vice president of the D. C. Department of the auxiliary; Miss Minnie May Hardy, national committeewomanffi Mrs. Viola Hines Fones, department employment chairman, and Mrs. Marie H. Ralph, past chairman of the Girls' Nation.

Camp Hanoum Reunion Party

The Junior League clubhouse will be the scene on Friday afternoon of a reunion of past and future denizens of Camp Hanoum in New England. The founder of the camp, Mrs. Charles Farnsworth, will be guest of honor. Hostesses will be Mrs. Adolphus Staton and Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr. Tea will be served by Mrs. Charles F. Wilson, Mrs. Wilson Lee and Miss Juliet Dulany.

Among those expected to be present are Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mme. Henrik de Kauffmann, Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, Mrs. Reeve Hoover, Mrs. Lowndes Jackson, jr., Mrs. Marquis Childs, Mrs. Selden Chapin, and the Misses Betty Lee, Carol Franklin, Henriette de Sieyes, Floranne and Josephine Henderson, Hope and Eileen Erwin, Florence Merill, Mary Wilson, Peggy Burke and Peggy Lincoln.

Mrs. Herbert F. Traut, camp director, will show colored movies taken at Hanoum last summer.

D. C. More Alert Than Filmdom, Says Fidler

Jimmy Fidler, who "sees all, knows all" about Hollywood, told members of the Women's National Press Club yesterday he found Washington more alert and more critical than the movie capital.

The columnist and radio commentator, who is now having a turn on the stage, appearing in person at the Capitol Theater, was guest of honor at the club's weekly luncheon at the Willard Hotel. He was accompanied by Harry Carey, of the cast of "Heavenly Express;" Mrs. Carey and Milton Berger, his business manager. Another honored guest was James Preston, who went to Hollywood to serve as technical adviser for "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

Mr. Carey, who played the Vice President in "Mr. Smith," said he had met Vice President Garner yesterday morning and had a look at his cowboy hat. Apparently the two Vice Presidents hit it off.

Mr. Fidler told of the set-up he uses to cover the news of Hollywood for the press and radio—a large staff of crack reporters as well as unidentified observers and listeners-in otherwise designated as "spies." Defending his own part in broadcasting news of Hollywood he asserted he was "really not a mean guy at all." When he "spanks anybody on the radio," it is because he considers the spanking deserved and believes the criticism to be constructive.

He added that he did not like gossip and had an inferiority complex about dealing in it.

His current appearance on the stage is inspired by an ambition to be a Rockefeller rather than a desire to be an actor, he admitted to the women scribes.

Replying to one of a variety of questions, he said mothers with potential Shirley Temples or Deanna Durbins to launch in the films were more numerous in Hollywood than young girls with movie aspirations.

Peggy LeBoutillier, of the N. W. Ayer Advertising Agency, who is about to stage a diamond show in Washington, was among the guests. Among others were Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Westwood, Mrs. Chester McLean, Miss Mimi McLean and Mrs. John Kee, all at the head table. Ruby Black, the president, presided.

Miss O'Daniel Named by G. O. P.

Appointment of Miss Eileen O'Daniel, of Bronxville, N. Y., as a regional representative in the women's division of the Republican National Committee, has been announced by Miss Marion E. Martin, director of the women's division.

Miss O'Daniel is the first of several regional representatives for coordinating the women's Republican activities in the States and the Nation. These representatives, Miss Martin announced, will establish a closer bond between the women's division of the Republican National Committee and the State Republican women's groups.

Miss O'Daniel's particular region will include the States of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin and Minnesota. She will leave Washington April 4 for Michigan, the first stop on her first trip through the region.

Pre-Revolutionary War Home Uncovered In Virginia By Antiquities Society

FINDING a "new" Colonial house or some other relic is just like a gold discovery to members of the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities. Yesterday Mrs. Everard Robinson Todd, director of the local branch of the organization, accompanied by Mrs. Royal D. Mead, chairman of the committee on lardmarks, and Mrs. Joseph Stiles Wall, chairman of entertainment, went on something of a prospecting trip into Virginia and there saw a house built all of 20 years before the Revolution, which had been restored by its present owner.

In May, members of the association will make a pilgrimage to the landmark, but to avoid a "rush" previous to the scheduled visit, the location of the old place and its history will not be announced until time to make reservations for the trip.

The association will meet at the Willard Hotel Friday and will be addressed by Dr. G. Freeland Peter, chaplain of the branch. He will describe valuable additions to the collection in the Relic House at Jamestown, among them an Indian work basket which belonged to Pocahontas. It was obtained in England from one of her direct descendants and was purchased by the association in Richmond.

GIVES LECTURE FRIDAY—Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard, whose regular lecture for the Club of Colonial Dames was postponed, will speak at the club, 1500 New Hampshire avenue tomorrow. The final lecture in her series will be given April 4. Mrs. Joseph Stiles Wall is president of the club.

GOODWILL GUILD—Plans for the annual spring benefit will be discussed Friday at the meeting of the Goodwill Guild, of which Mrs. Samuel Herrick is president. The meeting will be at the Goodwill Industries, 1218 New Hampshire avenue.

ADOPT A WARD—Margaret Hammer, rehabilitation chairman for Sergt. Jasper Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary, has announced the adoption of Ward D at Mount Alto Hospital by the unit. Members of the unit will visit the ward at least once a week and will provide cigarettes and other small necessities for the 45 veterans there.

AUTHOR HONOR GUEST—Ethel Hueston (Mrs. Randolph Blinn) will discuss her new book, "Uncle Lancy for President," as guest author at this week's meeting of the Friday Morning Book Reviewing Club, sponsored by Mrs. Theodore Tiller and Mrs. Lyle Campbell. The book had its coming-out party Monday afternoon, when Mr. and Mrs. Blinn entertained 300 guests at a cocktail party.

MRS. THOMAS F. McALLISTER, director of the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee, and Mrs. Thompson Evans, assistant director, are leaving tonight for Michigan to conduct an institute of government for Democratic women tomorrow and Friday.

Mrs. McAllister will open the two-day meeting with a talk on "Winning Votes With Facts," and will close it Friday with a luncheon talk on "The Fight for Democracy in 1940."

Mrs. Evans will address the Democratic Digest luncheon tomorrow on "Clarifying the Issues."

P.-T. A. Plans May Election

Preparing for the annual meeting of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, May 21 and 22, the nominating committee, of which Mrs. P. A. Taylor is chairman, has announced the slate of new officers to be voted on this year.

An election is conducted each spring at which half of the officers of the congress are elected for two-year terms. This year the second, fourth and sixth vice presidents, secretary, treasurer, assistant treasurer and historian are to be voted on.

The nominations include second vice president, Mrs. Alan Hudson, of Eliot Junior High P.-T. A., who is now serving; fourth vice president, Mrs. William A. Moyer, Whittier P.-T. A., who is now treasurer; sixth vice president, Mrs. Louis J. Raebach, Park View, now fifth division representative on the board of managers; secretary, Mrs. Richard J. Purcell, McKinley P.-T. A., now sixth vice president; treasurer, Mrs. Howard R. Jones, Whittier, now assistant treasurer; assistant treasurer, Mrs. Henry E. Duerst, Trusdell, now chairman of mental hygiene; historian, Mrs. R. E. Clickner, Anacostia Junior-Senior P.-T. A., now seventh division representative on the board of managers.

The convention will be held in the Departmental Auditorium, where it has been held for the past several years.

Margaret Wallace, T. M. Scott to Wed

Mrs. John H. Wallace, of Bethesda, Md., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Margaret, to Thomas Martin Scott, jr., of Columbia, Mo.

The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Lieut. Col. John Hobart Wallace. At present she is attending the University of Maryland and is a member of Delta Delta Delta Sorority.

Mr. Scott attended the University of Missouri and is a member of Kappa Alpha Fraternity. He is second in command of the Civilian Conservation Corps developing the John J. Pershing State Park at Laclede, Mo.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Capitol History Club To Be Feted Today

Mrs. William M. Collins and Mrs. Homer N. Link, who have just returned from Florida, will entertain the Capitol History Club today at luncheon at the home of the former on Summerfield road, Chevy Chase.

A paper, "Feminine Columnists," will be read by Mrs. D. W. Holton, and, with the title, "Putting Your Legal House in Order," Mrs. Collins will give timely advice.

French Group Will Gather This Afternoon

Society Will Meet From 3:30 to 5:30 at Lady Leslie's Home

Lady Bradford Leslie, honorary president of the Washington group of "Les Amities Feminines de la France," will preside at the meeting to be held this afternoon in her apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue, from 3:30 to 5:30 o'clock.

Encouraged by Miss Anne Morgan, who visited here recently in behalf of the Friends of France, Washington French enthusiasts formed a Washington branch of the New York "Feminine Friendships of France."

Members of the group are arranging to go once a week to headquarters of Urgent Relief for France to sew while French programs are given. They also hold eight cultural meetings a year, at which the guest speakers and entertainers of the programs which are given entirely in French donate their services, so that all dues and funds may be sent to France, where it will be used for relief of mothers and to buy milk and supplies for children.

Mme. Germaine Johnson, who sings frequently before Washington audiences as "Germaine, the little French Girl" is chairman of the group; Mme. Felian Garzia is vice chairman, Mrs. Robert Le Fevre is treasurer and Miss Dorothy Robinson is secretary.

For this afternoon's meeting Prof. Leon Dostert, of the department of modern languages at Georgetown University, will be the guest speaker. His subject will be "The Work of Jules Romains," Mme. Jeanne Benedict, formerly an understudy of Sarah Bernhardt will give a series of dramatic recitations.

Lady Leslie will entertain at a luncheon tomorrow at the National Republican Women's Club. The party is one in a series she is giving this season. Last Thursday Lady Leslie entertained at a luncheon at Pierre's having as her guests Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. E. Hart Fenn, Miss Lydia Loring, Mrs. Ernest G. Draper, Mrs. Arthur Tirrell, Mrs. C. H. March, Baroness Von Below, Mrs. T. Sim Lee, Mrs. Donald Downs, Countess Cassini and Miss Alida Ward.

Alice Hughes Will Address Panhellenic Group

Alice Hughes, columnist for The Post, will be guest speaker at the ninth annual luncheon of the City Panhellenic Association at the Mayflower Hotel April 27.

Invitations will be sent to approximately 3,500 women in Washington, who are members of the 22 National collegiate sororities represented in the association.

The delegates from the local chapters which join in the luncheon are: Miss Edythe M. Thomson, Phi Omega Pi, president; Miss Miriam Johnson, Beta Phi Alpha, vice president; Mrs. George C. Ober, jr., Pi Beta Phi, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Preston Cavanagh, Kappa Alpha Theta, recording secretary; Mrs. Floyd Rothballer, Kappa Gamma, treasurer; Mrs. Richard Talow, Delta Gamma, historian.

Others included Mrs. Willard C. Mills, Alpha Phi; Mrs. James A. Rolls, Gamma Phi Beta; Mrs. A. E. Conradis, Alpha Chi Omega; Mrs. J. Butler Walsh, Delta Delta Delta; Mrs. Harold Hinson, Alpha Xi Delta; Mrs. Robert Barnes, Chi Omega; Miss Lee Hardell, Sigma Kappa; Mrs. Richard Sherman, Alpha Omicron Pi; Mrs. Edgar Withrow, Zeta Tau Alpha; Mrs. Vaughn Huse, Alpha Gamma Delta; Mrs. George H. Riggs, jr., Alpha Delta Pi; Miss Myra Hall, Delta Zeta; Miss Eva Pope, Phi Mu; Mrs. John N. Ross, Kappa Delta; Mrs. Polly Lowe, Theta Upsilon, and Mrs. Judson Cobb, Beta Sigma Omicron.

House Refuses 2 Restorations In Labor Funds

Travel Expense And Field Pay Cuts Remain in Bill

Two attempts to restore Appropriations Committee cuts in the 1941 budget for the Labor Department were turned down by thumping majorities in the House yesterday.

Refusal of the House to override its committee recommendations on the first two tests was viewed in some quarters as an indication of what may be in store when the highly controversial appropriations for the wage-hour division and the National Labor Relations Board come to a vote.

The House defeated, 78 to 126, an attempt by Chairman Norton of the Labor Committee to add $140,000 to the $1,544,000 proposed for traveling expenses in the Labor Department; and a few minutes later refused by a vote of 39, to 81 to increase the $7,953,600 recommended for field salaries in the department's immigration and naturalization service.

Wage Funds Next

Just as the section on the wage and hour division was reached, the House adjourned, thus postponing until today a vote on the Appropriations Committee's slash of $1,080,000 in a budgeted increase of $2,723,800. Total sum granted the division under the bill is $5,105,000.

However, debate on the bill yesterday revealed the intensity of feeling engendered by the cuts when Mrs. Norton accused the Appropriations Committee of exceeding its authority in trying to "legislate," contrary to the rules of the House.

The reduction in the budget figures for the wage and hour division was an attempt by the Appropriations Committee "to do by indirection what it couldn't do directly," Mrs. Norton charged. She quoted the committee's report to show that the cuts were an effort to force revision of the Wage-Hour Act rather than economize.

NLRB Fight Opened

An opening barrage in the coming battle over the National Labor Relations Board was touched off in yesterday's debate by Chairman Smith of the special committee investigating the NLRB. In the bill the board is granted $2,843,000, a cut of $337,000 in budget estimates.

Complimenting the Appropriations Committee for recommending abolition of the Labor Board's Division of Economic Research, Representative Smith concentrated his fire on David J. Saposs, head of the division.

Smith quoted extensively from evidence presented to his committee purporting to show that Saposs had written along radical lines.

Radicalism of Beethoven

Earlier debate in the House revolved largely about the alleged radicalism of NYA Administrator Aubrey Williams and Leopold Stokowski, world-famous conductor, who plans to lead an all-youth orchestra on a good-will tour of South America.

After Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, had referred to Stokowski as a "Communist," Representative Marcantonio (American Labor), of New York, facetiously shouted:

"I agree that Stokowski engages in alien and subversive activities. Why, look at what kind of music he conducts—Bach, Beethoven, Verdi, Wagner—they're all absolutely alien and subversive."

To prevent elimination of the NYA appropriation on a point of order, the House adopted, on a roll call vote of 360 to 10, a special rule ensuring consideration for the NYA in the pending bill.

M. J. Savage Dies; Labor Premier Of New Zealand

Wellington, New Zealand, March 26 (AP).—Michael Joseph Savage, 68, prime minister of New Zealand since 1935, died today.

Savage, New Zealand's first labor prime minister, effected a sweeping program which raised basic wages, increased unemployment relief allowances, introduced the 40-hour 5-day week to industry and brought the New Zealand Reserve Bank under government control.

He found time for participation in foreign affairs, actively advocating that the League of Nations have stronger punitive and coercive powers after its application of sanctions failed to halt Italy's invasion of Ethiopia.

Baptist Women Elect Mrs. Yaden

Mrs. J. G. Yaden was installed yesterday as president of the Woman's Baptist Missionary Association of the District at its annual election.

The Rev. C. B. Austin, president of the District Baptist Convention, installed the officers at the National Memorial Baptist Church.

The other officers are Mrs. O. E. Howe, honorary president; Mrs. T. E. Gilbert, first vice president; Mrs. Carlton M. Long, second vice president; Mrs. Harry N. Stull, third vice president; Miss Elizabeth Clark, recording secretary; Mrs. Mabel Mercer, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Albert Brown, statistical secretary; Mrs. J. Day Torrey, treasurer; Mrs. George A. Ross, retiring president of the association, member at large of the advisory board; Miss Edith Harlan, director of Columbia Girls; Mrs. W. E. Ward, director of Sunbeam Crusaders; Winsom Light, director of Royal Ambassadors.

Greater Respect For Law Needed, Says Judge Curran

There is need today for respect of law and authority more than at any other time in history, Judge Edward M. Curran, newly appointed United States attorney, told members of the Sigma Nu Phi, legal fraternity, yesterday.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting at the Hamilton Hotel, Judge Curran warned that "this is an age of irreverence and criticism and the attitude of modern citizens toward those clad in authority seems to be one of hostility, disrespect and contempt."

"But even liberty needs law," he said, "and its enforced observance is its best and surest defense."

Public duty, he concluded, implies duty to the State and may be said to consist of loyalty, respect and submission or obedience to law.

The Better Way to Correct Constipation

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and "cure" it afterward. The other way is to avoid having it by getting at its cause. So why not save yourself those dull headachy days, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by a simple common-sense "ounce of prevention"?

If your trouble, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, "the better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal has just the "bulk" you need. If you eat it regularly—and drink plenty of water—you can not only get regular but keep regular, day after day and month after month! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

New Tax Law This Year Believed Unlikely

By Russell Turner,
United Press Staff Writer

Possibility of new tax legislation this year appeared more remote last night despite the rout of Congressional economy forces by farm bloc leaders who succeeded in tentatively boosting agricultural appropriations for 1941 by about $300,000,000.

Latest to join in pooh-poohing prospects for a new revenue act was Chairman Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, of the Senate Finance Committee, who predicted on emerging from a conference with President Roosevelt that Congress would adjourn by June 1 without enacting a tax measure.

Best opinion at the Capitol was that no revenue bill would be pushed seriously unless Congressional and Administration leaders can agree on a type of tax that could be enacted with little opposition. Few informed officials regard such an agreement possible.

Income and Outgo

Harrison conferred with Mr. Roosevelt shortly after the Treasury revealed that Government expenditures this fiscal year up to March 23 amounted to $7,009,169,559, while income totaled only $4,362,057,872. On the same date last year expenditures amounted to $6,617,588,488, while receipts stood at $4,344,537,466.

Harrison pointed out that income tax payments are coming in "above estimate," but he addded that "it's still rather early to make predictions." The Treasury reported that payments so far this month amount to $638,073,031.

House Rejects Increases

Harrison's comment was interpreted as a good indication that if returns continue to exceed estimates, Congressional leaders will regard them as a sufficient and extremely welcome reason for not forcing a showdown on taxes, a politically explosive issue in an election year.

Conferences are to start soon on the $923,000,000 farm bill which was cut below budget estimates in the House and then hiked $300,000,000 by the Senate. Most observers believe the bill's final total will be nearer the Senate figures than the House version, despite the fact that the lower chamber on Monday refused to accept the Senate's amendments.

Many officials predict that national defense appropriations will be sliced below budget estimates in order to avoid the necessity of imposing new taxes, requested by President Roosevelt in his "bedrock" budget for 1941, or raising the $45,000,000,000 national debt limit. Mr. Rosevelt said that strict adherence to his budget estimates and raising of $460,000,000 of new revenue would keep the debt about $61,000,000 below the statutory limitation.

18 Billions in Gold

Meanwhile, the Treasury's monthly bulletin showed that gold valued at $197,000,000 was imported into the United States during February, bringing this country's total gold stocks to a new record of $18,177,500,000. Gold stocks stood at $17,643,400,000 at the end of December, 1939.

Supplemental figures issued by the Commerce Department discosed an abrupt rise in gold imports from Sweden. The figures showed that since January 1 Sweden has shipped an average of $7,000,000 of gold weekly into this country, earmarked for future use, and that imports of Swedish gold skyrocketed to $24,391,675 during the week ended March 20.

Stiff Neck, Blood Poisoning Yield to D. C. Physicians' Skill

Heartening progress in the treatment of two widely different afflictions—stiff neck and blood poisoning—was reported by three Washington doctors yesterday.

After eight years of trial, Dr. Julius S. Neviaser informed the District Medical Society that his method of treating stiff neck by placing the patient's head in traction—which might be facetiously called "modified hanging"—has brought complete relief in 54 of 76 cases and improvement in 19 others.

Simultaneously Drs. Thomas F. Keliher and Sidney A. Carlen reported the recovery of a 15-year-old boy suffering from the nearly always fatal staphylococcus septicemia, following treatment with the drug sulfamethylthiazol.

Use Is Limited

Clinical instructor in surgery at George Washington University Medical School, Dr. Neviaser emphasized that the spectacular head traction treatment may be adopted only in those cases of stiff neck resulting from injury, chronic arthritis or muscular pain. Those due to spinal fracture or disease of the vertebrae are ruled out.

In applying traction, the patient's head is placed in a halter and then he stands on tiptoe. A rope running through an overhead pulley takes up the slack, then the patient comes down gradually until his heels barely touch the floor. The treatment, lasting perhaps five minutes, is more awkward than painful.

"This method of treatment has been used for the past eight years," said Dr. Neviaser. "It was first tried in despair in a case of mild hyperthrophic arthritis of the cervical spine associated with pain and stiffness which had had every form of conservative orthopedic care over a period of three years without relief.

Relief Achieved

"Treatment every third day gave this patient complete relief of pain with increased range of motion in six weeks. The patient was also made to sleep in head traction."

Early death seemed certain for the 15-year-old boy who was admitted to Gallinger Hospital December 14, 1939, a victim of blood poisoning caused by the same germ which is responsible for the common boil.

His temperature was 104. He was in great pain.

Thirteen days later—the soonest a supply could be obtained—treatment was begun with sulfamethylthiazol, a newly developed derivative of sulfanilamide. Drs. Keliher and Carlen said the boy's fever subsided rapidly and pain diminished. A month later he was discharged from Gallinger.

Dr. Keliher is instructor in clinical medicince at Georgetown University Medical School. Dr. Carlen is a junior medical resident at Gallinger.

Businessmen's Federation Backs Bowdler; Donovan, Lee Are Indorsed

The board of directors of the Federation of Business Men's Associations, representing a membership of 1,500, last night nominated Louis L. Bowdler, federation president, for District Commissioner to succeed Commissioner George E. Allen, who will resign April 15.

At the same time, the Southeast Citizens Association launched a boom for Adelbert W. Lee, president of the Randle Highlands Citizens Association, and called a mass meeting in the interests of his candidacy for Friday evening at 8 in the Fifth Precinct Police Station, Fifth and E streets southeast.

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, was indorsed for the job by the executive committee of Costello Post, American Legion. Hampshire Heights Citizens Association, refraining from naming a candidate, urged that the President select a qualified resident of the District.

Lee, Darr Discussed

Selection of Bowdler by the board of directors virtually assures approval by the federation, it was pointed out, since 11 of the federation's 15 member organizations were represented at last night's executive session at the Continental Hotel.

It was learned that, the business men discussed among other candidates, Lee, Sefton Darr, past president of the District Bar Association, and Maj. Donovan, before deciding on Bowdler.

The directors voted to carry on a strong campaign in behalf of their candidate among other organizations within their own communities. Bowdler's name was presented by James P. Rogers, president of the Northeast Business Men's Association.

Heads Society of Natives

A native of Washington, the 48-year-old Bowdler operates a floral business and is president of the Society of Natives. He is a member of Lincoln Park, Mid City, and Trinidad Citizens Associations, and is a delegate to the Federation of Citizens Asscoiations from the Society of Natives. He is also a member of the Northeast and Central Businessmen, and is on the advisory committee of the American Security & Trust Co.

Southeast Citizen Association's vote to back Lee for the commissionership followed individual indorsements presented by Arthur Shaffer, president of the Southeast Businessmen's Association, and Louis E. Frick, secretary; W. A. Duval, president of the Fort Davis Citizens Association; H. W. Austin, president of Bradbury Heights Citizens Association; Archie C. Edwards, president of North Randle Highlands Citizens Association, and Orrin Davey, president of the Southeast Council.

Mass Meeting Called

The meeting, held in Friendship House, 619 D street southeast, heard appeals that the association act swiftly if it's recommendations were to have any effect in the final choice of Commissioner. The membership voted to call a special mass meeting of all East Washington organizations and citizens to boost the candidacy of Lee.

The resolution indorsing Lee was offered by Victor Perlmutter, who declared that Lee was an avowed advocate of District suffrage, "who would be willing to step out of office when the District won the vote."

Lived in D. C. 38 Years

Lee, who is 39 and has lived in the District 38 years, is in the real estate business. He is a member of the Board of Trade, vice president of the Southeast Business Men's Association, delegate to the Federation of Business Men's Associations, and a member of the board of Casualty Hospital.

Costello Post's executive committee, meeting in the District Building, urged selection of Maj. Donovan because "he is well qualified and trained in District governmental affairs." Donovan was a founder and first commander of the post.

Donovan, who is 64, has served the District government for 49 years. District auditor since 1919, Donovan is also budget officer, chief of the District Personnel Board, administrator of the efficiency rating system and administrator of the District employes retirement law. He is a native of Washington.

Community Chest Agencies to Give Exhibit May 21

An exhibit of Community Chest activities will take the form of a country fair on May 21, with several thousand "key persons" in Washington to be invited, it was announced yesterday.

The Community Chest League will hold its second annual garden party on the Charles Carroll Glover estate at 4200 Massachusetts avenue northwest, from 2 to 6 p. m. Forty-three of the 67 Chest agencies already are planning exhibits.

Mrs. Stanley F. Reed is chairman of the reception committee; Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., heads the guide committee; Mrs. James Clement Dunn, the refreshment committee; Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, the judging committee, and Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., the motor corps.

Association Opposes Race Track Bill Of Reynolds

David A. Hart, assistant United States district attorney, was indorsed by the Hampshire Heights Citizens Association last night for elevation to the Police Court post to be vacated by appointment of Judge Edward M. Curran, district attorney designate.

In other resolutions, the association, meeting in the Lewis Memorial Methodist Church, opposed the Reynolds race track bill, approved the nomination of Judge Curran and that of David A. Pine to the District Court bench and urged Congress to increase the Federal contribution to the District in view of its failure to agree on a tax program.

A fourth resolution recommended selection of a qualified District resident to succeed George E. Allen, recently resigned District Commissioner.

In its resolution on taxation, the association emphasized its contention that the question of suffrage or national representation for the District should be disposed of before further taxes are considered.

The association marked its incorporation under District laws in a brief ceremony during which incorporation papers were presented by Robert Hunter, association counsel, to the president, Harry J. Miller.

D. J. Locke, staff engineer of the Capital Transit Co., was a speaker.

Lieut. J.W. Moreau, Miss E. L. Stewart To Wed Saturday

Lieut. Jean W. Moreau, U. S. M. C., White House aide, and Miss Elizabeth Louise Stewart, of Knoxville, Tenn., will be married at 11:30 a. m. Saturday in the Church of the Immaculate Conception at Knoxville, it was announced here last night.

The wedding party will include Capt. Robert E. Hill, U. S. M. C., another White House aide; Dick Watson, secretary to Representative Jensen, of Iowa, and Richard Auerbach, of the office staff of Senator Bridges, of New Hampshire.

Miss Stewart is the daughter of James Hyatt Stewart and the late Mrs. Sewart. Lieut. Moreau is the son of Mrs. O. F. Moreau, of Manchestere, N. H. Capt. Hill will be his best man. Miss Stewart will be attended by Ruth Barnham, of Knoxville.

500 Census Candidates Still Trying

100 Quit School After First Day Of Training

Candidates for the job of counting the District's citizens and their homes passed the mid-term mark of their four-day school session yesterday, with their ranks thinned from 600 to 500. They are attending classes from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. in the new Census Building at Third and D streets southwest.

Garnett R. Brown, supervisor of the local census, and one of four teachers who have taken over the intensive training job, said that plenty of candidates will be available to start their census rounds next Tuesday.

Final appointments will be made by examination, and assignments will be ready Monday, detailing the enumerators to their districts for a two-week workout.

No elimination has yet been made through examination, and on their first quiz, covering material studied before their training course, the applicants came through with flying colors, said Brown.

Instruction on how to take the population census was completed yesterday, he said, and the classes today and tomorrow will cover the housing and agricultural census work.

Unpaid during the training period, the enumerators will earn between $4 and $5 a day when they begin their rounds— 4 cents a name on the population lists, 2 cents for each infant card, and 8 cents for each housing schedule.

Cold Wave Ends; Rain Due Tonight

A high temperature of 46 degrees at 5 p. m. yesterday ended the Easter cold wave here.

The Weather Bureau predicted warmer weather for today with clouds and rain developing at night. It will be cloudy with rain also tomorrow, according to the forecast.

The return of warmer weather came after a day of severe cold in which a 44-year record was set.

Lowest temperature yesterday was 25 degrees from 4 a. m. to 7 a. m.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Kurt Hetzel conducts the Washington Civic Orchestra in Constitution Hall Tuesday night, with Richard Baldwin as soloist. Program: Overture to "Ruslan and Liudmila" (Glinka), Piano Concerto No. 2 in C minor (Rakhmaninov), Prayer and Dream Pantomime from "Haensel und Grete'" (Humperdinck), "Valses Nobles et Sentimentales" (Ravel), "Covent Garden," "Westminster" and "Knightsbridge" from "London Suite" (Eric Coates).

Making its first appearance in Constitution Hall after a sojourn in the auditorium of Central High School, the Washington Civic Orchestra was heard last evening by an audience not as large as had been hoped. The house was far from being crowded, but the greetings extended were so cordial as to establish a friendly and encouraging atmosphere which is precisely what the organization needs. As far as the majority of the membership is concerned, the orchestra is still very young, and appreciation of its efforts is what it most deeply craves.

Ray C. Brown

Making due allowance for the inevitable imperfections of an amateur group, the orchestra acquitted itself with credit. The experiment of moving to a larger hall, made for the purpose of stimulating public interest, entailed the natural result that its faults as well as its virtues were magnified. Upon is defects there is no cause to dwell, for they are common to all nonprofessional orchestras. Its chief virtue is the zeal with which the musicians play. They are obviously deriving pleasure from the experience of making music together, and this spirit of enjoyment was evident in the dashing way they led off the program with Glinka's overture to "Ruslan and Liudmila."

Richard Baldwin, a former Washingtonian who had volunteered his assistance as soloist, made a favorable impression of technical competence with his performance in Rakhmaninov's C minor piano concerto. He has fleetness and ease at the keyboard, and accuracy in execution. As to his tone-coloring and his ability to project music emotionally, it was impossible to make a fair appraisal, partly because the orchestra so overwhelmed him in the tutti as to turn his playing into a dumbshow, and partly because the piano was unresponsive in sonority.

The remainder of the program, which I did not hear because of another engagement consisted of the familiar prayer and dream scene from Humperdinck's "Haensel and Gretel," Ravel's "Valse Nobles et Sentimentales" and three numbers from Eric Coates' "London Suite."

Louise Behrend and Dorcey Smith give a recital of sonatas for violin and piano Tuesday night at the Arts Club. Program: Sonata in E flat major, K 380 (Mozart), Sonata in G major, Op. 96 (Beethoven), Sonata in E minor, Op. 82 (Elgar).

Louise Behrend, a resident violinist who has been heard here on sundry occasions in solo appearances, joined forces last evening with Dorcey Smith at the Arts Club in an enjoyable recital of sonatas for violin and piano. Both young women are students whose growing artistry makes them a very promising team, for their collaboration is not only a matter of neat technical adjustments but is also used on a fundamental agreement in interpretation.

Arriving late from the Civic Orchestra concert, I missed their reading of a Mozart sonata and the first two movements of Beethoven's G major sonata. In the remainder of that work, however, they demonstrated their ability to play Beethoven well. The scherzo had the right amount of humor and the proper flexibility of tempo, and the finale was played with a deeply felt poesy.

Particularly pleasurable was their fine reading of Sir Edward Elgar's neglected Sonata in E minor in which they disclosed their very evident affection for the work: There was care in the phrasing and the tonal shading, and their interpretation had a genuine eloquence. That they chose this sonata is proof of their artistic taste and their freedom from standard restrictions. It is a work which rewards the auditor at every fresh hearing. The vigorous and virile first movement is thematically original and arresting, and the "Romance," which should have been called "Meditation," is an imaginative reverie of rare and tender beauty touched with an eerie playfulness.

Capital News In Brief

A Hot Idea

When an employe of a local fuel company decided to master a recalcitrant catch on the door of a coal gondola of the Philadelphia-Reading Railroad, he succeeded beyond his hopes.

Finding the catch stuck fast in Monday's cold, the employe built a small fire beside the gondola on a spur track at Van Burene street and Sandy Spring road northwest to thaw it out.

Soon No. 24 Engine and No. 11 Truck companies were racing to the scene. The fire, burning merrily, had sprung the catch and ignited the coal inside the gondola. Result: 20 tons were destroyed and the gondola damaged.

3,400 Face Loss of Aid In District

Spring Upturn Will Not Offset Relief Lay-Offs, Says Bondy

Even a spring upturn in employment here will not offset the laying off of 3,000 persons from WPA and more than 400 persons to be dropped from Board of Public Welfare assistance, Robert E. Bondy, director of public welfare, said last night.

In an address before the Women's Trade Union League of the District he pointed out urgent human needs in Washington and spotlighted three specific cases to show lacks in the present program.

"It costs about $80 a month to keep a patient at Glenn Dale Sanatorium. A person who comes out of there may go into a family on relief. We can add only $6 a month to a family for that person. The care at the sanatorium may be negated because of the inadequate amount to continue the care which he needs when he returns home," Bondy said.

He told of a 10-year-old girl who was taken to the Receiving Home to be with delinquent children, although she was not delinquent.

Foster Homes Needed

"Her father was dead, and her mother did not give her a suitable home. While plans were being made for her future, she should have been placed in a family home, instead of the Receiving Home," he said.

He stressed the need for additional appropriations for foster home care and for a larger staff to find more foster homes and to give better supervision.

The third case dealt with a painter who had been laid off of WPA because of the provision for such a lay-off after 18 months' work. The man came to the Board of Public Welfare to see if he might get help to stave off eviction.

Its funds to help employable persons in eviction emergencies "have been exhausted," Bondy said, and furthermore between 400 and 500 persons will have to be dropped from its rolls between now and June 30.

Bondy reiterated the need for a central application bureau where everyone in need would go—whether to seek a WPA job or relief or surplus commodities. Such a bureau and a more adequate staff would make possible a knowledge of the "extent of the problem" here, he said.

The $30,000 which was appropriated for the new protective services for children "will probably be the most constructive and far-reaching expenditure we will make" in the total budget of the Board of Public Welfare, he said. He said this service would reach the problems of children before they reached the stage of delinquency.

Court Ruling Protested

The Women's Trade Union League adopted a resolution protesting the District Court ruling which sustained an indictment against American Federation of Labor Teamster Union officials and held labor unions subject to the Sherman Antitrust Act. Copies of the resolution will be sent to the Department of Justice and to the union.

The league also voted to support the strikers in the Press Cafeteria strike. Mrs. Annie Stein, chairman of the organization committee, asked for volunteers from the league to join the pickets.

Mrs. Olive W. Swinney, secretary of the child welfare division of the Council of Social Agencies, discussed the resources which the council offers in informing persons and groups about community conditions. She also discussed the need for the proposed bill which would protect children from commercialized placements for adoption.

Mrs. Ruth Reno, chairman of the league's education committee, presided over the program at the Y. W. C. A.

Rockville Fire Dept. Drive Opens

Under direction of a committee consisting of William E. Wootton, chairman; Marbery F. Gates and Franklin H. Wilson, the annual membership drive of the Rockville Volunteer Fire Department was under way yesterday.

In an appeal to citizens of the community to become supporting members, the committee points to the fact that a majority of the 52 members of the department are graduates of the first aid course given under direction and supervision of the American Red Cross and that members have availed themselves of the course of training sponsored by the Fire Extension Service of the University of Maryland. According to Chairman Wootton, the department responded to 204 alarms last year, of which 145 were fires and 59 rescue calls.

Md. Ignores Ruling, Taxes U. S. Employes

Levy Collected Despite Protests, Comptroller Says

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, March 26.—Federal employes domiciled in Maryland who claim citizenship in another State are classed as Maryland residents for income tax purpose, and the State is collecting despite protests, Deputy Comptroller Joseph O'C. McCusker said today.

McCusker said a number of Federal employes working in Washington who maintain Maryland homes had filed formal protests against payment when they sent in their State income tax returns.

"However, under Maryland law they are Maryland residents, and we are not segregating their protests," McCusker said, "their returns are being handled with the others in the usual routine."

McCusker said the recent decision of the Federal court holding the District of Columbia could not assess a personal property tax on Federal employes who retained citizenship in other States had caused the filing of the Maryland protests.

"Those are the terms of the opinion as I understand it," McCusker said, "However, Maryland was not a party to the suit and is not bound by the opinion."

Fauquier Fire Ruins Forest, Perils Homes

Warrenton, Va., March 26.—Fire swept over two large wooded areas near here today and all but reached the historic home of John Marshall, noted Chief Justice of the United States, and a house owned by Mrs. Austin McDonnell, mother-in-law of Igor Cassini, Washington newspaper columnist.

The fires, spread over a total area of more than 5 square miles, gave members of the Warrenton Volunteer Fire Department as much harassment as they have ever experienced. Not the least of their worries stemmed from a rumor that the McDonnell property was once owned by a fabulously rich pirate.

The firemen spent half their time falling into and picking themselves out of holes dug by searchers after pirate gold.

At Oak Hill, the Marshall estate, now the home of Alvin Baird, socialite sportsman, heat from the field fire was so intense that firemen under Lieut. Douglas Fisher had difficulty getting close enough to reach flames with water hoses. The blaze was extinguished a short distance from the house.

A large stand of timber was destroyed on the McDonnell estate where a high and shifting wind blew flaming tree tops across back fires. Residents of Snow Hill and New Baltimore were called out to help firemen.

Jewish Center Trustees Fete Harry King

Plaque Presented Him in Tribute To His Services

A testimonial luncheon in honor of Harry King's seventy-fifth birthday and the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. King was held yesterday at the Ambassador Hotel by the board of trustees of the Jewish Community Center.

A bronze plaque was presented King, commemorating his services as first president of the center, from 1923 to 1928.

Speakers at the luncheon included Benjamin Ourisman, the incumbent president of the center; Morris Cafritz, former president; Col. Julius I. Peyser, Maurice D. Rosenberg and Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

While tributes were being paid to King's civic activities, it was brought out that he had served as president of the Chamber of Commerce and that he had refused appointment as District Commissioner in the Wilson Administration.

King was 75 years old on March 15 and the following day he and Mrs. King celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. They were in Hollywood, Fla., at the time.

Mrs. King and other members of the family were present at the luncheon. Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Community Chest, also was a guest.

Edward Arnold, In D. C., Asks Day Honoring Youth

An American Legion post here was asked last night by a motion picture star to help establish an annual Americanism Day dedicated to the youth as it reaches the age of 21.

Edward Arnold, star of "Diamond Jim Brady" and "The Earl of Chicago," asked the support of National Cathedral Post No. 10, for a California movement for Nation-wide festivities each June 12.

Arnold said he was in Washington to seek Congressional adoption of his plan. With him was Ben Neal, commander of Musicians' Post, No. 434, Los Angeles, one of the originators of the movement.

Board Gets Child Welfare Measures

Council of Social Agencies Directors Indorse 2 Bills To Protect Children

Two proposed pieces of child welfare legislation—a bill to prevent commercialization of child placements and a bill to offer more protection to illegitimate children—advanced another step yesterday.

The bills, having just been indorsed by the board of directors of the Council of Social Agencies, were sent to the Board of Public Welfare for consideration.

Mrs. W. A. Roberts, executive secretary of the council, announced the directors' action at a meeting yesterday of the council's child welfare division which drafted the bills.

Hope the Welfare Board would act favorably on the bills and send them to Congress for consideration in the current session was expressed by Mrs. Roberts.

Licensing Provided

One bill would license child-placing individuals and agencies. The other would amend an act of 1912 to provide further safeguards for children born out of wedlock.

The child welfare division adopted a resolution indorsing "the philosophy of the Juvenile Court as a medium of social treatment of the juvenile as sound and in keeping with modern social work trends." The resolution said that "since the social concept of the Juvenile Court in the handling of the problems of minors has been challenged," the division wished to reaffirms its indorsement.

Copies of the resolution will be sent to the President and the Attorney General.

Miss A. Patricia Morss, director of the child welfare division of the Board of Public Welfare, deplored the inadequacy of the aid to dependent children grants in meeting the actual needs of families for financial assistance. She pointed out that the number of children covered had increased more than 380 per cent here since the beginning of the Social Security program.

Central Intake Service Advocated

Miss Morss advocated a central intake service for the family and child welfare divisions of the Board of Public Welfare, to route an applicant promptly to the suitable division and to prevent the "shopping around" and confusion which exist, she said.

Miss Emma O. Lundberg, assistant director of the child welfare division of the United States Children's Bureau, said Social Security Board grants for children enable the mother to remain at home to care for them, with a reduction in the number of children who must be placed in institutions.

Paul L. Kirby, assistant director, Board of Public Welfare, said the board's most significant work in the past year had been the establishment of a unit to give protective services to children in their own homes.

The Rev. John W. Rustin, chairman of the child welfare division, presided at the meeting at the Y. W. C. A. Mrs. Lewis Ottenberg, chairman of the child welfare legislative committee, reported on its activities.

Richmond Cadets Pause in Capital

Seventy-five cadets from John Marshall High School in Richmond spent three hours' leave in the Capital yesterday drinking sodas, seeing moving pictures and figuring out how to see the President.

Foreign Film Market Was Mined by Chance

Importer Lopert Discovered 'Mayerling,' Which Precipitated a French Avalanch; News Notes on the Local Theater Scene

By Richard L. Coe,
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

ONE SPRING AFTERNOON in New York several years ago a Russian-born Frenchman screened a picture filmed by a Parisian friend of his before a distinguished group of American actors which was to revolutionize the cinema scene in this country.

That picture was "Mayerling." From its commercial success in this country dates the influx of foreign films which recently has reached an unpredictable crisis because of the war.

That French was Ilya Lopert, since become a naturalized American, a sound technician whose New York studios had by chance become a sort of Union Station for foreign film folk. To him they would entrust their latest releases with no thought of his releasing them in this country, for that was out of his "line."

But that French "talkie" with Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux excited the young man. His smart, blonde wife shared his enthusiasm and with a rush that horrified other film folk, M. Lopert bought the American distribution rights to a film that was to make more money than and other importation, as much even as a successful American production.

Since then the erstwhile cloakers and suiters have played with foreign films as a baby plays with hand grenades. Sometimes those grenades have reached the mark; more often than not the thin chances have blown up at too close range and done, not only the too hasty exhibitors harm, but the entire foreign film reputation serious injury.

Mr. Lopert and his chic American wife will tell you that the French make bad pictures, too, an impressive admission for anyone trying to sell French films. For every Gallic picture he imports into this country, the Loperts view 30 or 40 which they consider lack artistic or commercial merit. And while their tireless hunts have brought forth "End of a Day," "Courier de Lyon" and "The Edge of the World," they are constantly hopeful and wear their combined eyes out searching for that luscious mirage, a swell moving picture.

For a time, at least, the war will have no effect on the foreign market here. At the moment, Julien Duvivier is in France directing a promising script and the Loperts are in town to introduce their latest find, "The Human Beast," which stars Simone Simon and is to succeed "The Mikado" next week at the Little.

John Garfield will take time out from the rollicking, mystifying "Heavenly Express" for a mass interview with high school and private school editors tomorrow afternoon at the National Theater. The likable film star has so excited the imaginations of younger newshawks that this press conference has grown to imposing proportions.

⟿

Yum-Yum Note with no reference to "The Mikado:" Dorothy Lamour's latest slinking will be screened for the drama desks this afternoon The raven-tressed charmer stars in "Road to Singapore" with Bing Crosby and Bob Hope.

Harry Carey, doing such a swell job in what might well be a mere supporting role in John Garfield's and Albert Bein's "Heavenly Express," will join Columnist Jimmy Fidler for a chat on the Capitol stage this afternoon during the six o'clock performance. Friends for years, the boys will swap reminiscences.

The Mount Vernon Open Air Theater will definitely open Sunday evening with the Charles Boyer-Irene Dunne film, "When Tomorrow Comes." As in previous years, this drive-in theater admits cars and ciddies (just to be quaintly different), free. It's the driver and his more mature friends who pay.

Hollywood Parade

By Jimmy Fidler

Having nothing better to do, I spent an hour last night, trying to analyze the "personality profits" of Hollywood for 1939. This was the question to be answered: "How many new, bonafide stars were developed during the year?" And please note that by "stars," I mean box-office personalities of sufficient voltage to dependably lure crowds into the theaters.

FIDLER

It was easy to find a host of capable performers among the recent arrivals—and quite a few likeable personalities, too. Lana Turner, Laraine Day and Hedy Lamarr, M.-G.-M's. three white hopes, all have considerable promise—but that's the best that can be said for them just now. Linda Darnell, Mary Healy, Brenda Joyce and Nancy Kelly may scale the heights for Twentieth Century—but they haven't done it to date. Jane Bryan at Warners, has proven herself an excellent actress—but it takes more than acting to pack the movie houses. Jeffrey Lynn, Eddie Albert and John Garfield have already appeared in several pictures without displaying that socko appeal a great star must have. Ellen Drew, Mary Martin, William Holden and Robert Preston, at Paramount, are still far back in the ranks.

Robert Donat, new to most American audiences, won an Oscar—but Oscars are given for acting ability, not for drawing power. Laurence Olivier almost made the grade—almost, but not quite. Maureen O'Hara and Robert Stack, my two best-bets, are still best - bets—but neither name on a theater marquee can guarantee a crowded house.

No, add the figures any way you wish, and you'll arrive just where I did. In 1939, Hollywood developed exactly one bonafide star, and that one is Vivien Leigh. Only one real box-office personality as a replacement for the many old-time top-notchers who are falling by the wayside. What's wrong, Hollywood?

CUFF NOTES: Phyllis Bottome, English scribe whose latest novel, "Danger Signal," has been purchased for Bette Davis, may screen debut in one of the pic's principal roles . . . Sidney (Charlie Chan) Toler is subdividing a new residential tract overlooking Hollywood . . . Spring Byington will leave Twentieth Century-Fox when her contract expires next month—which probably means a new mama as well as a new papa in the Jones Family . . . Use of 55 stunt men in battle scenes for "The Sea Hawk" sets an all-time high . . . Washington observations: After talking with inside sources here, my guess is that the President and Vice President team for the Democratic race will be Hull of Tennessee and Farley, with Hull carrying the South and Farley carrying the North. Also take this as inside information: that Edgar Hoover will welcome threatened investigation of his department because it will clear him and convict five much higher-ups who have been heckling him.

Civic Presents MacLeish and Benet Plays

'Fall of the City,' 'Devil, Dan'l Webster' On Bill at Wardman

By Richard L. Coe.

In performing on its double bill at the Wardman Park Theater Archibald MacLeish's "The Fall of the City" and Stephen Vincent Benet's "The Devil and Daniel Webster," the Washington Civic Theater is more than doing its share to make this week the most experimental, and at times the most stimulating, the local theater has seen in some moons.

Mr. MacLeish's play was written for radio and should be judged by its remarkable rhythm and sound rather than by its static and questionable appearance as a one-act play for the stage. It is a beautiful and imaginative poem to hear, this indictment of dictatorships by the Librarian of Congress, but it is somewhat senseless to watch because in striving for symbolism the Civic has merely become affected. Since the sound is its fundamental quality, and self-sufficing one, one easily becomes annoyed by the occasional attempts to dramatize the lines. The result is too much half and half.

The Benet play of the figure for whom the poet is so effectively building up a legend is sheer delight, meant to be laughed at a good deal and with a grain of salt to be savored seriously. It concerns a New Hampshire bridegroom who sold his soul to the devil and the statesman's efforts to free him of the bargain.

Day Tuttle directed both the plays, far more naturally in the more unaffected atmosphere of the Benet fantasy. Many of the Civic players double in both, with Merrill McLaughlin playing both Daniel Webster and the radio drama's studio director. Harrison Libbey and Mary Jo Day are outstanding as the newly-wedded couple. John Pooley Wright, as the Devil, and Richard Walsh as the announcer in the MacLeish poem carry important roles effectively.

Betty Rice, Weldon Berry, Wallace Culver, Robert Landley, Eleanor Cox Karsten, Marion Carroll Conway, Weldon Berry, Paul Sears, Edward Quigley, Frank Cronin, Frances Jackson and Minna S. Adams are but a few of the many players.

William M. Girvan's setting of the final play was particularly effective for its mobility. The bill will continue through Saturday evening.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 26 (INS). Join Warners and see the world! Come next March, a whole year from now, if everyone's alive and well, there'll be a trek to Santa Fe, N. Mex., much like the Virginia City expedition, arranged to celebrate the 400th anniversary of the discovery of New Mexico by Coronado. Oh, yes, they're looking that far ahead at Warners and, of course, a movie called "Santa Fe," written by Robert Buckner, will top off the whole thing.

PARSONS

Errol Flynn, who put "Dodge City" and "Virginia City" on the map, will be the star with Humphrey Bogart, Randolph Scott, Olivia De Havilland and Brenda Marshall and Michael Curtiz, of course, directing. Since the picture won't get going until September, I don't think we need take the cast, beyond Errol, handed me by Charles Einfeld, whose idea this is, too literally.

⟿

Alfred Basserman, the 75-year-old actor who was acclaimed by every critic who saw "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet," has settled his affairs with Uncle Sam. He will be permitted to remain in Hollywood, which is good news. Now that Basserman has his visa troubles removed he has been loaned by Warners to play one of the most important roles in "Personal History" and interesting too that his wife, Elfe, will play the innkeeper's wife. Although for 30 years they were on the stage in Germany, they have never appeared together in a movie so this will really be their movie debut. If Mrs. Basserman makes as much of a success as he did, it will mean that one more actor past middle age will be started on the road to fame.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Gregory Ratoff hurried from Sun Valley to Arrowhead Springs to meet Eugenie Leonovitch where they had a second honeymoon. Looks like everything is all right with them now; easy to believe Bobby Stack and Judy Garland had four dates last week after seeing them together at Mary Pickford's party. Bobby seems to have fallen for Judy hook, line and sinker; Elsa Maxwell arrived at the party in the wee sma' hours with a busload of people, who had taken part in a progressive dinner; where was Norma Shearer Saturday night? George Raft entertained eight men at a stag party at Ruby Foo's; Olivia de Havilland and Jimmie Stewart enjoying Raphael's music at Little Hungary; Hedy Lamarr and Gene Markey were there the same evening and Hedy delighted the patrons by singing Hungarian songs with the orchestra.

Dolores Del Rio and Cedric Gibbons talked long distance Easter—and their friends are hopeful of a reconciliation.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

D. and H. in A. A. U. Title Finals Tonight

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 26.—There was evidence that the season opened here the other day for Ken Keltner, the Cleveland third baseman. April 16 is the starting date for every other player in the league, but Keltner is playing this year under special circumstances.

POVICH

The season opened for Keltner when an iron-lunged Orlando fan watched Keltner go to the plate against the Nats in the first inning and then bellowed:

"D'j'you get your last relief check, you bum?" That, apparently was the beginning of a barrage that Keltner will doubtless hear throughout 1940. Unless all signs fail, and unless big league ball players suddenly become softies, Keltner will be subjected to the most merciless razzing of all time in baseball.

Why? Well, there was that little matter of Keltner's application for unemployment relief last winter when a six-month lapse in his $8,000 salary set in. It was redhot stuff for the newspapers—a big leaguer applying for $15 weekly relief during the off-season. It was, moreover, the first case of its kind brought to light.

Cleveland, with its long bread lines and threats of starvation for the jobless was being pictured as a national shame when Keltner's application for relief, despite his big league salary, received publicity. Keltner got a bad break there. Sports page columnists were quick on the trigger to condemn the fellow for what they called his greed at a time when fans of his own city didn't know where their next meal was coming from.

Of course it wasn't any crime by Keltner. In fact, the courts upheld ball players' rights to receive unemployment relief during the off-season. It later developed that virtually all the players on one big minor league club in the West had, in fact, been receiving relief checks But they were minor leaguers. Keltner was a big leaguer and one of the better-paid ones.

The fellow is certainly on a spot. Baseball writers this spring are prattling of the possibilities of such as Ted Williams and Charley Keller making good in the proverbial second-year test. But the test that confronts Keltner figures to be vastly more difficult. He'll need only his batting eye and his throwing arm to lift him to another brilliant year, but he'll be forced to battle against himself. In the face of the taunts that are certain to be flung his way, he'll need all his fortitude.

Keltner's Cleveland teammates have never breathed, even silently, a word about relief checks since the player joined the squad this spring. In fact there is a feeling of patronage toward him. Fellows like Hal Trosky, Bob Feller, Johnny Allen, Ben Chapman and Beau Bell know that the kid will be up against it. They like Keltner and they admire his ball playing.

But there are men on other clubs in the league who will lose no opportunity to unloose a dig at Keltner. Fortunate for Keltner it is that the old Detroit third base coach, Bennie Meyers, is no longer in the league. Meyers, accredited with being the best "jockey" in baseball when he was in it, probably would have made life intolerable for Keltner.

Bennie Meyers was the sort of a fellow who encountered Bucky Harris, his old manager, at Tampa, and rushed up to greet him, saying: "Hello, Bucky, dammit somebody told me you were dead. You're looking bad."

It is not any break for Keltner, incidentally, that he happens to be playing third base. Because coaching at third base are some of the more unfeeling of the men in big league baseball. The tidy little cracks that Art Fletcher, of the Yankees, and Jimmy Dykes, of the White Sox, will most certainly pour into the ears of Keltner, will certainly not help that fellow's frame of mind. And Del Baker, of the Tigers, is no shrinking violet whenever he starts to ride a guy on the other club.

Keltner will most certainly catch it from the fans in the stands, too. That lusty-throated lady in St. Louis who knows all the players' foibles certainly won't overlook Kenneth. And that booming razzberry Keltner probably will get from a seat in the upper deck of Griffith Stadium near the old press box will be easily identified as the voice of Bennie Mensh.

Even in his home town, Keltner may be in a difficult spot. Cleveland folks are the ones who could feel the most outraged by the attempt of a big league ball player to collect a weekly relief check when thousands among them were hungry. Keltner might assuage their anger by pounding the ball for Cleveland and continuing to make those great plays around third base. He might.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, March 26.—When Joe Louis took that thumping beating from Max Schmeling his worried operators came to Ed Frayne, the sports editor, who had considerable influence with them, and frantically asked, "what are we going to do now?" They were afraid that the physical beating their meal ticket took would settle in his brain and either snuff out his appetite for fighting or make him comically gun-shy.

CONSIDINE

Frayne had a remedy. He recommended a complete rest and eventually saw to it that Louis' first opponent, after the debacle, was Jack Sharkey. The psychology behind this was that the rest would tend to make Joe forget and quiet his nerves, and that knocking over Sharkey, small achievement that it was, would bolster his confidence in himself—for Sharkey was a good name.

It worked. Sharkey succumbed with a minimum of bother and Louis recovered from what might have been a career-ruining licking.

But just when he was coming back again he ran into, as well as after, Bob Pastor and he was made to look so bad that once again it became the duty of the Louis manipulators to restore the strange colored boy's belief in himself. This time the experimental rhesus monkey was good old Natie Brown. Brown had gone 10 rounds with Louis at the dawn of Joe's career as a wonder man. But this second time they fought, Joe got to the mildly protesting Brown early in the evening and belted him over in nothing flat.

Joe went on to become champion. When Tommy Farr made him look a little less than supernatural, Joe was fed such setups as Nathan Mann and Harry Thomas. Using their necks as stepping stones Joe climbed back into the wonder-man class, and stayed there (despite being knocked down by Tony Galento) until Arturo Godoy made him as bewildered as a ham actor who forgets his lines.

The scheduled antitode this time is Johnny Pacek, now called Paycheck by his altruistic manager. The operation is due Friday night at the Garden. The main attributes advanced in favor of Pacek's victory are that he plays the violin well and that he lists King Levinsky among the men he has beaten. He'd better not fiddle around in there with a Louis roaring back down the wonder man trail. As for King Levinsky, more guys have now beaten him than are going to buy the New York Yankees.

We expect Joseph to be excessively severe with him, which is sad because Johnny is a real nice fellow. But Joe's prestige needs building. Louis' lure is his cold, merciless fury, and if the public thinks that tigrous flavor might not be there, there is going to be an inclination to stay away. Hence the way his schedule is working out. The Godoy embarrassment is followed by what promises to be the public flogging by Pacek. After he attends to Johnny there may be another human oyster for Louis to inhale, to help to make him baleful again before the summer season. Then he'll go to work again on Godoy (and knock him out, we believe) as well as the other victims who are in line.

The man to beat Louis—we believe—isn't fighting as yet, or, if he is, he is some raw punk you never heard of. He is going to be a boxer, fundamentally, and a smart one. We doubt if—when the time comes—he will knock out Louis, for Joe can absorb punishment better than any of us suspected.

Also, the conqueror of Louis will have to be able to take a good punch. That almost automatically eliminates our good friend Mr. Pacek, now Paychek, and his elimination is going to be a shot in the arm for Louis. A shot of venomous confidence.

Klein Returns Again to Phillies

Miami Beach, March 26 (AP).—The Phillies management announced today that Chuck Klein, slugging outfielder who on two previous occasions has worn the livery of the Philadelphia National League club, had accepted terms and was en route here.

Klein until recently was the property of the Pittsburgh Pirates. With them last year he hit .300 in 85 games and drove in 47 runs.

Georgie Abrams Decisions Vigh

New York, March 26 (AP).—Georgie Abrams, 162¼, Washington, D. C., gained a hard-earned decision over Ernie Vigh, 162, Newburgh, N. Y., in a bloody eight-round feature at the Coliseum tonight before 8,000 spectators.

Tony Avia, 130, Havana, Cuba, gained a six-round decision over Joe Amico, 129¾, New York, in a preliminary.

United Typers Play Coalmen At Heurich's

FBI Bows, 43-30, In Semifinal; J. C. C. Loses, 36-28; Aces And Photos to Clash

With the District A. A. U. championship at stake, the Delaware & Hudson Coalmen will meet the United Typewriters tonight at Heurich gymnasium at 9 o'clock. The final between these ardent rivals was assured last night when D. and H. handed a 43-to-30 defeat to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in the concluding semifinal battle.

An hour earlier another bitterly fought and unique struggle for the 145-pound championship is scheduled with two teams representing the Stewart Brothers clashing. The Photos will oppose the Aces. Last night the Photos gained the title bracket by coming from behind to polish off the Jewish Community Center, 36 to 28.

Good, hard basketball can be expected tonight in the clash of D. and H. and United Typewriters. Last year the Typers turned back the title threat of the Coalmen in the final game at Eastern High. This year the Typers won the Heurich League crown with D. and H. the runner-up. Just two weeks ago D. and H. took the measure of their rivals in the Middle Atlantic tournament. Their final meeting of the 1940 season tonight should fairly hum with action.

Rivals Well Fortified

Both clubs have excellent passing combinations, good shots and keen defensive men. For the most part, they play clean basketball. In addition, they know the Heurich gym. The Coalmen, managed by George J. Cooke, will have Bobby Lucas, Tommy Nolan, Acky Viana, Gerald Burns, Pickel Walker, Clinton Quantrille, Tommy Folliard and the others who long since have made their mark in local independent, high school and league ranks.

United Typewriter has an equally effective club. Ollie Tipton, Lenny Mills, Stanton, Sullivan and the others are on a par with their rivals in all phases of the game.

There's more than a mere basketball game on the fire for the two Stewart Brothers fives. The best players, numbering several high school stars, will carry the banner of the Photos. The Aces are composed of the players considered not good enough for the other club. Johnny Poston, Mr. Basketball, Himself, is coach of the Photos and, with his two brothers, a player on the Aces. He has elected to play for the Aces rather than direct the play of the Photos.

Won Two Crowns

The Aces already have won two A. A. U. titles in other years, having gathered in the 100 and 120 pound crowns. Both clubs have had to fight come-from-behind battles. The Aces won one game by a single point and another in an extra period.

Last night, the Photos were forced to show all they had in a basketball

Air Corps Court Team's Plane In Slight Crash

Denver, March 26 (AP).—The Army Air Corps basketball team from March Field, Riverside, Calif., had a bit of tough luck on its Denver visit.

After losing a 36-16 game to the Lowry Field team last night, the squad received a scare this morning as its Army transport plane groundlooped on the takeoff from Lowry Field. None of the 10 passengers was injured, however.

Damage to the plane was slight, but it was necessary to borrow a plane to fly to Scott Field, Belleville, Ill., for a cage game tonight.

Portsmouth Cubs Go South—They 'Should of Stood in Bed'

Joe Medwick Signs $18,000 Card Contract

Slugging Outfielder Voluntarily Takes Club's Final Offer

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 16.—Joe Medwick, slugging outfielder, voluntarily signed his 1940 contract with the St. Louis Cardinals tonight, ending a long and stubborn holdout siege.

Ending the war of nerves between himself and the club, Medwick reportedly signed at the Cardinals' terms for $18,000.

Medwick, who led the National League in batting in 1937, affixed his signature to the dotted line after President Sam Breadon had notified him his stay in Florida at the Cardinals' expense was at an end.

Previously midnight tonight had been set as the "deadline" when the Cardinal management planned to withdraw the $18,000 offer.

The hard-hitting leftfielder was reported to be holding out for $20,000, the pay he received two years ago. The Cardinals sliced off $2,000 last spring.

Immediately after signing Medwick left with his teammates for Miami Beach, Fla., where the Cards play the Phillies tomorrow before embarking for a series in Havana, Cuba.

Since returning here from his St. Louis suburban home a week ago, the one-time National League's most valuable player had held numerous salary confabs with Vice President Branch Rickey, but neither would give in to the other's demands.

Medwick was in Florida during the first part of the training season, but returned to St. Louis early this month. Medwick said Rickey failed to show up for a salary conference, but the Cardinal official asserted the outfielder had misunderstood his plans for arriving here.

Louis 1-5 Favorite To Cancel Paychek

By the Associated Press

New York, March 26.—If all the puns on Joe Louis cashing his (Johnny) Paycheck in Madison Square Garden Friday night were laid end to end—and covered with a foot or two of solid earth—it would serve them exactly right.

No one to date, except those plentifully supplied with rose-colored glasses in Johnny's own camp, has been brash enough to see how this particular Paycheck can help bouncing when the Brown Bomber goes to work in his tenth defense of the World Heavyweight Championship. And thus agreed, the boys are telling about it in the "punniest" ways possible.

The betting men, having heard via the grapevine that Louis is really in there pitching at his Greenwood Lake training camp, have installed the "boss man" favorite at odds ranging from 1 to 5 all the way to 1 to 8 to cancel Paycheck in one way or another. If you shop around a bit, you can even get 2 to 5 that the Des Moines fiddler won't last the 15-round "derby distance."

These prices were maintained today notwithstanding the fact that Paycheck spent the morning looking at movies of several of Louis' less impressive starts and came out with the confident assertion that this boss man of the belters wasn't "such a much."

Johnny Enjoys Himself

"I," Johnny calmly stated after watching Max Schmeling cut down Joe in 12 rounds, "can punch better than Schmeling."

Then he enjoyed himself thoroughly as reels were run off showing Louis fumbling around through 15 rounds each with Tommy Farr and Arturo Godoy and chasing Bob Pastor 21 rounds before catching him.

"And what's more," he added, "I can box better than any of those guys."

(The movies showing Louis annihilating Schmeling in their second meeting, and mowing down such opponents as John Henry Lewis, Tony Galento, etc., were not shown, for some reason.)

Both battlers will wind up their heavy training tomorrow.

Dorothy Kirby Captures Medal In North-South

By the United Press

Pinehurst, N. C., March 26.—Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, won the first round of medal play in the thirty-eighth North and South women's golf championship here today with a card of 40, 39—79.

Seventy-five of the Nation's leading women golfers entered the 18-hole medal play round, competing for 32 places in the championship division at match play starting tomorrow.

Trailing Miss Kirby by a single stroke were five players, including Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, Greensboro, N. C., former national champion and recent winner of the Midsouth at Southern Pines, N. C.

Others with 80s were Jane Cothran, Greenville, S. C.; Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I.; Deborah Verry, Worcester, Mass., and Mrs. Thomas Nolan, Newcastle, Pa.

Jeanne Cline, 16-year-old Bloomington (Ill.) High School girl, took seventh place with an 81.

Georgia Taintor, Fargo, N. Dak., 17-year-old North Dakota State champion, squeezed into the championship flight of 32 by winning a play-off among four others who had scored 94 and tied for the last place in the flight.

Eagles Beat Orioles, 6-4, To Open Series

Four Final-Period Goals Decide Game; Dewey, Courteau Star

By Jack Munhall.

The Washington Eagles made their farewell home appearance of the 1940 season a memorable one last night by rearing back in the final period with four goals to defeat the Eastern League champion Baltimore Orioles, 6-4, at Riverside Stadium in the opener of a three-match series for the Mayor Jackson Cup.

More than 2,000 fans saw the campaign ended in satisfactory style as the second-place Eagles captured their ninth victory against five losses and one tie with the Orioles this year. Also the Eagles were climaxing a remarkable home stand in which they won 24 matches, lost 8 and tied 3.

[The second and third matches of the series will be played tonight and Sunday night in Baltimore.]

First Session Scoreless

After a scoreless opening period in which Washington rained a barrage of shots on Goalie Kelly to no avail, the boys began to find their shooting eyes and the Orioles took a 3-2 lead in an exciting second session.

The Eagles tallied first, at 6:01, as Davies blasted one in from just in front of the blue line with a wild swipe. When the red light flared no one was more amazed than the big Washington defenseman.

The Orioles came back to forge into a 3-1 advantage as Roach, Boll and Ripley fired goals after great passing in each case. Center Erickson was especially conspicuous for his fine passing, being credited with assists on the goals by Boll and Ripley.

Courteau Scores Second

Courteau counted the Eagles' second goal at 13:15 after spending fully five seconds juggling the puck to get into position to shoot. McTeer fed the little wingman a pass directly in front of the Baltimore net and about ten feet out. Two defensemen rushed Courteau but he eluded both by clever stick handling and then let loose his shot between them.

The first period was fairly slow and devoid of any of the expected rought tactics. The Eagles wasted a scoring chance when they couldn't capitalize the absence of Tuten, Baltimore defense, who drew a two-minute banishment for tripping. During the period of Tuten's

Featherweight 'Muddle' Ended in Baltimore—Maybe

15-Round 'Title' Bout In Baltimore

Miller Says Champ Will Be Stripped Of Crown; Maryland Slaps at Kennedy

World's Featherweight Champion Joey Archibald and Baltimore's Harry Jeffra yesterday signed for a return 15-round title bout in Baltimore May 20, but it won't be for the championship if the National Boxing Association has anything to do with it.

Archibald will be stripped of his 126-pound title by that body Friday for failing to agree to defend the crown against Pete Scalzo, No. 1 contender.

The diminutive Providence fighter will be recognized as champion only in New York and Maryland after the N. B. A.'s expected action.

Archibald and his manager, Al Weill, were guaranteed $8,000 and 40 per cent of the gate, with the Century Athletic Club and Herman Taylor, Philadelphia promoter, jointly staging the show, the Associated Press reported.

By its action, the Maryland Boxing Commission took a slap in two directions—at the N. B. A. and at its own Representative in Congress, Ambrose J. Kennedy.

Miller Is Silent

Whether Maryland plans to kick over the traces of the N. B. A. which has a membership of over 40 States, was uncertain, but Stanley Scherr, chairman of the Maryland Commission, was a party to the signing yesterday in Baltimore.

Heinie Miller, president of the N. B. A., refused to say whether the national body will expel Maryland.

"The matter will rest in the hands of the next national convention in September," he said.

The action in Baltimore, however, appears a more direct punch at Representative Kennedy, who recently sided with the N. B. A. in insisting that Archibald must first defend his title against Scalzo before fighting Jeffra.

Furthermore, Kennedy plans this week to introduce a bill in Congress asking for a sweeping investigation of boxing, with particular emphasis on the Archibald-Jeffra case.

The signing brought to a temporary end months of wrangling that began when the two met last fall here in Griffith Stadium and Archibald took an unpopular decision that precipitated a near-riot among the fans.

N. B. A. Demand Ignored

The N. B. A.'s demands for a return bout were ignored by Weill. Then the N. B. A. ruled that Archibald first meet Scalzo for the title. Weill ignored this but subsequently was given until March 28 to keep faith with that latest ruling. Only Monday the N. B. A. stripped Lou Ambers, Weill's world lightweight champion, of his title for failing to defend his crown within six months.

Promoter Joe Turner, who had offered Weill a flat guarantee of $7,500 for the fight in Washington, announced last night he was seeking to bring Scalzo into the Capital for the first one-third of a three-way battle for the featherweight title.

With Archibald out of the picture, the title would be decided by a match between Scalzo and Jimmy Perrin, of New Orleans, No. 2 contender, with the winner meeting Jeffra

This arrangement hinges on Jeffra's performance against Archibald. Perrin and Scalzo both have beaten Archibald.

'Peace Conference' Fails to Materialize

The National Boxing Association and New York's Promotter Mike Jacobs, feuding over the Joey Archibald-Harry Jeffra case and boxing in general, agreed to get together yesterday—but not to each other.

They told their tales of woe to the United Press—N. B. A. President Heinie Miller in Washington and Jacobs in New York.

Informed that the New York State Athlettic Commission was ready for a "peace conference," Miller rushed to the front with a statement the N. B. A would be "most happy" to confer with the commission, and even Jacobs.

Jacobs came back with the remark that he'd be glad to meet with the N. B. A.

Last night Miller said he hadn't talked to Jacobs about it, nor to Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the New York Commission. Furthermore, neither of them had talked to him, he added.

Miller, however, reiterated his stand that the N. B. A. is "fed up" with the New York monopoly of fight champions.

"I'm a promoter, and I have to sign the best fighters or the fans don't patronize the bouts," he said. "I'm more than willing to cooperate with the N. B. A."

2d Round of $5,000 Greensboro Open Again Postponed

By the Associated Press

Greensboro, N. C., March 26.—The tournament committee postponed the second round of the $5,000 Greensboro Open Golf Tournament again today, setting up a schedule that calls for 18 holes tomorrow and the final 36 Thursday.

Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament manager, inspected the snow-covered Starmount course and observed that today's bright sun promised to put the layout in shape for tomorrow's round.

The Asheville Open will start Friday, as scheduled yesterday after the Easter Sunday snowstorm caused the first delay in the Greensboro meet.

Ben Hogan, of White Plains, N. Y., and Clayton Heafner, of Linville, N. C., were tied for the lead with 69's after the opening round Saturday.

Cavaliers Bunch Hits in Two Innings to Beat Terps, 6 to 2

Two Triples, Home Run Aid Attack

Virginia Comes From Behind to Turn Back Terps; Walker and Willey in Fine Form

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., March 26.—Bunching hits in two innings, Virginia defeated Maryland here today, 6 to 2, before the largest early season crowd in years. Coach Burton Shipley, of the Old Liners, made numerous changes in his line-up, using 18 players, who were held to two hits, one by Keller and the other by Maisel. Both were made off Walter Smith, who twirled for five innings. Willey, who finished, was steady throughout.

Maryland took the lead in the first frame, when Kelley's drive to center scored Maisel, but the Cavaliers came back in the third to register three runs on a single by Walsh, Burns' home run and Gosney's triple. Two runs were added in the sixth on a pass, Walsh's triple and a single by Willey.

Maryland's other tally was made by Garrett, who drew a pass, advanced to third on Maisel's single, and counted on a fielder's choice.

Two spectacular catches were made in center by Dodson, robbing Burns and Culver of hits. For Maryland, McDonald raced far back to pull down McCann's long foul.

Allen Hall Hits Skids in World Billiard Match

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 26.—Allen Hall, of Chicago, is going the wrong way fast in the world's three-cushion billiards title tournament.

Hall stayed up among the leaders in the 11-player field for two weeks, but now has hit the skids. Arthur Thurnblad, of Kenosha, Wis., handed him his eighth defeat in 13 games today, 50 to 46, in 60 innings.

Tiff Denton, of Kansas City, moved into seventh place ahead of Hall with a 50 to 25 victory over Arthur Rubin, of New York, in 41 innings.

Denton now has won six and lost eight and Rubin is deep in the basement with only three victories in 14 games.

No. 7—Bradley Hills

'The Hardest Hole on the Course'

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Fifth Is Bradley Hills 'Jonah;' Course to Get Revisions, 9 New Holes

This is another of a series on the 19 golf clubs in Metropolitan Washington, where the professional selects the hardest hole on the course. The twentieth and concluding story will deal with the hardest of the lot, from a consensus of opinion.

The new Bradley Hills golf course, now a private layout under the management of Edward G. Adams, is in for revisions on all nine holes, plus nine new ones next year, but the present fifth hole will stand for some time as the toughest on the course.

The short and sporty layout on Bradley boulevard, originally built for a national women's organization and later played as a semi-public course under the same name, will have the first three holes completely changed—by July it is hoped—and the others altered, but Al Jamison doesn't anticipate any will be a tougher layout than the original fifth.

The present measurement is 394 yards but when the first hole is moved the tee will be shoved back some 16 yards and the new yardage will total 410. The tee looks onto a wide fairway with trouble catching only those who hook or slice badly. Out around the 250-yard mark, the fairway falls to a roadway, but there is no penalty and the ball may be dropped back.

Trapped Well

The second shot is a five or six iron but the opening to the green is one of the best pieces of golf architecture in the city. Trapped well to the left and right, the runway is banked to the right and the trap is a better fate than rolling past it down the hill, and then pitching over the trap.

The left-hand side of the green finds a steep bank running up to a row of pines but the ball is more likely to carrom off the bank onto to the green than into the trees. Fred Findlay, a noted golf architect, designed the layout. It lacks only length to compare favorably with others in this section, and length it will have before long.

Deceiving Second Shot

The valley at the foot of the green and the hill that runs up to it present a deceiving second shot to the good sized, but flat green. The fairway is wide and bordered by rough, but the hole won't stand for too much hook or slice, our real trouble is in the offing.

The ninth hole, a par 3 stretching 197 yards with out of bounds to the left was considered, but Jamison, who was named pro at Bradley just a few weeks ago, decided on the fifth. The eighth drew some consideration as it requires a well-placed drive.

The three new holes and alterations to the others will extend the total distance to 3,250 yards and boost the par from 68 to 70. The present yardage is 2,770.

Adams is concentrating on clubhouse improvements at present, and is putting finishing touches on men's and women's locker rooms, the dining room and grill, card rooms and the various side rooms that do the two buildings. Jamison's shop will be in the corner of the main building adjacent to the first tee.

The present goal is 225 members but Adams has his eye on the future and in the addition of nine more holes. Other immediate outside additions will include a golf practice field and a pair of tennis courts.

"Jamy" has already lined up a half dozen or more of the city's top-notch golfers as members, and hopes to retain the State team title Bradley Hills won last year at Indian Spring.

Blozis Will Seek New Marks In Medley Shot-Put Event

8, 12-and 16-Pound Competition Features Finnish Relief Games

A medley shot-put competition of tosses with the 8, 12 and 16-pound weights will find Georgetown University's Al Blozis seeking more records Sunday night when the Finnish Relief Fund games are held at Madison Square Garden.

In the 1,000-yard run Phil Graves, another Hoya standout is to compete.

In Blozis' days at Dickinson High School, Jersey City, he earned a trunkful of medals through his prowess with the 8-pound and 12-pound weights and will call upon that experience against a select field Sunday.

Frank Ryan, the New York A. C.'s former national champion, and Earl Audet, Seton Hall husky, are among others entered in this competition.

There is no indoor record for the 8-pound shot, so the field will shoot for the outdoor mark of 70 feet ¼ inch set by Michigan's Bill Watson at Randall's Island two years ago. In the 12-pound event Ryan is fairly certain to see his mark of 60 feet 7⅝ inches, made two years ago as a member of the Columbia varsity squad, blasted.

In the 16-pound division Blozis' world record of 55 feet 8¾ inches will be at stake and Blozis alone is considered capable of breaking that distance.

Nurmi in Exhibition

New York, March 26 (INS).—The all-star track show featuring Taisto Maki, of Finland, for the Finnish relief fund here Sunday night, will include a solo exhibition by Paavo Nurmi, great Finnish distance runner of several years ago, officials announced today.

Nurmi will run only a half mile and will race against time without any competition.

'Skins Sign Former Pittsburgh Back

The Redskins' quest for blocking backs yesterday resulted in the signing for a one-year trial of Vince Farrar, formerly with the Pittsburgh Pirates. More than 6 feet tall and weighing 200 pounds, Farrar won the admiration of the Washington bosses with his blocking performance against the Redskins last fall.

Farrar, a graduate of North Carolina State in 1936, served one year with the New York Yankees of the American Professional League before joining the Pirates in 1938. He is 26 years old.

Farrar is the fourteenth player under contract to the Redskins for 1940.

Furr Working To Reach Peak For McDowell

His ego considerably sharpened by the National Boxing Association's designation of him as the eighth best welterweight in the world, Phil Furr, Washington 147-pounder, settled down to work for the most severe test of his comeback career Monday night in Turner's Arena.

Phil has the task of getting by a wild-swinging young Texan known as Wild Bill McDowell, the lad who once held the Lone Star State's cow-milking championship.

Furr, who gained the eighth position in the welterweight line-up by defeating another Texan, Kenny LaSalle, is working out daily at the Huron gymnasium, intent upon defeating McDowell and getting in line for bigger money fights in New York.

McDowell, a stablemate of Pat Comiskey, is the first real puncher to face Furr since the latter began his comeback last fall. LaSalle fell far below expectations, and Furr hit a new high at the same time when the two mixed it three weeks ago at the arena.

Phil's sparmate is the No. 1 middleweight contender, Ken Overlin, who fights Ceferino Garcia next month in the Garden for the middleweight championship. Promoter Joe Turner is holding out a big outdoor match in Griffith Stadium this summer as the prize for the winner of Monday's business.

50 Candidates Drill For Buckeye Eleven

Hoyas Launch Season Today With Quakers

Coach Joe Judge Has 'Switch' Line-up to Send Against Penn

Starting its fourth season under the coaching of former Nat star Joe Judge, Georgetown University's baseball team will meet the University of Pennsylvania at 2:30 this afternoon on the Hilltop Medical School Field.

Judge, while planning to alternate a trio of right-handed pitchers against the Quakers, has indicated he will suit his own batting order to the opposing moundsmen. If Penn starts a southpaw, Judge can pack his line-up with eight right-handed hitters and if an orthodox hurler is used he can throw in three left-handed batters.

Capt. John Smith, long Bill Wixted and Vinnie Powers are the three right handers Judge will alternate in three-inning shifts. If any of the three falter it is likely that one or more of the younger Hoya pitchers will be used. Jim Kiernan and Dick Dieckleman are the most impressive of the sophomore flinging crop. Dieckleman also will be used in the outfield this season because of his power at the plate, changing off With Joe Moran in right field. Dieckelman will bat aganst left handed pitchers and Moran against right handers.

Henry Mlynarski, a sophomore shortstop, will be carefully watched by the Georgetown coaching staff today because off his spring practice performance he is being touted as one of the best fielders to appear on the Hilltop in many seasons.

Facial Injury Puts Soose on Sidelines

Cleveland, March 26 (AP).—Promoter Bob Brickman announced today that Billy Soose, Farrell, Pa., middleweight, would be unable to meet Jimmy Reeves, of Cleveland, in a scheduled ten-round bout here tomorrow night due to a facial injury.

Soose suffered a deep cheek gash in his fight with Frankie Nelson, of Davenport, Iowa, at Youngstown last night and may be out of action for two months. Soose, 157, decisioned Nelson, 156, in ten rounds.

Heavyweights Bob Tow, of Washington, D. C., and Buddy Knox, of Dayton, Ohio, clash in another ten-rounder. Brickman is seeking a new foe for Reeves.

New Cup for St. Joe

Emmitsburg, Md., March 26.—A silver trophy to be known as the "Mother Seton Trophy" has been donated to St. Joseph's College by the Rev. James H. Casey, rector of St. Rose of Lima Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. It will be awarded each June to the class first in athletics.

On Fishing

There has been more than the usual interest this year in West Virginia trout fishing, if the number of calls as to the opening date is any criterion.

ACKERMAN

Until now we have been unable to publish or state the exact dates as West Virginia sets her seasons according to well-formed plans on data gathered during the preceding year, in a sincere effort to conserve her fish and game. Not to please magazine publishers, who like earlier information, nor to attract people from other States.

Even West Virginians, who have considerable say in the establishing of open hunting and fishing seasons, are not always in complete agreement, for different localities have different conditions. But in what State, at any time, have the conservation commissions ever been able to set universally satisfactory seasons?

And, because West Virginia doesn't use fishing and hunting to attract citizens of other States, don't get the impression you will be poorly received. Rather, just the opposite.

April 27 is opening day for the trout fisherman, and until 6 a. m., to prevent the damage of previous years caused by the midnight rush. Fishing regulation pamphlets are available at all county clerk's offices, and should be thoroughly read, not only as to open and closed streams, but for several important changes. The open season on trout continues until July 7. The season on all other game fish opens June 29.

Monongahela National Forest regulations will close certain sections of the Williams River and Slaty Fork because of the high fire hazard. When these are reduced, about July 1, these sections will be opened on a permit basis.

Then there is a special five-day season on certain feeder trout streams which have been closed for many years. This special, limited fishing period is set to permit the taking of some of the larger trout which investigation shows are feeding on the fry and fingerlings; and to reduce the number of legal size fish in the streams which have a population at the saturation point. The season on the streams, the names of which will be released at a later date, is from April 24 to May 1 inclusive.

Some West Virginia game fish are being given a small measure of protection for the first time. A definit: minimum limit of 5 inches has been set on rock bass, crappie, bluegills and red-bellied sunfish. On white and yellow suckers and channel catfish the minimum length is 10 inches.

West Virginia last year had 3,479 forest fires . . .some only burning over an area of an acre or two, while others destroyed natural resources and wildlife over hundreds of square miles.

This year the commission asks: Why not eliminate the negligence which causes every single forest fire and use the thousands of dollars of public money spent annually for fire control to build up the deer herd, increase the quail population, plant more trout and bass and acquire more State forests and parks?

Leafs Defeat Red Wings, 2-1; Rangers Win

Bruins Beaten and Cup Series Is Evened Up; 16,504 See Battle

Toronto, March 26.—Election-weary Sylvanus Apps paced the Toronto Maple Leafs to a 2-to-1 victory over the Detroit Red Wings tonight in the opening clash of their semi-final series in the National Hockey League playoffs for the Stanley Cup.

Beaten by a small margin in a Dominion election during the day, Apps was unbeatable on the ice tonight. He scored the first Toronto goal midway in the game, was close many more times, and gave the Leafs a flying start in the best-of-three series that picks up again Thursday night in Detroit.

Apps took a passout from Nick Metz while Capt. Ebbie Goodfellow of the Wings was serving a penalty and whacked it past Goalie Tiny Thompson from close range.

The Wings made it close at the end. After Sweney Schriner sped in to sink the second Toronto goal less than a minute after the third period start, trouble began.

Rangers Beat Bruins

New York, March 26 (U.P.).—The New York Rangers evened their semifinal Stanley Cup series at two victories apiece when they scored a 1-0 victory over the Boston Bruins before 16,504 fans, the largest crowd of the season, at Madison Square Garden tonight.

Murray Patrick, big Ranger defense man, blasted home the only marker of the game at 10:40 of the third period, and despite "suicide" tactics of the Bruins in late minutes, Goalie Davie Kerr turned in his second shutout of the playoffs.

After two scoreless but bruising periods and half of the third, Phil Watson stole the puck from Bobby Bauer in Boston territory and passed to Dutch Hiller, who set up the play which will send the Rangers back to Boston Thursday night all even.

With a minute and a half to play, Manager Art Ross, of the Bruins, took his goalie, Frankie Brimsek, out of the net and put six forwards on the ice in a desperate attempt to tie the score.

Bruin manpower kept the puck in the Ranger zone and although they could not score on Kerr, they prevented the Rangers from getting a clear shot at the empty cage.

A.A.U. Mat Tourny Is Set April 5-6

Junior and senior A. A. U. wrestling championships of the District will be decided April 5 and 6 at the Central Y. M. C. A., it was announced yesterday by R. B. Morgan, physical director.

Weight classifications for seniors will follow A. A. U. specifications, while junior weights will be in two divisions—under 16 years, and 16 and 17 years. The first will range between 70 and 145 pounds and the second from 112 pounds to unlimited.

Entry blanks may be obtained at the "Y," and further information at National 18250.

Table Tennis Meet Plans Are Rushed

Final plans are being rushed for the D. C. Table Tennis Association's annual championships on Saturday and Sunday, with the new "dub class" drawing more than its share of attention.

Players with little or no experience will play in a special section all to themselves in the tournament at Heurich gym. George H. Foster, of 1612 Longfellow street, is in charge.

New York Hockey Player to Wed Actress Mary Dees

By the Associated Press

New York, March 26.—Charlie Conacher, defenseman with the New York Americans of the National Hockey League, said today he and blonde Mary Dees of the motion pictures will be married when she returns from a South American tour.

Miss Dees, who completed the late Jean Harlow's role in the picture "Saratoga" when the latter died in 1937, sailed for a six-month South American tour March 22.

Conacher said he met Miss Dees in Hollywood about a year ago.

Schumacher Pitches Excellent Ball for Giants; Tom Bridges Helps Tigers Win

By the Associated Press

Winter Haven, Fla., March 26.—In one of the wildest renewals of their 30-year-old rivalry, the New York Giants outlasted the New York Yankees by a 14-13 score in a Grapefruit League exhibition baseball game today.

Courageous pitching by Hal Schumacher, who went five innings against the world champions and limited them to two hits and two runs, was the highlight performance for the winners, while five home runs—two each by Tommy Henrich and Buddy Rosar and one by Babe Dahlgren—powered the Yankee attack.

Tommy Bridges Wins

Haines City, Fla., March 26.—Tommy Bridges went seven innings and allowed only four hits and one unearned run today as the Detroit Tigers edged out the Kansas City Blues of the American Association, 2 to 1, in an 11-inning exhibition game.

Dick Bartell, whose two-base error on Frenchy Bordagaray's grounder in the seventh permitted the Blues to tie the score, atoned for it in the eleventh by laying down a squeeze bunt that brought Rudy York home with the winning run.

Tribe Beats Cards

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 26 (U.P.).—The Cleveland Indians scored in only one inning today but defeated the St. Louis Cardinals, 3-2. Bob Feller started on the mound for the Indians and was relieved by Willis Hudlin and Al Smith. The three allowed only six Cardinal hits. The cards scored once in the third inning and once in the seventh. The Indians got 10 hits and scored all three of their runs in the fifth.

Magro Signed For Riverside Inaugural

Birmingham Clouter To Fight 8-Round Semifinal April 10

Sammy Magro, Birmingham, Ala., welterweight, has been signed to fight in the eight-round semifinal on the inaugural boxing card in Riverside Stadium April 10, featuring Steve Mamakos and Izzy Jannazzo, Matchmaker Jim Erwin announced yesterday.

Although Magro is not known to Washington fans, he must have enough ability and showmanship to please the crowds, for Erwin is taking no chances of having his first fight show in the Capital fall flat.

Well acquainted with Magro's style and record, Erwin said that the Birmingham boy has been a main event fighter throughout the South and is a dangerous right-hand puncher. Magro arrived here yesterday to start training for his first local fight. He fought for Erwin several times while the latter was promoting fights in Birmingham.

Meanwhile, the Mamakos stock took a definite header upward yesterday as a result of Cal Cagni's upset of Milt Aron, recently ranked the No. 1 welterweight contender by the National Boxing Association, Monday night in Philadelphia. Steve, who is at the foot of the N. B. A.'s "preferred list," floored Cagni three times here while pounding out a decision some two years ago.

Aron will lose his spot as the "logical contender" for Henry Armstrong's welterweight crowd, which means Mamakos will step up a notch.

Nat Pitching Big Problem As League Opening Nears

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., March 26.—It is a drab pitching picture that confronts the Nats with the opening of the 1940 season only three weeks distant. At this writing, Manager Bucky Harris can scan his roster and note only two pitchers who are worthy risks—Dutch Leonard and Ken Chase.

Aside from that pair, the Nats' bosses know only too well that they are gambling. Their second-flight of pitching rookies appears to be a complete washout. Harris would willingly consign Gilberto Torres, Almon Williams, Paul Gehrman, Bucky Jacobs, Early Wynn and Alex Carrasquel to the minors if he were not compelled to carry at least ten pitchers on his staff.

Harris shudders at the thought of being forced to call upon any of that sextet to start a ball game. And the six pitchers he ranks in his better group are not a batch to win the Nats any high pre-season rating.

Leonard and Chase, of course, will do. That pair will be forced to do the brunt of the pitching. The perennial rookie, Joe Krakauskas, is still wild. Joe Haynes, who flashed brilliantly at periodic stages last season, has been highly unimpressive in spring games thus far.

The fact is that the success of two pitching rookies, fresh out of Class D baseball in the Florida State League, will make or break the Washington mound staff. So far, Harris is grateful for the presence of the two kid hurlers, Sid Hudson and Jim Dean, late of the Florida League.

The Nats' manager is in a mood to give Hudson and Dean every preference in the sight of his paucity of pitching talent. Hudson has earned a thorough trial by his uniform success in spring games, and Harries hopes that the even taller Dean may be the counterpart of Hudson.

Nats Face Tigers Today

The Nats will learn something more about their pitching tomorrow when the Detroit Tigers come to Orlando for a game at Tinker Field. Ken Chase will pitch the first five innings, but of more interest to Harris will be the four-inning performance of Joe Haynes. The Nats' pitching plight will be even sadder if Haynes confirms the suspicion that the infection of his left arm has robbed him of the added power he needs for a fast ball that is none too fast.

There is a possibility that the Nats and Tigers will negotiate tomorrow for a deal that would send Second Baseman Buddy Myer to the Detroit club. The Tigers, with their infield weakened by the injury of Charley Gehringer, have expressed great interest in Myer. The Nats are not expected to release the veteran unless they get an experienced pitcher or outfielder in return, preferably a pitcher.

Bees Bow to Dodgers

Bradenton, Fla., March 26.—Brooklyn's Dodgers came from behind today to pound out a 5-2 decision over the Boston Bees, despite lusty hitting by Tony Cuccinello and Rookie Hubert Bates.

Bates, who scored the first Bee run on West's fly after he had tripled and drove in Eddie Miller with the second tally, was sold outright to the Toronto International League Club after the game.

Wes Ferrell pitched the first five innings for the Dodgers, allowing two runs, but limiting the Bees to five hits.

Babe Young Waives Hearing On Wife's Charge

Tallahassee, Fla., March 26.—Gov. Cone's office said today that Norman R. (Babe) Young, New York Giants' first baseman, had waived a hearing on extradition to Virginia, where he was charged with wife desertion.

As a result, W. Branch Cone, secretary to Gov. Fred P. Cone, will not conduct a hearing scheduled for noon Thursday.

Cone said a Winter Haven law firm (Crittendon & Touchton) telephoned him today that Young had waived extradition and would return to Virginia. Earlier, the firm had requested a hearing to oppose extradition, and the hearing was set when the Virginia warrant reached here Monday.

In Bartow, County Judge Chester M. Wiggins dismissed a fugitive from justice warrant that had been served on Young.

Wiggins said the fugitive warrant was dismissed because no attempt had been made to extradite Young within the ten-day period set by law.

City Softball Champion Gets Series Berth

1939 Titleholders Awarded Free Spot In Play-off for Crown

The city softball champion was relieved of the task of defending its title and given a free berth in the 1940 championship series last night as the D. C. Softball Association held its first general session of the year at 1317 H street northwest.

Following an open meeting in which officers for the coming year were elected, presidents of 9 of the 11 leagues in the association, comprising the board of directors, wrangled for more than an hour but finally gave the much-discussed issue an affirmative vote.

As a result, a team representing Senate Beer—which last year was the champion Tru-Blu aggregation—will have the option of taking an uncontested place in the round robin which annually decides the District titlist or of earning that place through a season of play in any two leagues.

Two amendments were tacked on the final ruling: the first demanding that whatever team claimed the championship of the previous year be represented by at least ten players from the title team, and the second providing for not less than 15 association-sponsored exhibitions with local clubs for the free lancing crown-bearer. The latter provision was made in the hope of raising $800 which it is estimated will be necessary to send the Washington champion to the national tournament.

Winfree Johnson was unanimously reelected to the presidency of the association. Harold B. Vincent took the secretary-treasurership by acclaim. The vice presidency went to Vic Barrate after a vote.

Leagues represented were Sports Center, Sherwood, Sports Center Night, Commercial Twilight, Metro "A" and Metro "B," Regal, Government and Prince Georges.

Mary Hanagan Has 351 Set

By taking three games, St. Gabriels tied for the Ladies Catholic League lead with St. Francis last night at the Lucky Strike alleys. Mary Hanagan, with a 126 game and a 351 set, led St. Gabriels which took two games from Holy Comforter "C." St. Francis took two games from St. Anthony "A" and rolled 538 and 1,533.

In the Distributors League, Al Horowitz turned in a 131 game and a 352 set as E. Kahn won two from the leading B'Nai B'rith team. Friendship took two from Metro.

Davis Bent, of Office Service, was the star in the U. S. Housing League, rolling 145 and 345.

ICE PALACE

Al Kee, of Royal Tavern, shot a game of 149 to pace scorers in the Chevy Chase Commercial League competition last night at Chevy Chase Ice Palace. Al Wright, of Cherner Motor, and Bill Lauxman, of Stubox, tied for high set with 388. High team game and set went to Dupont Circle, 615, 1,718.

G. W. Alumni Stag Party Lures 500

Capt. Rickenbacker Among Speakers at Colonial 'Get-Together'

A surprisingly large turnout of about 500 attended the first annual George Washington University Alumni stag party last night at Wardman Park Hotel.

The committee for the function was at first alarmed and then highly pleased by the attendance. The supply of food was exhausted temporarily. But the problem was solved with the bringing up of reserve victuals.

Among the speakers were Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, University president; Head Football Coach Bill Reinhart, Gene Shields, his assistant, and Director of Athletics Max Farrington.

New Faces Appear On Next Mat Card; Terror Meets Cox

The Golden Terror, who has gone off the gold standard for once and for all by unveiling his countenance to the public, and Joe Cox will headline a program of wrestling tomorrow night at Turner's arena which, for variety's sake, will bring out a number of new faces.

New faces on hand include Warren Bockwinkle, 220-pound St. Louis groan artist, who will meet Don Evans; Jack Lutz, also of St. Louis, who faces Hymie Olson, and Abie Stein, Jewish grappler, who tackles Jim Austerl.

Young Prothro Forgets Doc's Advice, Plays College Football

Phillies' Manager, However, Is a Bit Proud of Son's Work at Duke

Associated Press Sports Writer

Tampa, Fla., March 26.—Add the name of Doc Prothro, Phillies manager, to the list of those who believe baseball and football don't mix, except at World Series time when they drive sports editors crazy of a Saturday afternoon.

The genial Mr. Prothro's interest in the blending of the two sports is more or less personal. He has a son, a tall, 200-pound lad, who plays plenty football for Wallace Wade at Duke.

"The boy had a yen to play football," Prothro says, "but he also had the makings of a pretty good baseball player. He had the free, easy movement necessary for a good pitcher.

Had Him Convinced

"I pointed out to him it was a question of three years of college football or ten years or so of baseball, and had him pretty well convinced.

"You know, football develops a boy too much through the shoulders and chest, makes him too tight and muscle bound for a baseball player, who should have long, loose muscles.

"Anyway, he didn't intend to play football, and reported at school after practice had started. Then one night he called me long distance and said: 'Dad, I've talked to Wallace Wade and I think I'll play football.'

"I told him his life was his own to live, so he played football."

The good doctor couldn't hide his pride in the lad's football accomplishments, however. And he follows Duke football closer than old Bluedevil himself.

A few former footballers, such as Lou Gehrig and Frankie Frisch, and Eldon Auker, who developed an effective trick delivery as a result of a football injury suffered at Kansas State, have made the baseball grade, but the list is short. The beef, strong fellas find their muscles in the way.

Grapefruit Juice

Luke Hamlin, Dodger hurler who won 20 games last year, is developing a low pitch to get away from his "home run" ball. He was nicked for 27 home runs in 270 innings, an average of one every ten innings, last year. About once a game his fast one would get away from him without the hop and float in there fat as a pumpkin, and it was goodby. Al Lopez, Bee catcher, claims that Van Mungo in his prime was far faster than Dizzy Dean ever was. Dick Conger, just an added starter not even listed on the early Detroit roster, is making Del Baker's eyes pop. Conger, former U. C. L. A. frosh pitcher, allowed only five hits, and no runs, in his first 14 innings against major league teams.

Radio Gold Takes Show At Tropical

Sixth Time Famous 'Second Horse' Fails His Backers; Winner Pays $18.60 Ticket

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, March 26.—Mrs. F. K. Hastings' 7-year-old $2,500 plater Bright and Early, the champion "second horse" of the Florida season, once again missed by one notch in the role of odds-on favorite here today. This time it was W. F. Mannagh's Sargoza, an $18.60-for-$2 shot, that nosed out the hard luck veteran in the photo finish of the featured Cape Sable Purse of 6 furlongs. It was the sixth straingh time that Brighat and Early finished in the runner-up position.

Third money went to Mrs. L. E. Sober's Radio Gold, four lengths back. Six went to the post. Sargazo finished in 1:12 2-5.

Bright and Early's 1940 record reads nine starts, two victories, six seconds and one third.

Sargazo and the favorite, which closed at 65 cents on the dollar, drew away from the others and the race became a two-horse affair in short order. Sargazo, well handled by Joe Rosen, was on the inside all the way as the two horses raced heads apart throughout the running. Bright and Early seemed to have the pacemaker beaten as they drove past the furlong pole. Then he appeared to be attacked with "second-itus," his old jinx, and hung in the final strides.

The third race produced plenty of scares for the crowd but no injuries to riders. Myrna Lee bled and J. G. Wilson tried to pull up the filly at the far turn but he lost control and had to jump off, Wilson was not hurt.

As the field neared the quarter pole, Nad broke down and Joe Rosen managed to dismount without being injured. The horse was removed in the horse ambulance.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MY ONE, $4.90, $3.40, $2.40; GRIST, $9.00, $4.20; ARESTINO, $3.10.

MY ONE moved to the front with a rush in the opening quarter mile and then gradually increased her lead to win in hand. GRIST, on the extreme outside, gained steadily and held ARESTINO safe at the end. ARESTINO, in tight quarters and forced to pull up repeatedly for about 3 furlongs, slipped through and finished stoutly. POGOSY stumbled approaching the quarter-mile pole and unseated his rider.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward; maidens. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:37½. Off 2:38. Winner, J. O. Williams' br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OLIVER TWIST, $66.30, $23.90, $15.50; HEELS, $8.30, $5.30; NASHVILLIAN, $24.30.

OLIVER TWIST, going well up, opened up a good lead on the stretch turn, but faltered and just lasted. HEELS closed steadily through the stretch and would have won in a few more strides. NASHVILLIAN awung to the outside in the last quarter mile and was going fastest of all at the end. DUNLAD, hard driven, was unable to engage the leaders.

Daily Double, MY ONE and OLIVER TWIST, Paid $382.10

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:06½. Off at once. Winner, J. F. Marsten's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHITE TOPPER, $13.10, $5.60, $4.20; SKY ARGO, $4.90, $4.60; PERSUASIVE, $9.40.

WHITE TOPPER, in tight quarters in the early stages, stole through on the stretch turn, and finished gamely to outgame SKY ARGO. The latter, quickest to begin, displayed the most speed, but came wide into the stretch which cost her the race. PERSUASIVE easily held the others safe. MALINDA B. finished stoutly.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:34½. Off 3:36½. Winner, P. Bieber's b. g. (6), by Westwick—Super Ray. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:13⅗.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUPERWICK, $17.20, $8.50, $5.00; UGIN, $4.20, $3.40; CAPE RACE, $4.20.

SUPERWICK fought off repeated challenges while showing good speed, but just lasted long enough to withstand UGIN'S bid. The latter came around the field in the last quarter mile, gained steadily, and would have won in another stride. CAPE RACE, in the thick of contention, held on well when the real test came. DOLAWAY faltered slightly through the stretch.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:06½. Off at once. Winner, W. F. Mannagh's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SARGAZO, $18.60, $5.40, $2.90; BRIGHT AND EARLY, $2.70, $2.20; RADIO GOLD, $2.70.

SARGAZO, on the inside and a keen contender all the way, responded courageously when called upon to issue came to outgame BRIGHT AND EARLY. The latter, on the outside and lapped on the winner throughout, took a short lead entering the stretch, but was unable to shake the winner off. RADIO GOLD, slow to find his stride, closed steadily, but never threatened the leaders. HIJO RADIO was poorly ridden, but finished fast.

WEATHER, DRIZZLING. TRACK, GOOD.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:34½. Off at once. Winner, T. D. Buhl's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COULEEDAM, $11.70, $5.30, $3.40; DON PECOS, $4.30, $3.10; GOSHEN, $3.00.

COULEEDAM moved to the front with a rush on the outside leaving the backstretch and continued with determination to hold DON PECOS safe at the end. DON PECOS, going forwardly, made a game effort when called upon, but could not overtake the winner. GOSHEN, shuffled back entering the backstretch, gradually improved his position when clear and shook off PHENOMENAL in the final furlong.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:07. Off 5:07½. Winner, Eldorado Farm's br. m. (7), by Fair—Selth's Romance. Trained by D. J. McAuliffe. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:44⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FOR ROMANCE, $18.60, $6.80, $3.60; FORE ISUS, $3.50, $2.50; MANYMOR, $2.90.

FOR ROMANCE, going in nearest pursuit of the leader, finished courageously in the final furlong and was up in the last stride. FORE ISUS set a steady early pace, and made a game effort when challenged, but Meade outfoot Packer when it came to a drive. MANYMOR worked his way up gradually and easily disposed of the others. WICKET was weakly handled.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:36. Off 5:36½. Winner, Mrs. A. J. Broderick's b. g. (6), by Golden Broom—Cross Girl. Trained by H. L. Cornwell. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:49⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLD CROSS, $16.40, $8.60, $5.80; FOUR BAGGER, $25.70, $12.10; PRINCE DEAN, $8.20.

GOLD CROSS moved up gamely entering the stretch and, responding with good courage, outlasted his opposition in the final drive. FOUR BAGGER, prominent contender throughout, came again under punishment and was wearing the winner down. PRINCE DEAN, away slowly, gradually bettered his position and finished strong. FLAG UNFURLED gained steadily, but could not get up.

Heelfly Out of Tanforan Meet With Leg Injury

San Francisco, March 26 (AP).—Heelfly is out of the Tanforan meet. The stakes star, owned by George W. Stratton, of Los Angeles, received a ruptured sheath yesterday.

Preliminary examination of the right front leg injury disclosed that the horse may be raedy to go in training for the $50,000 Gold Cup at Hollywood Park this summer.

Wife of Packer Coach Gets Divorce, Settlement

Green Bay, Wis., March 26 (AP).—Mrs. Sue Lambeau, of Los Angeles, was granted a divorce late yesterday in circuit court from E. L. Lambeau, coach of the Green Bay Packers professional football team. They were married at Waukegan, Ill., June 26, 1935.

Mrs. Lambeau was given custody of their son, Early, jr., age 2, and $25 a month for his support. In addition, Lambeau agreed to a settlement of $6,750.

—At the Post

Dear Al:

Selections at Tropical Park.

The racetrack pressagent, now referred to as director of publicity, is a horse of a different color these days. Time was when we received something like this: "Every stall is filled, everything is in readiness and $11,970 has been spent on improvements. Trainer Johnny Doedo arrived from New Orleans with 75 horses, etc." Contrast those lines with these from Pimlico: "A lost symphony of 1,600 pounding hoofs will have a brilliant and realistic echo over the old Pimlico Race Course on Saturday, May 11. It will be the fiftieth Preakness Day, the Golden Jubilee of one of America's greatest sporting events. Since Survivor romped to victory and fame on a mild day in May of 1873 401 thoroughbreds have sought to emulate him; 49 times has the bugle called a Preakness field to the post and 49 thoroughbreds have returned to the winners' circle to receive the plaudits of the crowd and the blanket of flowers symbolic of a Preakness victory. The flying, pounding hoofs of the Golden Jubilee Preakness field will compose their own historic symphony. A straight run down the stretch the first time; in concert at the clubhouse turn and spreading out somewhat as they reach the back stretch. The pace is terrific and the composer struggles to maintain it. Into the far turn and the crescendo rises. The rhythm of the master is steady and apparently effortless. Into the stretch and the finale is near; even the master is pitched to every effort to retain his leadership and domination over the other instruments of speed and endurance. Victory and acclamation is accorded to only one but the symphony is wrought by all. Each will be a master in the Preakness; he is bred to be and his effort, regardless of placing, will be a contribution to a similar symphony some years hence. The masters of the past whose hoof beats are in the lost symphony are sending their contributions to the song of the Golden Jubilee. Man o' War, master, in 1920; Display, in 1926; Gallant Fox, master of 1930, and Burgoo King, in 1932 and High Quest who composed and held the pace in 1934 have sons in the fiftieth Preakness. New genius may spring up in 1940. Just as the treatment will produce the recitalist at Carnegie Hall or the farm in Iowa the colortura at the Metropolitan so may the obscure farm in Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky, California or any of a dozen States produce the Golden Jubilee Preakness winner. But the master touch was not unintended or unminded. The heritage was deliberate and planned, ispired by the lost symphony of 1,604 hoofs." BILL.

First race—Valdina Lass, breaking off the rail, may have things all her own way in this field. She gets in light and I'm going to string along. J. Edgar H. has shown speed on occasions and is dangerous. Press Time could be the third one.

Second race—Wise Decision deserving the call in this sprint company. McCombs will do the booting. Fair Time has that favorable inside post position and is a threat. Owaller may take down the show award.

Third race—Socatic appears ready to leave the maiden ranks in this field of colts and geldings. Hi Pov has had many chances and looms as the one to beat. Gay Man is a possible surprise.

Fourth race—Definer, despite the top assignment of 116 pounds, belongs with this kind and I'm going to string along. High Arch and Panjab will like the distance and may cause the top one some trouble.

Fifth race—Floragina gets in action here with 108 pounds and will do a lot of running. I'm going to take my chances. Short Cake and Remarkable appear capable of filling out the money bracket.

Sixth race—Hieronymus, another high weight, should take down the No. 1 cash in this sprint. Rosen will do the booting. Bunny Rabbit has the speed and will be right in there knocking. Pirate Ship is a possible surprise.

Eighth race—Headin' Home seems best of this field. Baked Bibescot and Jacquella for the place and show.

The Professor II Named Favorite In Grand National

By the Associated Press

London, March 26.—Mrs. I. Strang's The Professor II, winner of the Compton's Chase last week, was installed tonight at odds of 9 to 1 as favorite for the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree April 5.

Miss Dorothy Paget's Kilstar, hitherto joint favorite with Sterling Duke at 100 to 7, dropped to second place at 100 to 9. Sterling Duke was unquoted in tonight's callover of odds at the Victoria Club.

Other odds included Capt. Scott Brigg's Macmoff, 100-8; Lieut. Col W. E. Peel's Inversible, 25-1; the Earl of Derby's Underbid and Lieut. Col. H. E. Joicey's Venturesome Knight, 28-1.

Know Your Dogs—No. 14 of a Series

THE CHOW CHOW.

Originating in China about 2,000 years ago, he has been used since as a sled dog, hunting dog and watch. His name means "something edible" and he was formerly killed for food and his fur woven into cloth. The Chow Chow was a favorite of Oriental emperors. This one is owned by John Anderson, of Silver Spring, and will be at the Alexandria dog show, April 27.

Year's Delay Likely in N. J. Horse Racing

Commission Afraid Haste Will Damage Class of Sport

By the Associated Press

Trenton, N. J., March 26.—The first New Jersey commission chosen to regulate horse racing with parimutuel betting organized today with indications of a year's delay in opening tracks.

Commission Chairman Louis A. Reilly said the commission was "most anxious" for the State to receive anticipated revenue from track operations, but declared "we are fearful" that haste in licensing tracks might "strike a very severe blow at racing in New Jersey.

William H. Cane, of Hackensack, only horseman on the commission, said he did not think the State could get the "kind of racing it ought to have within the present year."

"I doubt very much we'll have racing this year," Cane said after taking the oath of office with three fellow commissioners.

"A delay to get the proper kind of track operator would be advisable, I believe.

"Besides, if we attempt to have races this year we will not be able to get the class horses we want."

Besides Reilly and Cane, commission members are John R. Rogers, of Maplewood, and former Mayor Joseph Brophy, of Elizabeth.

Gross revenues in February, 1940, aggregated $34,384,285, as compared with $29,472,537 in the same month in 1939, while net operating income was $4,466,509, as contrasted to $3,771,073.

Gross revenue in January and February totaled $72,880,059, as compared with $62,369,270, while net operating income for the period was $10,168,483, as against $8,804,762 for the two months last year.

Indiana Standard Earnings

Standard Oil Co. of Indiana announced in a preliminary report that consolidated net earnings for 1939 totaled $34,142,642, or about $2.23 a share on 15,272,014 shares outstanding at the end of the year. This compared with 1938 earnings of $27,771,976, or $1.82 a share on 15,272,020 shares. Earnings for 1937 were $55,950,784, or $3.66 a share.

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp.

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation reported net profits after all income taxes totaled $4,146,831 in 1939, equal after preferred dividend requirements to $1.58 a share on common stock. This compared with $7,252,466, or $3.35 a common share, in 1938. The figures included the company's equity in National Theaters Corporation.

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation and subsidiaries operated at net loss of $186,494, in 1939, it was disclosed in a report filed in the Federal Court in New York by Irving Trust Co. as trustee. Theater subsidiaries had a net operating profit of $1,234,523 compared with profit of $1,204,293 in 1938. RKO-Radio Pictures reported a net loss of $545,126, before provision for accumulative interest due to the parent company, compared with net loss of $189,474 in 1938.

Vega Airplane Co.

Vega Airplane Co., a subsidiary of Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, for the year ended December 31, 1939, reported net sales of $592,168 and net profits of $86,311. Profit is equivalent to 21 cents per share. This compares with sales of $13,552 and a net loss of $19,915 in the previous year.

Sperry Income Advances

Sperry Corporation and subsidiaries, manufacturers of aviation, navigation and gunfire control instruments, reported yesterday net income for 1939 of $5,462,061, or $2.71 a share, compared with $4,961,398, or $2.46 a share, in 1938.

Shipments of the manufacturing subsidiaries," Thomas A. Morgan, president, reported to stockholders, "were almost 20 per cent greater in 1939 than in the previous year. We are working extra shifts, leasing additional factory space and subcontracting certain types of work with other companies."

Oil Income Advances

Steel Dividend Surprises Wall Street; Allied Purchases Total $600,000,000; Beverage, Can, Aviation Issues Lead Field

New York, March 6.—Looking at the record of today's transactions on the big board, one might surmise that nothing happened in the field of finance. Actually, the United States Steel Corporation declared a $1 dividend on its common stock—the first in more than two years.

Coincidentally, the Allied governments' purchases in this country were announced as totaling $600,000,000 and sterling broke 14⅞ cents. But the stock market's reputed ability to measure financial developments was sadly lacking.

Steel Dividend Surprises

In the case of the steel dividend, the action was taken after the close and was a complete surprise to the financial district, but the other developments were early happenings and they were completely ignored by the buyers and sellers of securities. The stock market, judged by the composite average, scored a negligible loss of 0.14 point and only 622,700 shares changed hands.

The action by the steel corporation brought higher bids on the West Coast, where markets are open several hours after our close, and unquestionably the New York market will take cognizance of the development this morning. The directors of the corporation handed the financial world a surprise. This was not the regular time to take dividend action, and probably that was the reason they chose this time.

Beverage, Aviation Lead

Beverage stocks were in the forefront today, along with the volatile aviations, and there was nothing specific to explain the sudden interest in both hard and soft drink descriptions although the coming of spring—indicated more by the calendar than the temperature—usually gives a signal for some extra buying.

Along with the distillery and brewery shares, can stocks came in for attention, notably securities of companies which make containers for the beer trade. Crown Cork and Seal made a new high on reports that its seamless can division is operating in the black. American Can and Continental Can were firm.

Loft continued at the top of the active list and made its daily new high, closing at 35⅜, up ⅝. The air issues were again prominent because it is in this industry that the bulk of the Allied purchases of American-made or produced goods and materials have been placed. Curtiss-Wright A and Lockheed finished higher, but there was some profiit-taking in Pah-American Airways and United Air Lines, which caused them to close 1 point and ¾ lower, respectively.

Cotton was soft, losing 13 to 21 points, while wheat also sagged, giving up ⅞ to 1⅛.

Treasury Issues Firm

Some firmness in United States Treasury issues, both on the stock exchange and in the outside market, was the best feature of bond trading today. Volume in all sections continued small, although the total was slightly above the previous day.

Foreign bond changes lacked uniformity, the best performance being in some of the Scandinavian obligations, notably Helsingfors 6½s and Oslo City 4½s, which sold up to new highs. Movements in domestic corporate issues were mixed.

9 Banks' Assets In D. C. Total $232,185,000

Delano Report Gives Condition on Dec. 30; Liabilities $210,659,000

In an abstract of condition reports issued yesterday by Preston Delano, Controller of the Currency, nine national banks in Washington had total assets of $232,185,000 on December 30, 1939.

The banks held loans and discounts amounting to $51,608,000 and Government notes totaling $68,563,000. Cash balances with other banks, including reserve balances and cash items being collected, amounted to $91,132,000.

Liabilities, according to the report, include demand deposits of $129,363,000, time deposits of $46,995,000 and various other deposits which bring the total to $210,659,000. The nine banks reported an undivided profit of $4,694,000. The capital accounts record showed capital stock totaling $8,800,000 and surplus of $6,716,000.

Besides their own premises, these banks owned residential properties worth $482,000 and other properties amounting to $261,000, bringing the total propery item to $743,000.

Loans $51,608,000

At the end of the year, commercial and industrial loans totaled $21,468,000 but loans to brokers and securities dealers only amounted to $417,000.

Loans on residential properties by these national banks amounted to $9,591,000 and $4,122,000 on other properties which brought the total for all loans to $51,608,000.

Cotton Slumps 13 to 21 Points On Sterling Break

New York, March 26 (AP).—A break in the pound sterling and weak foreign cotton markets greased the way for a long slide down in the local market today.

Final losses of 13 to 21 points, lows for the day, were forced by active domestic and foreign liquidation which reduced a climax in the last 15 minutes. Buying was slim.

The Bombay market headed downward at an even faster rate than New York. Indian sellers took advantage of the price differences and sold vigorously.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures came within an ace of the season's low price for some deliveries today as recurring flurries of speculative liquidation and local selling swept the market. Final prices were down 19 to 22 points.

Declines in lard and grains appeared the immediate cause of the offerings. Buying was chilled by the cautious policy buyers have adopted in the spot market.

Sales totaled 141 lots: May, 6.53; July, 6.59; September, 6.61; October, 6.59.

Kresge Foundation To Float Refund Issue

New York, March 26 (AP).—The Kresge Foundation, created by Sebastian S. Kresge for philanthropic purposes, has arranged with a Wall Street underwriting syndicate for public offering of $11,500,000 in securities to refund outstanding loans and for other corporate purposes.

The foundation plans to repay outstanding 4 and 3½ per cent notes.

Gypsum Sales Gain

Buffalo, N. Y., March 26 (AP).—Melvin H. Baker, president of the National Gypsum Co., told stockholders at the annual meeting today sales so far in 1940 are 16 per cent over a year ago.

Pound Breaks In Allied Drive To Get Dollars

Fear of Invasion Prompts Heavy Gold Exports by Sweden

New York, March 26.—Allied economic warfare was reflected in American money markets today as the pound declined to a modern low while Sweden, apparently fearing an invasion, poured millions of dollars of her gold into New York. England's pound sterling, accompanied in the break by the franc, slid 14¾ cents to $3.535 in Wall street in a drive attributed to Allied efforts to get dollar exchange with which to purchase war needs. The franc went off .09 to 2 cents.

Banking authorities saw in the drop a "deliberate" policy to provide a wide spread between the open market and the fixed London price of the pound ($4.035) so as to expand the Allied war chest.

Pounds Cost More

Because the United States is the biggest market for English exports, American importers are faced with the necessity of paying more dollars to the British to get pounds with which to pay for their purchases.

The effect, some bankers said, was to "subsidize" some British exports through dereciation of the exchange rate. They added that, from the British view, this policy apparently was justified by necessity of raising dollars to pay for war purchases, particularly aircraft, which threatened to throw allied payments to this country out of balance. The Allies stood to win more dollars on both the expert and import ends of the exchange control policies, which were judged to be tied directly into war strategy.

Sweden Fears Invasion

Swedish fears of invasion were said by Government experts in Washington yesterday to be responsible for unusually large gold shipments from Sweden to the United States, which totaled $57,000,000 from the first of the year to March 13. An additional $24,391,675 was sent in the week ended March 20.

Officials explained that a few weeks ago the Swedish government placed a virtual embargo on private exports of gold so last week's large shipment must have been made by the government.

The Swedish shipments, though small in proportion to the more than $18,000,000,000 of gold which the United States owns, were large for that country. Therefore, experts contended the shipments almost certainly must have been for protective purposes.

General Motors Sales Soar 38%, Knudsen Reports

Boston, March 26 (AP).—General Motors automobile sales increased 38 per cent in the first 2½ months of 1940 as compared with the corresponding period last year, William S. Knudsen, president of the firm, said today.

He predicted, during an interview, that this year's business should be the third best in the history of the corporation.

The Buick division reported its retail sales during the second ten days' period of this month totaled 9,866, compared with 5,184 in the like period last month and 5,943 in the second ten days of March, 1939.

Continental Can Sales up 15 Pct.

Millbrook, N. Y., March 26 (AP).—Carle C. Conway, chairman of Continental Can Co., told stockholders at the annual meeting today sales so far in 1940 are 15 per cent ahead of a year ago.

He said the company planned to improve research departments to develop more uses for its products. Sales of beer cans in 1939, he said, were 30 per cent ahead of 1938.

Wheat Softens 1½c Despite Slow Selling

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 26.—An easy tone prevailed in the wheat pit today and prices at times yielded as much as 1½ cents a bushel.

Prospects of warmer, unsettled weather and dust storms in the Southwest and pressure of hedging sales against purchases of loan wheat depressed the market. Selling was only moderate, but at the same time demand was less aggressive.

Quotations opened fractionally lower, recovered partly, but then declined again in the final hour. May contracts dropping to 1.05⅝, off 1½, and July to 1.03¾, down 1⅜ cents. Weakness at Minneapolis, where prices were off as much as 1⅝ and finished at their lows, contributed to the late downturn here.

Wheat here finished ⅞@1⅜ off; May, 1.05⅝@1.05½; July, 1.04@@1.03⅞. Corn was unchanged to ½ down; May, 56¾@56⅞; July, 57⅝@57½. Oats, ¼@⅜ lower. Soy beans 2 cents off. Rye, 1⅜@1½ down. Lard, 22@28 cents a hundredweight lower.

Eastman Pays Employe Dividend

Richester, N. Y., March 26 (AP).—The Eastman Kodak Co. yesterday paid 30,934 employes its twenty-eighth annual wage dividend amounting to $2,362,331, of which $2,164,680 went to 25,508 employes in the United States and Canada.

The 1940 dividend rate is unchanged from last year's, but the amount paid out is $217,997 higher because of the increased number of eligible employes.

Employes are eligible if they worked all or part of 26 different weeks in 1939 and are now in the service of the company.

Gasoline Prices Cut In East Texas Area

Longview, Tex., March 26 (AP).—Gasoline prices tumbled in east Texas today with major and independents involved in price cuts that ranged from 1 to 4 cents a gallon.

Several days ago independents slashed the retail price on third grade gasoline to 11 cents per gallon. The cut allowed a profit of only 1½ cents from refinery to consumer.

Major companies, generally, reduced third grade gasoline from 15 to 11 cents and lowered regular and premium grades 1 cent, to 16 and 18 cents.

Bond Stores Note 60 Pct. Earning Gain

New York, March 26.—Bond Stores, Incorporated, in the annual report to stockholders for 1939 made public today by Benjamin J. Friedman president, shows net profits, after all charges including depreciation, amortization and provision for Federal income taxes, of $2,643,552.

This is equivalent to $3.77 per share on the 701,497 shares of capital stock outstanding for the year and represents an increase of 60 per cent over net profits of $1,651,711, or $2.35 per share on a like number of shares of stock outstanding in 1938. Gross income on sales for 1939 was $11,106,178, against $8,540,793 in the previous year.

In his letter to stockholders, Friedman said:

"It has been deemed advisable presently to add to the board of directors persons who are not directly concerned with management. Pursuant to an arrangement made by Benjamin J. Friedman and Barney Ruben with John M. Hancock of the firm of Lehman Brothers, and Maurice Wertheim of the firm of Wertheim & Co., and their respective firms, we have been especially fortunate to secure their acceptance to act as directors, and their names appear as candidates, together with the present five directors, for election at the annual meeting."

McKesson-Robbins Regains Big Board

New York, March 26 (AP).—Agreement to recommend that trading in McKesson & Robbins, Inc., securities be resumed Friday in the New York Stock Exchange was reached today by the exchange's committee on stock list. The board of governors was expected to act favorably tomorrow.

The stock was removed from the listing on the "big board" in December, 1938, shortly before the suicide of Donald Coster-Musica, head of the firm.

Home Loans In January At 10-Year Top

National Aggregate Increases 20.5% To $66,944,000

By Thomas M. Cahill

Members of District of Columbia Building and Loan League have received news of Nation-wide advances in the savings, building and loan industry from national headquarters. They are informed that beginning the year with a loan volume surpassing any January since 1930, savings, building and loan associations of the country furnished $66,944,000 for home buying, building and repair, an increase of 20.5 per cent over January, 1939.

A report to local league members from the United States Savings and Loan League shows that construction lending remained close to its high proportion of the total loans which it established throughout last year, accounting for 29.11 per cent. This is a higher percentage devoted to new building than characterized three of the months of 1939, although it marked a small recession from the new high in proportion of construction loans achieved in December.

Analysis of January loans made by all associations of the United States: New construction, $19,488,000; repair and modernization, $3,455,000; home purchase, $22,039,000; refinancing, $13,999,000; other purposes, $7,963,000; total, $66,944,000.

Delegates Leave

Local building and loan delegates who left for the two-day session at Winston-Salem, N. C., to attend the stockholders meting of the Federal Home Loan Bank include:

C. Clinton James, Carl H. Ellingson, Charles H. Kindle, William N. Payne, jr., F. Willson Camp, P. J. Schardt, Clarence E. Kefauver, Edward K. Jones, Wifred H. Blanz, Edward C. Baltz, C. J. Bergmann and Walter M. Bastian.

D. C. Banker to Speak

John A. Reilly, president of Second National Bank and third vice president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, will address the Florida State Bankers Association at its annual convention at Palm Beach on April 6. Mr. Reilly's subject will be "The Function of Chartered Banks In a Democracy."

New Management Plan

According to recent reports, nearly 250 business organizations in the United States, with payrolls exceeding more than 250,000 employes, have adopted either in whole or in part, a new system of operation, known as "multiple management," a method by which employes take an active part in administration of the company's affairs.

In most organizations being operated on the system there are three boards of junior executives organized within the ranks of the workers. These groups are entirely self controlled. They are called junior, factory and sales boards. They discuss and analyze all affairs of the company and send their decisions to a senior board and the president. All their findings must be unanimous, and the senior board and president retain the right of veto.

By this plan much of the initiative falls to the lot of the employe boards whose members are close to actual everyday problems. The result has been not only a solution of many problems of human relationship, but there has been a gain in company earnings.

Payne Outlines Buliding, Loan League's Plans

Members of the Building and Loan League, meeting yesterday at the Raleigh, heard President William N. Payne, jr. outline activities for the coming spring season.

Attention was focused on the annual convention of the Southeastern group, which comprises 11 States and the District of Columbia, to be May 6-7-8 in Louisville.

A large delegation from Washington will attend as a compliment to Carl J. Bergmann, who represents this section on the board of the United States Savings & Loan League. Martin A. Cook and F. Willson Camp were elected delegates with S. Schuyler Simons and R. W. Santlemann, alternates.

Tool Company Expands to Meet Aircraft Needs

Cleveland, March 26 (AP).—The Warner & Swasey Co., of Cleveland, manufacturer of machine tools and telescopes, announced it would expand its plant to meet "emergency" demands partially resulting from English and French war requirements and American defense preparations.

"There has developed an unprecedented immediate demand for turret lathes for the country's aircraft engine manufacturers, due chiefly to the war requirements of England and France and the defense requirements of the United States," said Charles J. Stillwell, president of the company.

SAVE WITH CHAMBERS

ONE OF THE LARGEST UNDERTAKERS IN THE WORLD

LARGEST UNDERTAKERS IN Washington

Would you use the old-fashioned horse and buggy today instead of the automobile? Years ago, the old-time undertaker would charge, every time he turned around, to feed his horses three times a day, which was a nuisance and an expense. Today, Chambers is just about 50 years ahead of the old-time undertaker with a complete funeral at one flat price.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

At almost every duplicate game you hear chagrined players cry, "They got top on the board because they were doubled. That shows the breaks in this game!" Some players are just lucky enough to be doubled at the right time, but others skillfully bid for it.

Take today's hand as an example.

Today's Hand

East-West Vulnerable
NORTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠ K Q 7 2 ♡ 3 ◇ 8 4 2 ♣ Q 9 6 5 3
WEST: ♠ A J 5 4 ♡ 8 4 ◇ 9 6 5 3 ♣ A J 10
EAST: ♠ 10 9 ♡ 10 9 ◇ A K Q J ♣ K 8 7 4 2
SOUTH: ♠ 8 6 3 ♡ A K Q J 7 6 5 2 ◇ 10 7 ♣ None

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ◇	1 ♡	1 ♠
Pass	2 ♣	2 ♡	3 ◇
Pass	Pass	3 ♡	Dbl
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 3 ◇.

How many players in South's seat would goad the adversaries into doubling by patiently bidding one, two, and three hearts? Most of us would leap to three or four hearts immediately. And four is far from certain, though it makes because the ace of spades is located favorably.

East and West were rather dull to double, we agree, but who would imagine that South was bidding on an eight-card suite? It is often profitable to double the opponents' part-score contract, and East and West fell into the trap quite easily.

A low diamond was led; the defense won two diamonds and shifted to a spade. West held up the spade ace, hoping to give his partner a ruff on the third round, but there were no trump tricks available, and South drew hearts, conceded the ace of spades and made his contract with an extra trick.

"Can you imagine any one doubling three hearts against that hand?" was the comment heard later around the tournament room.

Today's Radio Highlights

Gracie Allen, running for the Presidency for all she's worth, holds the convention of her "Laugh Party" tonight at Omaha—WJSV, 7:30 p. m.

Dr. Christian, played by Jean Hersholt, who has spent most of his time, since the Quints arrived, portraying kindly medicos, solves the problems of the "Visiting Lady"—WJSV, 8:30 p. m.

Mr. T. Hee, who makes his living directing funny pictures, is the "Person You Didn't Expect to Meet" on Mr. Allen's hour—WRC, 9 p. m.

Douglass Montgomery, of the films, Florence Reed, the immortal Mother Goddam of "Shanghai Gesture," and more recently seen in "Outward Bound," and Helen Claire, whose Cindy Lou of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" made theatrical history, combine their talents to present Elizabeth McFadden's "Double Door." Under the guiding hand of Burns Mantle, the play, a hit of the 1933-34 season, unfolds the story of a battel for power in an old New York family, culminating on the verge of murder—WJSV, 9 p. m.

Hon. Daniel A. Reed, Congressman from New York, addresses the radio audience on the "Bureaucratic Laws of the Census"—WMAL, 9:45 p. m.

Listen! with Slocum

James Fidler, the agile tongued gentleman who chronicles the deeds and misdeeds of Hollywood's great and picks up a few spare shekels on the side via radio and the stage, did his coast-to-coas broadcast from the studios of WJSV last evening. He did two, one in the early evening, one later so that listeners on the West Coast could catch his program.

James is a one-man show, if ever there was one, yet he required no less than four microphones to unreel his quarter hour effort. One mike picked up his own words, another was for the soft voiced Art Millet, who was elling the stuff, the third picked up the oscillator, or telegraph bug, and the fourth caught the bell tones with which James gives a somewhat brassy opinion of moving pictures of recent release.

Fidler is a thorough workman. He spent all yesterday afternoon with production man, Barry Blake, timing his scripts. None of this hurrying or slowing down near the end for Fidler.

For a one time auto salesman, and later a press agant, Fidler is doing a little better than all right. He has his column and a staff to help him keep it going, his radio show, and another staff to keep that in order, and his stage work, which requires still another group of people. So, whether you like Mr. F. or not, you must admit he's quite a help to the local residents worrying about the unemployment problem.

Another Nero Wolfe Story

BY REX STOUT

OVER MY DEAD BODY

"Over her shoulder I could see what she saw"

When Archie Goodwin started typing a report for Inspector Cramer he was frequently interrupted. First he tried locating Mme. Zorka at Belinda Reade's where she had been found after her first disappearance. Then Rudolph Faber, German secret agent who had been present when Percy Ludlow was murdered, came to call on Wolfe and Archie knocked him out. The next interruption was a phone call from Miltan, owner of the fencing studio where Neya Tormic (Wolfe's client) and Carla Lovchen were instructors and where Ludlow was killed. After numerous calls from orchid dealers, lenchmen and others, there was one from Mr. John Barrett. He wanted Wolfe to come to his office, but Archie explained Nero never made calls. After Wolfe came downstairs and reviewed his mail, his beer and recent happenings, Neya Tormic arrived. She demanded the document which Carla had hidden in one of Wolfe's books, but now he insisted that the paper be returned to Carla and sent Archie with Neya to Miltan's to deliver the paper to Carla.

Chapter 22

"WE realize it."

"Very well. Do you still expect to complete your . . . errand . . . today?"

"Yes."

"When and where?"

He shrugged. "Did you keep your appointment with Mr. Cramer this morning?"

"Yes, but not with Mr. Cramer. A man came and took me down there, and two men talked with me. That's where I came from, here."

"You told about finding those things in your pocket and so on."

"Yes."

"Did they ask about your political mission—anything of that sort?"

"I—" She bit it off. In a moment she said, "I don't think so." Her head jerked at me and back at him. "If you're going to insist—I haven't much time. I must see Carla anyway, but if he's going——"

Wolfe nodded. "All right. Pfui. Archie, give that paper to Miss Lovchen in the presence of Miss Tormic."

"No. You do it."

"Cramer's due in half an hour."

"I know. Hurry back."

I USHERED her out. The roadster was still at the curb in front where I had left it. We climbed in and I warmed up the engine a minute, and rolled. She was completely don't-touch-me. Whatever her mind was on it certainly wasn't on me, and during the short ride to Forty-eighth street I accepted that as the status quo

Across the street from Miltan's a little group was collected on the sidewalk, and in front of the entrance a flatfoot was pacing a short beat. He gave us an eye as we went in, but made no attempt to interfere. Inside was no sign of life in the hall or reception room, but a murmur came from the rear and we went back there to the large office. Jeanne Miltan was in a chair at a desk, with two squad dicks, each with a notebook seated facing her. Her husband, looking haggard and hopeless, was pacing the floor, shaking his head at himself. As we entered one of the dicks looked up and barked:

"What do you want?"

Neya intercepted Miltan and asked, "Is Miss Lovchen upstairs?"

He groaned. "No one is upstairs. We are deserted. We are ruined. Mr. Goodwin, can you tell me——"

"I'm sorry, I can't tell you a darned thing. Has Miss Lovchen been here this morning?"

"She came and stayed a while, but she left."

"How long ago?"

"Oh, my God, I don't know—half an hour." He clapped a hand to his head and stared at Neya. "She said to tell you something if you came——"

Jeanne Miltan's voice sounded: "She went home, Miss Tormic."

"That's it," Miltan agreed. "She said to tell you she went home. That was all. She went home."

"Sell her a chance on a turkey raffle. Come on, Miss Tormic."

We went back out to the sidewalk. Halting there, I asked her, "You said Thirty-eighth street? East or west?"

She smiled at me. "It's silly for you to go. It's so silly. Why don't you just give it to me?"

"I'd love to," I assured her. I didn't see any sense in antagonizing her if she was my future wife. I really would." We were moving along to the roadster. "But here's my car and I have to go downtown anyway. Besides, if I don't follow instructions I'll get fired. What's the address?"

"Four hundred and four East Thirty-eighth."

"Okay, that'll only take—excuse me a minute." I had caught a glimpse of something comical. "Climb in," I told her, "I'll be right back."

I left her and went down the sidewalk to where a taxi had parked 20 feet behind the roadster. My glimpse had been of the passenger inside ducking out of our sight. As I lifted a foot to the running board the driver said:

"Busy."

"YEAH, so I see." I stretched my neck to get a better view of Fred Durkin huddled on the seat. So Wolfe was putting a tail on his own client. "I just wanted to save you some trouble. For hundred and four East Thirty-eighth street."

I returned to the roadster and got in and started off, telling Neya that I had merely exchanged the time of day with a Russian nobleman friend of mine who was driving a taxicab for his health. She said nothing. Apparently she was concentrating again on Balkan history, or whatever kind it was she was making. I retaliated by concentrating on my driving.

There was space for me directly in front of 404. It was an old house, one of a row that had been done over into inexpensive flats by blocking off the stairs and sticking in some partitions. Eight steps up to the stoop, then a vestibule with mailboxes and bell buttons, then the door into the narrow hall. It wasn't even necessary for Neya to use her key on the door, because it had stopped an inch short of closing and all I had to do was push it open. I let her go ahead. She led me up two flights of stairs with just enough light to keep you from groping, went to a door toward the front, and opened her bag and started fishing for a key. Then she thought better of that and pushed the button, and I could hear a bell ringing inside. But nothing else was heard, though after an interval she rang the bell again, and then again.

She muttered, "He said she was coming home."

"So he did. Got a key?"

She opened her bag again and this time produced the key. She used it herself, pushed the door open, went in four paces with me on her heels, and stopped in her tracks, jerking her head up and freezing there. Over her shoulder I could see what she saw; the body of a man sprawled on the floor in a very unlikely attitude; and the face, which was the one I had undertaken to alter with my fist two hours previously.

Before I could stop her she jerked her head up higher and yowled into space:

"Carla!"

I SAID, resentfully, "Will you kindly close your trap?"

She didn't move. I got in front of her and took a look at her face. She didn't seem to be preparing for more clamor, so I went and squatted for a quick survey of the corpus. A quick one was enough. I glanced up at her again and saw that she was breathing through her nose. I rocked on my heels for half a minute, gazing at the chinless wonder and using my brain up to capacity. Then I stood up and said:

"The first and worst thing seems to be that I've got that goddam paper in my pocket."

"Sure. That'd be swell."

I walked around a table to get at one of the windows, which fronted on Thirty-eighth street, and opened it and poked my head out, and saw what I hoped to see. I pulled my head in and asked her, "How's your nerve?"

"My nerve's all right."

"See that gray and white taxicab at the curb in the middle of the block?"

"Yes."

"Go down there and you'll find a man inside. Ask him if his name is Fred Durkin and he'll say it is. Tell him I want him up here quick, but no more than that because the driver will hear you. Come back up with him and use your keys. I'll be watching from the window, and if you get an impulse to scoot off——"

"I won't."

Roosevelt, Pius Held Guardians Of Spirituality

Christian Principles Necessary to Peace, Conference Told

Through the intervention of President Roosevelt and Pope Pius XII, spiritual values essential to a permanent world peace will not again be ignored, Michael Francis Doyle, former member of the court of international arbitration at The Hague, told a gathering of Catholic scholars here yesterday.

Doyle, a Philadelphia attorney, who recalled attending all but three assemblies of the League of Nations, blamed failure of the Versailles treaty partially upon peacemakers who overlooked Christian principles.

Minorities Remembered

The fourteenth annual conference of the Catholic Association for International Peace, meeting at the Mayflower Hotel, also heard these statements of principles underlying the European conflict and the future peace for America and the world.

A proposal that a bill of rights for the protection of world minorities be incorporated within provisions of an international organization.

A suggestion that the international organization use the now largely abandoned machinery of the League of Nations with certain techniques borrowed from Clarence Striet's concept of a federated Europe.

A declaration that the "ground is being prepared" in this country for the same clash of interests that have disrupted Europe and that the economic cause of the conflict is "the setup we have inherited from centuries of individualist capitalism."

A suggestion from Msgr. John A. Ryan, D. D., of the social action department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, that the real problem between the rich nations and the "have-nots" is one of reallocation of markets rather than of colonies.

Dr. McMahon Elected

In a business session Dr. John L. McMahon, professor of political science at Catholic University, was elected conference president. Vice presidents chosen were Marie J. Carroll, of Boston; the Rev. Patrick J. Niggins, S. J., Holy Cross College, and Dr. Frank Weberg, College of St. Francis, Joliet, Ill. The Rev. R. A. McGowan, Washington, was named executive secretary, and Edward Gallahue, Washington, treasurer.

Pointing out that the first World War originated in part in minority difficulties between Serbs and Austrians and the present conflict in a dispute about Germans in Poland, Dr. Francis E. McMahon, of Notre Dame University, proposed a bill of rights to enunciate for the world "the principle that no group should be deprived of their natural rights as human beings because of nationality or religion."

"Reconstruction of the social order," declared Dr. Edward S. Lynch, Iowa State University, "here in the United States as well as in other countries, is a prime requisite to the reconstruction of the international order based on justice and charity, through which alone permanent peace can be secured."

He'll Continue To Be Envoy, Cromwell Says

Ottawa, March 26 (AP).—James H. R. Cromwell, returning from a brief visit to his New Jersey home, today declared he had "no other plans than to continue the duties of my office as American minister to Canada."

His statement insisted "the last word" had been said by Secretary Hull in rebuking Cromwell for his Toronto speech expressing sympathy for the Allied cause.

"There isn't any more and I have no further statement to make," said Cromwell who is a rumored candidate for the New Jersey Democratic Senatorial nomination.

300 Persons in Day Tour Patent Office

Some 300 persons took advantage yesterday of the conducted tours being offered by the United States Patent Office in conjunction with the commemoration of the patent system's 150th birthday, April 10.

Tours start at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. from the Fifteenth and E streets entrance of the Commerce Building, and include visits to the Scientific Library and Public Search Room where those interested may see copies of the 2,185,000 patents issued in the lifetime of the bureau.

130 Rotary Daughters To Attend Party Today

More than 130 daughters of Washington Rotarians will assemble at the Willard at 1:30 p. m. today for the first Fathers and Daughters Day program sponsored by the District's Rotary Club.

Also among those hearing Art Brown, Carter Barron and others as entertainers will be a special group of 42 girls, 6 to 12 years old, coming from Hillcrest, a home for underprivileged children.

Msgr. Corrigan To Be Elevated By Cardinal

Archbishop Dougherty To Direct Ceremonies Here on April 2

His eminence, Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia, will be consecrator of the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, as Titular Bishop of Bilta, April 2, in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception on the university campus, it was announced yesterday.

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington and chancellor of the university, and the Most Rev. Edward Mooney, Archbishop of Detroit, will be coconsecrators. The Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, Archbishop of Cincinnati, will preach the sermon at the ceremonies at 10:30 a. m.

Carroll Altar to Be Used

The new bishop will start his mass at the historic Carroll alter, which was used for many years by the Most Rev. John Carroll, the first Catholic bishop in the United States. This simple woden altar will be placed beside the main altar in the crypt of the national shrine.

The Carroll altar will be loaned to the university for the consecration by the Rev. Joseph T. Kennedy, pastor of the Church of St. John the Evangelist at Forest Glen, Md., where it is permanently located.

The Right Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, vice-rector of the university, has appointed the following on the committee to assist with plans:

Joseph M. Murphy, director of the bureau of public relations, secretary to the committee; Dr. Herbert Wright, professor of international law, invitations and tickets, as well as seating of the Diplomatic Corps and Government officials; the Rev. Dr. George B. Stratemeier, chaplain of the university, in charge of seating in the shine; the Rev. Joseph N. La Rue, procurator, arrangements for luncheon in the university dining hall and decoration of buildings; Wilfred D. Howell, of the administration office, checking, transportation and traffic; the Rev. William J. Lallou, master of ceremonies the consecration; Dr. Leo Behrendt, professor of German and director of the choir and glee club, music; Dr. Arthur J. Harriman, registrar, ushers.

Titular bishops have no temporal jurisdiction, it was pointed out, but are given the name of a once-active, now nonfunctioning diocese. Bilta, in northern Africa, is one of these.

Ten Churches Plan Union Services

Six Protestant Denominations Are Represented

Ten Protestant churches of six denominations in Southeast Washington—which last autumn made local religious history by joining forces against juvenile delinquency and other evils—tomorrow will launch another unique community project.

They will unite in services each Thursday for four months, with North Carolina Avenue Methodist Church as the opening host. Programs, scheduled to begin at 8 p. m., will include a devotional period, clergyman's talk, and a panel discussion, when pastors will answer questions.

Religion's relation to everyday problems will be discussed, with Dr. Warren D. Bowman, pastor of the Washington City Church of the Brethren, speaking this week on "Does Jesus Make a Difference in My Home Life?" Churches will alternate as host.

Cooperating congregations, members of the Southeast Interchurch Council, hold their regular individual prayer meetings on other Thursdays, and their pastors, follow:

Christ Episcopal (Navy Yard), the Rev. Edward Gabler; Washington City Church of the Brethren, Dr. Bowman; Fifteenth Street Christian, the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers; Reformation Lutheran, Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder; St. Mark's Episcopal, the Rev. Robert J. Plumb; Metropolitan Presbyterian, Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich and First Trinity, North Carolina Avenue and Wilson Memorial Methodist Churches, led by the Rev. A. F. T. Raum, E. B. Wilcox, Bernard I. Barnes and George H. Bennett, respectively.

The Rev. Mr. Bennett is chairman of the Southeast Council.

The committee for the venture includes Dr. Bowman and the Rev. Mr. Wilcox and the Rev. Mr. Barnes, the last as chairman.

D. C. Store Sales Up 11.1 Per Cent

Sales in Washington department stores increased 11.1 per cent during February over the same period for 1939, according to trade reports of the Fifth Federal Reserve Bank district released yesterday. Washington ranked second to Richmond in the district among 31 stores reporting February gains. Richmond's increase was 12.7 per cent.

Swing Fans Needn't Apologize, Grainger Avers

All Music Is Good, Australian Pianist Declares Here

By Gerald G. Gross

If you like swing music, don't be apologetic about it.

That's the advice of Percy Grainger, the Australian pianist-composer who will be heard with the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall tonight.

"The only thing I don't like is silence," said Grainger, interrupting his seven-hour practice session in the third-floor storeroom of Droop's.

"All music is good. I like some compositions more than others, of course, but to me they're all good. Who is anyone to say dime novels, for example, should not be read? Some people like dime novels, some like the literary classics.

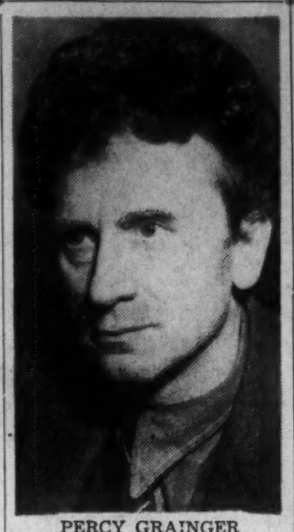
It Has a Fragrance

"Music, writing or what not, if it produces an illusion, has a fragrance—it's art."

Best known, at least in this country, for his popular tune, "Country Gardens," Grainger says his more serious works are hardly ever played by orchestras. But he says it without rancor.

He says American orchestras are more or less boycotting the works of American composers. A couple of years ago, preparing to embark upon a concert tour, he wanted to include George Gershwin's "F Major Concerto" in his program, but the orchestras wouldn't have it.

But he isn't exasperated about that either nor does he allow his blood pressure to rise because "nine-tenths of the world's best music has never been heard and much of what is played is esthetically scandalous."



PERCY GRAINGER

In short, Percy Grainger is one who has the knack of disagreeing most agreeably.

"Sweet Sue" Drifts In

"If you like swing," said the artist, who is in his forty-ninth year as a concert pianist (though he is only 58), "don't be apologetic about it. You know, nine out of ten Pullman conductors who see me writing music as they come up to take my ticket say, 'Now that looks like good music. None of that jazz stuff for me.'

"Why, I'll bet most of them like the stuff that's in the groove. But they think they shouldn't admit it."

Mauretania Runs Panama Canal On Mystery Trip

Balboa, Canal Zone, March 26 (AP).—Heading for a secret mission across the Pacific, Britain's fifth largest liner, the 35,739-ton Mauretania, nosed slowly through the Panama Canal today after an uneventful, 5-day dash down the Atlantic from New York.

The liner, apparently destined for service as a troop transport between Australia and the Near East, entered the canal at 9:45 a. m. E. S. T. and tied up here at 7:00 p. m.

The $20,000,000 Mauretania, capable of carrying an estimated 15,000 soldiers, is on Germany's official list of vessels to be attacked on sight as armed ships, as is the Queen Mary, which followed the Mauretania in leaving New York, but whose whereabouts remain a mystery. She is too large to pass through the canal. If bound for Australia the larger vessel would have to go around Cape Horn or the Cape of Good Hope.

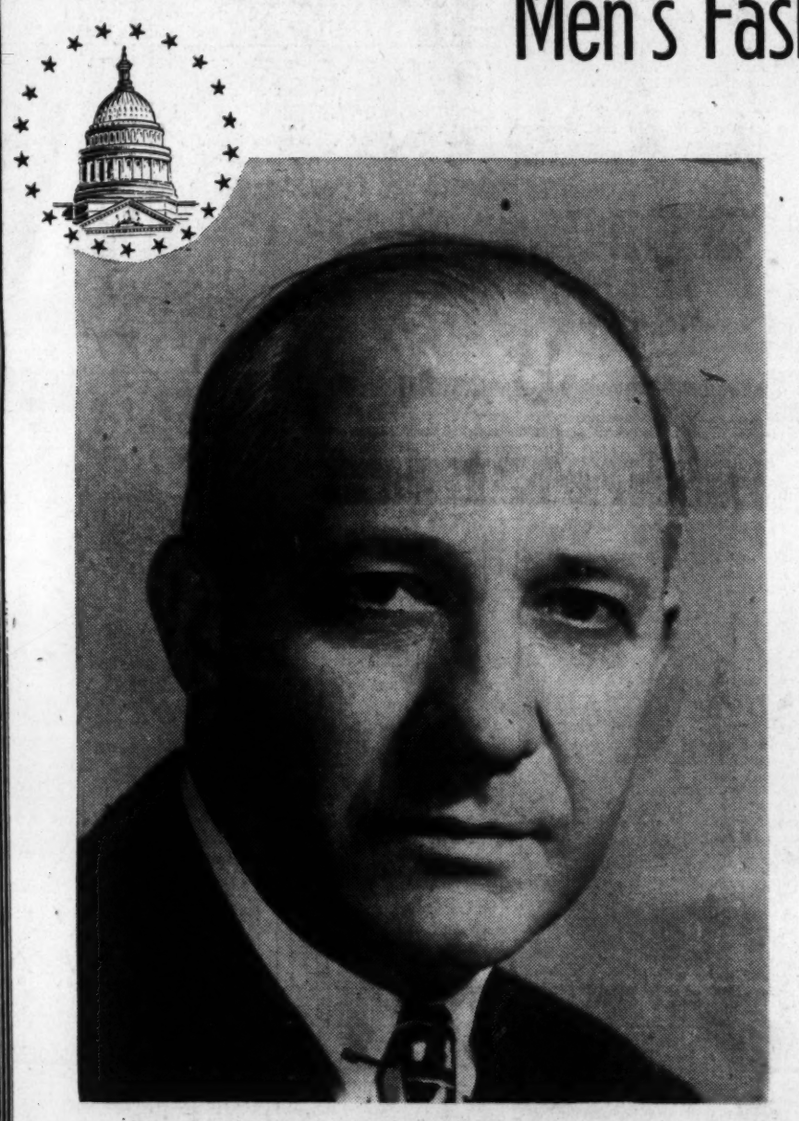
"Specialization Is the Trend in Men's Fashion Retailing"



Wm. J. McCaw, Manager of Men's Clothing of The Hecht Co., has been associated with the firm for 21 years

William J. McCaw
Manager of Men's Clothing, The Hecht Co.

"Just as there is specialization in medicine, in law and in science, so is there specialization in the men's departments of The Hecht Co. We have individual buyers in furnishings, clothing, sportswear, shoes and hats. Each of these men is a student of fashions. Their entire time is devoted to the merchandise they buy. They are up in New York and other fashion and manufacturing centers on the average of three and four times a month. Interesting, too, is the fact that because our men's Buyers are such specialists in their field and so close to the public, they are called upon by many of the nationally known style centers to aid them in designing and specifying certain styles for the American male.

"Although each of The Hecht Co.'s men's departments has its own Buyer, the entire group functions as a single, well oiled unit. Group meetings are held several times a week to tell our salesmen what's new in the fashion world. Because of this close association between the men's divisions, each salesman is an authority on the newest fashions and colors.

"During the coming 44th Anniversary we cordially invite you to consult with our specialists in these men's departments. They will be glad to serve you in a friendly, courteous manner."
